Neither a notice to show cause nor a preliminary inquiry is indispensable and the person proceeded against cannot complain of the want of such inquiry, 13 C.W.N. 691; 20 C. 474; 5 C.W.N. 295; 26 M.L.J. 436; 34 A. 267. Although notice to the persons proceeded against is not essential under this section, it is highly desirable that it should be so given and the High Court looks with disfavour upon an order passed without notice, 23 Cr. L.J. 438=77 Ind. Cas. 889; 6 A. 98; 20 Cr. L.J. 777. Notice to the accused is not as a matter of law necessary, yet where the prosecution has been ordered on the evidence of a witness when the petitioner has no opportunity to cross-examine and whose evidence has thus not been tested, it is materially irregular to exercise powers under this section and direct a criminal prosecution without giving the person proceeded against a chance to know and meet the case against him, 44 M.L.J. 74, followed in 23 Cr. L.J. 227 (2)=93 Ind. Cas. 1027 (2); 11 M.L.T. 191=1912 M.W.N. 400=13 Cr. L.J. 144=13 Ind. Cas. 832. The preliminary inquiry is to be held by the Court itself, 23 Cr. L.J. 985=103 Ind. Cas. 810. A complaint is in no sense invalid merely because the person accused had no opportunity of showing cause against the complaint being made. It is a question of discretion whether the Court should hold a preliminary inquiry when held before making a complaint in writing, 30 Cr. L.J. 545=115 Ind. Cas. 882. In initiating proceedings under this section, the Court is not restricted to the evidence recorded at the original trial. It has inherent power to take such steps as may be necessary to discharge its duty imposed on it by law. The wording of the section "such preliminary inquiry, as it thinks fit" makes the position clear, 23 Cr. L.J. 15=73 Ind. Cas. 703. When the incident in respect of which a complaint is made took place outside the Court the Judge ought to have held a preliminary inquiry to enable him to determine whether there was any case fit to be sent to the Magistrate, 21 C.W.N. 125. Where the identity of the offender is uncertain a preliminary inquiry ought to be held, 23 C. 532; 20 C. 474 and 349. There is no provision in the section as to the manner in which evidence is to be recorded in such preliminary inquiry. A summary of the statement should be made, 42 C. 240. The nature of the preliminary inquiry is a matter for the discretion of the Court. The law does not compel a detailed inquiry. The grant of a right of appeal under S. 476B, infra, has not conferred any new right and the extent of the preliminary inquiry is still left to the discretion of the Court, 4 Pat. 434. What a Court has to decide is (1) whether an offence specified in S. 195 (1), (b) & (c) supra, appears to have been committed; (2) whether it is expedient in the interests of justice that it should be further inquired into. To arrive at a decision, the Court may, hold such preliminary inquiry as it thinks necessary. The nature, method and extent of the inquiry are entirely at its discretion. The inquiry is to satisfy the Court merely that an offence appears to have been committed. It cannot be held, that the law intended that a Court which has complete discretion, to refuse to hold an inquiry at all, must, if it holds one, issue notice to the party, and give him the equivalent of a full-dress trial. The inquiry that many of the rulings prescribe, seems to go far beyond the essential requirements of the section. The preliminary inquiry under this section should be of a nature merely to satisfy the Court that an offence appears to have been committed. Nothing more is necessary and a long discussion of a decision on the merits is as undesirable as it is unnecessary, 50 M. 660 where 34 A. 267 is followed and 6 Pat. L.J. 145 and 41 M.L.J. 74 are not followed; see also 15 A. 392; 26 A. 249; 4 Pat. 484; 10 M. 232; 8 A.L.J. 237; 10 A.L.J. 247; 21 Cr. L.J. 158=54 Ind. Cas. 686; 23 Cr. L.J. 438=77 Ind. Cas. 888; 23 Cr. L.J. 15=73 Ind. Cas. 703 as to necessity for a preliminary inquiry.

Record a finding to that effect.—Namely that in his opinion a prosecution is necessary in the interests of justice. This section requires that the Court shall record a finding that in the circumstances an inquiry into the offence should be made and a complaint on those terms signed by the presiding officer should be filed. A note in the margin of the application to the effect 'write to the District Magistrate about the matter and ask him to proceed under S. 476' is not a complaint within this section; 45 C.L.J. 40=28 Cr. L.J. 840=104 Ind. Cas. 436. This section merely says that the Court should record a finding. It does not state that such a finding should be supported by reasons or that it should contain issue for decision but the Court will be well advised to give some reasons for its order. The order passed without recording reason for its finding cannot be set aside merely on that ground, 27 Cr. L.J. 1239=98 Ind. Cas. 87. To prosecute a person for perjury because he has given evidence which is contradictory, merely on the basis of that contradiction is a very doubtful procedure. The Judge taking action under this section should record a finding to the effect that it is expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry should be made. When such a finding is not recorded it cannot be presumed that the Judge properly considered the matter and came to a right conclusion. From the mere existence of a contradiction in the evidence it cannot be held that an inquiry should be made in the interests of justice, 55 C. 1312 at 1314. Where the order passed showed that in the opinion of the Judge, the person proceeded against had given false evidence before him, that order by itself and in view of the proceedings started under this section carries the imputation that the Judge must have felt that the ends of justice required an inquiry into the alleged offence before a Magistrate should take place although he has not recorded an express finding, 55 C. 279. Omission to record a finding vitiates the whole proceedings. The defect cannot be cured by an argumentative complaint sent by the Judge to the Magistrate, 28 L.W. 774=1928 M.W.N. 229=30 Cr. L.J. 370=114 Ind. Cas. 834. See also 30 Cr. L.J. 221=113 Ind. Cas. 842. The finding recorded by the Court that an offence or offences have been committed by the person to be proceeded against, and it is not sufficient to record a finding of two alternative offences which are mutually inconsistent, 28 Cr. L.J. 888=104 Ind. Cas. 904. The Court has not only to consider whether there is a prima facie case but also whether it is expedient in the interests of justice to file a complaint of Court, 30 Cr. L.J. 666 at 667=116 Ind. Cas. 711.

Make a complaint thereof in writing signed by the presiding officer.— For a definition of complaint see S. 4 (1) (h) supra. Before the amendment of 1923, it was held by the various High Courts, that action under this section should be taken at or immediately after the conclusion of the proceedings, before the matter had left the ken of the Court. Otherwise the proceedings taken were held to be without jurisdiction, 32 M. 49 (F.B.); 31 M. 150 (F.B.); 34 C. 551 (F.B.); 40 C. 444; 37 C. 632 (F.B.). The changes made by the amendment in this section and by the enactment of two new Ss. 476A and 476B are significant. Under the present section it is not only the Court in which the offence was committed, but also the Court which hears an appeal from that Court which is entitled to proceed under this section and a party also is entitled to move the Court to take action under this section. The new S. 476B, provides an appeal both against a complaint made under this section as well as against an order refusing to lay a complaint. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to within what time a complaint should be made under this section. If a Court disposes of a case, on the last working day of a term, and initiate proceedings under this section on the first day of the re-opening after the long vacation it cannot be said that the Court acts with undue delay, 22 L.W. 863=27 Cr. L.J. 280=92 Ind. Cas. 456. The power under this section may also be exercised now by any Judge of the Court concerned and not only by the Judge who tried the case, 3 Ran. 48; 1 Ran. 372. By the amendment made by S. 6 of Act II of 1925, it is enacted that where the Court making the complaint is a High Court, the complaint may be signed by such officer as the Court may appoint. A letter to the District Magistrate in which all the facts were stated and concluded by soliciting orders in the case was held not to amount to a complaint within this section, 40 A. 641; 12 A.L.J. 881. The fact that the presiding officer of the Court instead of making a formal complaint of Court merely directed a copy of his proceedings to be sent to the District Magistrate for necessary action will not vitiate the proceedings as the defect is merely formal, 3 Ran. 48. The Court is to hold such inquiry that its order when sent up to the Magistrate will amount to a complaint under S. 200, supra. For that purpose the complaining Court must decide upon and name the witnesses to be examined by the Magistrate or the complaint is liable to be dismissed on the ground that there are no witnesses. The complaining Court should not leave to the Magistrate to inquire for himself and find out who the witnesses may be. In cases falling under S. 193, I.P.C., giving false evidence, it should be stated what is the false evidence given by the person sought to be proceeded against and it is not for the Magistrate to fish about in order to find out what statements the lower Court may have considered to be false. The complaint itself must make that clear, 43 M. 393 at 400.

Forward it to a Magistrate of the First Class having Jurisdiction.—The words before the amendment were "send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest Magistrate of the first class" and difficulty was felt in construing the word "nearest." It was held that the case must be sent to the nearest First-Class Magistrate irrespective of local jurisdiction, 43 B. 300; Weir II, 390. To meet this difficulty the amendment has been made now. The complaint is to be forwarded to the Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction, i.e., territorial jurisdiction over the place where the offence was committed. S. 177, supra, enacts that every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed. Provision is also made for securing the attendance of the accused and the witnesses and the accused are to be sent up to the Magistrate only in non-bailable offences. To meet the objection that a Presidency Magistrate was not included in the term "First-class Magistrate" it was specially enacted that a Chief Presidency Magistrate shall be deemed to be a First-class Magistrate, but no provision was made for the Chief Presidency Magistrate to take action under this section and S. 6 of Act II of 1926 supplied this omission by omitting the word 'Chief.' The rulings in 9 Bom. L.R. 1160; 3 C.L.J. 357 are no longer law. The amendment obviates the difficulty felt by the Madras High Court when acting under the section in having to send the case to Saidapet and not to a Presidency Magistrate in the city. The complaint can now be made to any Presidency Magistrate.

Proviso to Sub-section (1).—This has been newly added by Act II of 1926, S. 6. on account of the serious inconvenience felt by Judges of the High Court. The remarks that Shadi Lal, C.J., in 6 Lah. 34 at 40 are to this effect. 'Under the new law the Court has no alternative but to prefer a complaint in writingand this procedure in its application to the High Court is open to serious objections. It is hardly consistent with the dignity of a Judge of a High Court that he should have to make and sign a complaint that is to be inquired into by one of his subordinates and that he should be treated and recorded as a complainant throughout the proceedings nor is it fair to the accused that he should be arraigned in a case instituted on a complaint made by a Judge of the highest tribunal and be tried by a judicial officer subordinate to the complainant.....thus giving rise to a reasonable apprehension that his conviction is a foregone conclusion.'

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section lays down the procedure to be followed on receipt of the complaint made in writing by the presiding officer under his signature. The proviso (as) to S. 200, supra, in unmistakable terms says that when such a complaint is made nothing in that section shall be deemed to require the examination of the complainant. The proviso is expressly made to obviate the difficulty and inconvenience of presiding officers of Courts and Public Servants acting as such in the discharge of official duties from appearing before Magistrates to give sworn statements like ordinary complainants. See 6 Lah. 34 at 40. The Magistrate on receiving a complaint is under this sub-section to proceed exactly as on receiving a complaint under S. 200, supra, that is normally, he will issue summons to the accused and in exceptional cases he will act under S. 202, supra, record reasons in writing for postponing the issue of process and make an inquiry or direct a Magisterial or police inquiry or investigation, 30 Cr. L.J. 545=115 Ind. Cas. 882. It is doubtful whether a Magistrate will be entitled to dismiss a complaint of Court under S. 202, supra, like a complaint made by a private party. See 21 Cr. L.J. 310=55 Ind. Cas. 470. Where it was held that there was no room for a preliminary inquiry the opinion of the Court is a judicial opinion founded on evidence. It is not necessary that the Court making a complaint under this section should state under what section of the statute the offence falls and a failure to specify the section does not render the complaint illegal, 26 Cr. L.J. 1115=88 Ind. Cas. 283.

Shall thereupon proceed according to Law.—The Magistrate is bound to proceed with the investigation of the complaint made to him by a Civil Court under this section; the words "shall thereupon proceed according to law" are imperative and confer jurisdiction on the Magistrate, 25 B. 785. The Magistrate is bound to proceed under Chapters

Shall thereupon proceed according to Law.—The Magistrate is bound to proceed with the investigation of the complaint made to him by a Civil Court under this section; the words "shall thereupon proceed according to law" are imperative and confer dictation on the Magistrate, 26 B. 785. The Magistrate is bound to proceed under XVIII, XX and XXI with the investigation but he is not bound to proceed to record evidence and convict the accused in every case. Where the matter imputed to the accused does not in the opinion of the Magistrate constitute an offence it will be right and proper to discharge the accused. He cannot return the case to the Court which sent it to him nor can the Court once it has made a complaint of Court commit the accused to the Court of Session, 12 W.R. (Cr.) 41. He cannot order an investigation under S. 202, supra, 21 Cr. L.J. 310=53 Ind. Cas. 470, but is competent to discharge the accused, 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 41, but when a Magistrate after taking cognizance of an offence under S. 471 I.P.C., discharged the accused on the ground that civil suit subsequently filed by the accused on the basis of the document was dismissed and the complaint of the civil Court was necessary before he could proceed further it was held that the order of discharge was illegal and the prosecution could proceed without any complaint of the civil Court, 55 C. 1031 where 43 C. 1002 is distinguished and 43 M. 928 referred. He cannot order compensation when dismissing the complaint, 14 Bom. L.R. 1166; he has no jurisdiction to question the validity of the initiation of proceedings, 26 B. 785; 13 B. 109; 26 A. 514.

Sub-section (3).—Power is expressly given now at any stage to adjourn the hearing of the case until the appeal preferred against the decision arrived at in the judicial proceeding out of which the matter of the complaint has arisen is decided. Before the amendment the power to adjourn the case and to stay proceedings before the Magistrate rested on judicial decisions like, 20 C.W.N. 1116; 16 B. 729; 34 C. 843; 30 M. 226; 13 C.W.N. 398; 14 Bom. L.R. 969; 23 C. 532; 5 C.L.J. 233; 16 A. 80; 43 A. 180; 1905 A.W.N. 254.

May it be thought fit.—This gives a discretion to the Magistrate to stay proceedings until the disposal of the appeal if he thinks that it is expedient in the interests of justice. It would be a dangerous doctrine to lay down any hard and fast rule to the effect that a criminal trial or inquiry should of necessity be stayed simply because a civil suit (or appeal) is pending, 13 C.W.N. 398; 34 C. 843; 43 A. 180. In each case the Court is to exercise a judicial discretion in granting a stay of proceedings. See 48 C.L.J. 40=23 Cr. L.J. 840=104 Ind. Cas. 458.

from by all the other High Courts and doubted the Patna High Court, see 8 Pat. 428. There is no right of appeal when the Court acts suo motu and not on the application of some party. The language of the section also supports this view and also under the old Code when the Court acted suo motu there was no appeal provided against, such orders under this section whether action was taken suo motu by the Court or at the instance of a private party, the idea being that there can be no appeal from the lodging of a complaint, 30 Cr. L.J. 163=113 Ind. Cas. 537. The words "whether on application made to it or otherwise" in S. 476 also suggests that an appeal may not lie when the Court acts suo motu. When an appeal lies against an order under this section it is not open to the person proceeded against to question the validity of the order before the Magistrate or Judge who takes cognizance of the case in the complaint of Court at the trial exercising his right of appeal specially conferred now, 49 C.L.J. 193 at 195=30 Cr. L.J. 656=116 Ind. Cas. 632.

Further inquiry.—Where action is taken under this section by lodging a complaint of Court in writing before a Magistrate, and the Magistrate discharges the accused, it is open to a private party to move the Sessions Judge to revise the order of discharge and direct a further inquiry into the case. In every case somebody must bring to the notice of the superior Court, the order of discharge, as it cannot be supposed that it is aware of all the orders of discharge passed by Magistrates within its jurisdiction and there is nothing in the Code to limit the persons who can bring the matter to the notice of the superior Courts. The words used in S. 436, supra, are "on examining any record under S. 435, or otherwise," 49 A. 230. The discharge or acquittal of an accused person for want of a complaint of Court under this section by the officer competent to prefer such a complaint will not debar a subsequent trial of the accused for the same offence with the complaint of Court in writing by such officer, 52 B. 257, where 40 B. 97; 37 A. 107 are followed and 36 M. 308 not followed.

476A. The power conferred on Civil, Revenue and Criminal Courts by section 476, sub-section (1), may be exercised, in respect of any offence referred to therein and alleged to have been committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any such Court, by the Court to which such former Court is subordinate within the meaning of section 195, sub-section (3), in any case in which such former Court has neither made a complaint under section 476 in respect of such offence nor rejected an application for the making of such complaint; and, where the superior Court makes such complaint, the provisions of section 476 shall apply accordingly.

The newly amended S. 476, this section and 476B have taken the place of the old Ss. 19 and 476. When a Subordinate Judge allowed the proceedings under S. 195 to be dropped without passing any order of rejection it is quite open to the District Magistrate to instruct the Public Prosecutor to move the District Court to take action under S. 476A, 4 Pat. 23 at 31. This section is new and makes provision where a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court has omitted to complain. In such a case a superior Court is empowered to act under S. 476, supra, and make a complaint of Court. S. 476, supra, deals with the procedure to be adopted in cases referred to in S. 195 (1) (b) or (c) supra, by a Court with regard to offences which appear to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court and this section confers certain powers upon a superior Court where the subordinate Court has omitted to take action. The scheme of the section is that if the subordinate Court has neither made a complaint nor rejected an application for the making of a complaint then the superior Court may take action and make a complaint in respect of such offence. This section does not apply to a case where the subordinate Court rejected an application made to it for making a complaint and in such a case the next section alone will apply, 52 C. 1009. Under this section the superior Court has jurisdiction to interfere and file a complaint only in two contingencies (a) the lower Court has not made a complaint under S. 476, supra, (b) that it has not rejected an application to make such a complaint. The section is never intended to apply to the case of a Court not invoking a power which it never had power to invoke. Where before the amendment the subordinate Court had granted sanction under S. 195 for the prosecution, but such sanction had lapsed by the passing of the amended code, the remedy of the party is to move the subordinate court to prefer complaint of Court under S. 476 as amended and not to move the superior Court under this section to make a complaint, 23 A L J. 815=26 Cr. L J. 1126=88 Ind. Cas 353. This section applies only to cases where the subordinate Court has neither made a complaint suo motu nor rejected an application by a party for making such a complaint and a complaint of Court made by an appellate Court on appeal under S. 476B is not a complaint contemplated by S. 476, supra, even though the provisions of that section are made applicable to it by the former section 51 M. 777. The word 'rejected' in this section means rejected after consideration of the merits. This section empowers the superior Court to take action when the lower Court has not taken action at all or when the lower Court has not rejected an application made to it to take action. This seems to show that the superior Court cannot take action when either the lower Court has not taken action or after considering the matter before it has rejected an application to take action under S. 476, supra. When an application presented for proper action has been withdrawn without a consideration on the merits, it cannot be said that the application for purposes of this section is rejected, 52 B. 768.

476B. Any person on whose application any Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court has refused to make a complaint under section 476 or section 476A, or against whom such a complaint has been made, may appeal to the Court to which such former Court is subordinate within the meaning of section 195, sub-section (3), and the superior Court may thereupon after notice to the parties concerned direct the withdrawal of the complaint or, as the case may be, itself make the complaint which the subordinate Court might have made under section 476, and if it makes such complaint the provisions of that section shall apply accordingly.

Scope of the section.—This section is new and has been enacted in the place of the original sub-section (6) of S. 195, supra, which gave the appellate Court the power of reversing an order granting sanction or an order by a Court instituting a complaint. S. 195, (5) itself provides for a remedy in cases where a complaint in writing is filed by a public servant under S. 195 (1) (a), viz., the superior public servant is authorised to direct a withdrawal of such complaint, 28 Cr. L.J. 547=102 Ind. Cas. 433. It provides an appeal where a Civil Revenue or Criminal Court refuses to make a complaint of Court on the application of any person or makes a complaint against a person under S. 476, supra. The section gives a right of appeal not only to the person against whom the complaint of Court has been made but also to the person whose application to the Court for making a complaint of Court has been rejected, but this section does not give a right of appeal to a person against whom the Court suo motu files a complaint and not on the application of some party. The word 'such complaint' occurring in this section means a complaint made on an application and not any complaint by Court under S. 476 or S. 476A, supra. Having regard to the genesis of the section this interpretation seems to be correct. In the old Code there was no provision for an appeal against an order under this section to the person against whom a complaint was filed, the principle being that there can be no appeal if any person chooses to lodge a complaint whether he be a private individual or a Court, i.e., there can be no appeal against the act of lodging a complaint, 30 Cr. L.J. 163=113 Ind. Cas. 537. The words of S. 476 supra to the effect "whether on application made to it or otherwise" seem clearly to support this view. If the Subordinate Court has neither made a complaint nor rejected an application then this section cannot apply and under S. 476A, supra, the superior Court is empowered to take action and make a complaint of Court. Where the Subordinate Court has rejected the application for making such complaint of Court then the procedure contemplated by the Code is by way of an appeal to the superior Court under this section, 52 C. 1009. Where the trial Court which had the advantage of seeing the witness in the box and was cognizant of the full facts in connection with the case in which the witness was examined did not think it right to make a complaint of Court against the witness for giving false evidence, the appellate Court should have been chary in taking a different view unless a case was clearly made out for the prosecution of the witness, 21 Cr. L.J. 500 at 502=56 Ind. Cas. 660. S. 195 (3) specified the Court to which such appeals are to be preferred. The superior Court may thereupon give notice to the parties concerned and either direct the withdrawal of the complaint made by the inferior Court or make the complaint which the inferior Court might have made but had refused to make. By this section the Legislature intended that the appellate Court in cases of appeals under this section should reconsider the entire matter on the merits and while allowing reasonable weight to the opinion of the Court below, should nevertheless reconsider the question of the propriety of the order appealed against upon a complete review of the entire facts. If the appellate Court is not satisfied that a prima facie case has been made out, the order appealed against must be set aside. The words occurring in S. 476, supra, "offence which appears to have been committed" seems to have been used to mean that the facts before the Court unless rebutted show that an offence has been committed, 23 A.L.J. 515=28 Cr. L.J. 1126=88 Ind. Cas. 338. This section gives a right of appeal to a person against whom a complaint is made. It implies that an appeal is to be preferred to the superior Court. See 55 C. 932, following the appellate Court's order and not contemplate that any great interval should elapse between the passing of a formal order directing a complaint to be made and the actual making of the same and therefore an appeal is allowed not from the finding of the Court that a complaint should be made but from the making of the complaint. The view is further supported by the wording of S. 476 which provides that the Courts after making such preliminary inquiry, if any, as it thinks necessary, may record a finding that it is expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry should be made into an offence referred to in S. 195 (1) (i) and (c) and make a complaint thereof in writing. The person against whom such a finding is recorded is affected by it only when a complaint is actually made. So time for appeals begins to run from the date on which the complaint is made and not from the date of the order directing a complaint to be drawn up, 7 Lah. 77; 58 C. 322, following 7 Lah. 77 and 52 B. 164; see also 32 C. 1009 and 53 C. 327. No second appeal lies to the High Court, 51 M. 777; 6 Lah. 36; 5 Ran. 523; 55 C. 835 and 763; 43 B. 401.

An appeal is provided herein and without exercising that right of appeal, it is not open to a person against whom a complaint of Court is made to question the validity of the complaint before the trial Court. The Code requires certain proceedings shall not be instituted unless there is a complaint and whether there is a valid complaint is a question which can only be agitated in the manner provided in this section, 49 C.L.J. 193 at 195. An appeal under the Code is given by this section and this being an application of a criminal nature it would not be proper for the appellate Court to extend the time given for the appeal even if the delay arises in consequence of any genuine mistake which could have been averted by a proper inquiry. Under the Code no application for revision lies in cases in which an appeal lies and therefore it is impossible for the appellant to invoke the High Court's revisional jurisdiction before exhausting his remedy by way of appeal. When the complaint of Court is filed by a civil Court the power of the High Court under S. 115, C.P.C., cannot be invoked without first exhausting the remedy by way of appeal. This particular jurisdiction of taking action under S. 476, supra, is given to the civil Court by the Criminal Procedure Code only and it is in the exercise of that criminal jurisdiction the civil Court is acting for a particular purpose. "Any error therefore committed by a Civil Court in exercising special jurisdiction so conferred must be corrected if at all by the machinery provided by the statute conferring jurisdiction, i.e., by the Criminal Procedure Code, 27 Cr. L.J. 780—93 Ind. Cas. 316 but this view is not accepted in 26 M. 129; 26 A. 243 (F.B.); 37 C. 714. See notes under the heading 'revision' at p. 858. The words of the section indicate clearly that the Court to which appeals lie, if a civil Court makes an order, is the authority or tribunal to which such Court is subordinate. Where an order is made by a District Munsif hearing a Civil suit, the appeal lay to the District Judge. Although the appeal is one allowed by this Code it must be heard by the District Judge exercising Civil appellate jurisdiction and the procedure governing an appeal of this description is one which has to be sought for in the four corners of the Civil Procedure Code the provisions of which are applicable. Therefore a District Judge is empowered to dismiss an appeal for default of appearance of the appellant and his pleader and there is no illegality in such dismissal, 53 C. 327. This section gives a right of appeal to a private person; the words are 'any person on whose application a Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court has refused to make a complaint, may appeal, etc.' The language does not indicate that any legal representative of a deceased applicant may appeal or support it on his death, 47 A. 359; see 45 M. 83. Art. 154, II Sch. to the Limitation Act, governs such appeals and time taken for obtaining copy of the order can be deducted, 47 A. 462. Article 155 applies to appeals to the High Court, 24 A.L.J. 383—93 Ind. Cas. 351.

Any person on whose application the Court has refused to make a complaint or against whom such a complaint has been made.—The word 'application' occurring herein is very significant and clearly indicates the circumstances under which an appeal is allowed under this section. Application must be distinguished from what the Court does suo motu. The language of the section suggests that there is no right of appeal in all cases where complaints of Court are made. The recent decision of the Lahore High Court reported in 30 Cr. L.J. 163—113 Ind. Cas. 537, supports this view. There a District

Magistrate who enquired into a complaint of rape made by a woman found the complaint to be false and at his own instance filed complaints of Court against the complainant and her witnesses under S. 211, I.P.C., on appeals to the Sessions Judge, dismissed the appeals holding that no appeal lay to him as the complaint was made suo motu by the Court and the High Court when moved in revision accepted the view of the Sessions Judge observing thus "The learned Counsel, for petitioners contends that the words 'such Complaint' refer to the previous words a complaint under S. 476 or S. 476A' while the Counsel for the Crown contends that 'such a complaint means a complaint made on an application. Having regard to the genesis of the section, the latter interpretation is correct. S. 476 of the old Code, gave no right of appeal to a person against whom a Court filed a complaint at its own instance the principle being that there can be no appeal if any person chooses to lodge a complaint whether that person be a private individual or a Court, that is to say, there can be no appeal against the act of lodging of a complaint." The words of S. 476 "whether on application made to it or otherwise" also clearly seem to support this view.

May appeal to the Court to which such Court is subordinate within S. 195 (3).—Sub-section (3) of S. 195 indicates the Court to which the Court making the complaint should be deemed to be subordinate. A Court should be deemed subordinate to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from its appealable decrees or sentences. See notes under S. 195 at pp. 356-358. The policy of law as laid down in this section is that whenever there is a decision by a Court upon an application that a complaint shall be made whether that decision be one way or another, there is one appeal from it and no more than one appeal. It matters nothing whatever what the result of the appeal may be. If any particular person is for the first time ordered to be prosecuted by the superior Court, his remedy after that is to take his defence before a Jury or a Magistrate according to the nature of the offence. Two Courts and only two are to deal with this preliminary question, as to whether a person shall be prosecuted or not. If the second Court is against the person to be prosecuted, he must look to the Jury for his safety, 55 C. 765, followed in 30 Cr. L. J. 658=116 Ind. Cas. 63g; see also 55 C. 836. The policy of the Legislature seems to allow only one appeal against orders that may be passed under S. 476 supra and not to allow an appeal and a second appeal against such orders, 51 M. 777. This section does not provide for a second appeal from an order passed by a superior Court 5 Ran. 523 following 48 B. 401 and 6 Lah. 56 and dissenting from, 6 Pat. 262 which took the view that a second appeal lay. See also 4 Luck. 155; see also 49 C. L. J. 342 and 47 C. L. J. 277 which took the same view as in 55 C. 765. See also 30 Cr. L. J. 382=115 Ind. Cas. 812. Although no second appeal lay, the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction may set aside the order making the complaint of Court, 55 C. 836; See also 52 C. 1009. See also 30 Cr. L. J. 382=115 Ind. Cas. 812. This section gives a right of appeal only when a Court has made or refused to make a complaint under S. 476 or 476A supra and neither if these sections relate to a complaint made by Court on appeal from an order made by a subordinate Court refusing to make a complaint. From such an order no appeal lies, 6 Lah. 56. Ordinarily appeals lie from a single Judge of the High Court to a Division Bench but the language of this section and S. 195 (3) contemplates two Courts so far as the High Court is concerned. Both a Judge sitting singly and a Division Bench exercise the Jurisdiction of the same Court, though one exercises original and the other appellate jurisdiction of the same Court. It would be entirely contrary to the spirit of the Act to hold by reason of this, that S. 195 (3) and this section are inapplicable. The definition of subordination is an arbitrary or conventional one intended to meet all cases. In 45 M. 528 (F.B.), it was held before the amendment of the Code in 1923 that appeals ordinarily lie from a single Judge to the Division Bench of the Court against sanction orders and in 43 B. 270 it was held that an appeal lay to the Division Bench from an order by a single Judge of the original side granting or refusing sanction to prosecute before the amendment of the Code. Following these decisions it was held in 56 C. 923 that an appeal lay to the Division Bench of the High Court from an order of a single Judge on the original side making a complaint of Court under S. 476, supra. Where the Chief Judge of the Presidency Court of Small Causes makes a complaint of Court under S. 476, supra, it has been held that an appeal lay from such order to the appellate side of the High Court and not to the Full Bench of the Court of Small Causes or to the original side of the High Court, 43 M. 395 where 34 B. 316 is followed, see notes under S. 195 at p. 358. It is submitted that due weight has not been attached to the words "ordinary original civil jurisdiction" occurring in S. 195 (3) when holding that the appeal lay to the appellate side and not to the original side of the High Court. Where a District Munsif invested with Small Cause powers makes a complaint of Court, an appeal lies from such order to the District Court and not to a subordinate Judge, 27 Cr. L.J. 83=91 Ind. Cas. 387. Where a complaint of Court is filed by a District Munsif an appeal lies under this section to the District Court and Civil Procedure Code governs such an appeal 53 C. 827, see 8 Pat. 428. Where certain Election Commissioners purported to act under S. 476, supra, professing to be a Civil Court and assumed jurisdiction, an appeal will lie even though the Commissioner acted within jurisdiction and the High Court entertained the appeal, and set aside the order of the Election Commissioners, 47 A. 935 where 13 A. 575; 12 A.L.J. 1113; 45 A. 669; 16 Cr. L.J. 77; 24 C.L.J. 235 and 45 C. 926 are referred to Articles 150, 154, 157 and 158 of Sch. II to the Indian Limitation Act, IX of 1908 are obviously meant to cover all orders under the Code from which an appeal lies. The period of limitation for an appeal under this section under Art. 154 when the order under S. 476, supra, is completed or supplemented, i.e., from the date when the complaint is actually made. Till the filing of the complaint the order for purposes of this section is incomplete, 52 B. 164 at 167, following 7 Lah 77; 56 C. 932, following 53 C 827; 44 C. 804; 52 C. 1009; 7 Lah 77 and 52 B 164; 29 Cr. L.J. 72=106 Ind Cas 585. An appeal under this section to the High Court from an order of the District Court is governed by Art. 155 and Art. 156 Sch. II to the Limitation Act, being an appeal under this Code and must be preferred within 60 days of the order appealed against, 46 C.L.J. 40=28 Cr. L.J. 640=104 Ind. Cas 456. The article of the Limitation Act applicable to appeals to Courts other than the High Court under this section is Art 154 of Sch II of the Act, vis., thirty days from the date of the order appealed against, 29 C.W.N. 1035=42 C.L.J. 120, and the party can avail himself of S 12 of the Limitation Act which permits of the time taken for obtaining a copy of the order appealed against, 47 A. 452. Where the superior Court entertained an appeal after the expiry of the thirty days holding that there was no rule of limitation applicable to a case of this kind, an offence against the administration of justice and instituted a complaint of Court after setting aside the order of the first Court the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction set aside the appellate order, 52 C. 1009. An appeal under this Code must be disposed of by the appellate Court like any other appeal under the Code mere concurrence with the order of the lower Court is not sufficient for disposing of the appeal, 33 C.W.N. 945. The appellate Court cannot remand the case to the lower Court for the submission of fresh complaint nor can the appellate Court take additional evidence and dispose of the appeal acting on such evidence. The provisions of S. 428, supra, do not apply to appeals under this section, 51 M 603; 55 C 1277 nor can the appeal be summarily dealt with by the appellate Court, 51 C 335 but it was held in 39 C.L.J. 375, referring to 55 C. 1277 and 31 C.W.N. 281 that an appellate Court has jurisdiction under this section to remand a case to the lower Court directing it to specify the sections of the I.P.C., and such an order not objected to by the party, he cannot be heard to question the procedure at any subsequent stage. Where a District Magistrate filed a complaint of Court against certain persons for perjury and on appeal under this section, the appellate Court while holding that the particular statement assigned was not proper but substituted another statement as the subject-matter of the complaint, it was held that the procedure was valid as the action of the appellate Court amounted to the setting aside the order of the lower Court and the filing of a fresh complaint for a different offence of the same nature, 29 Cr. L.J. 795=111 Ind. Cas. 122. When a private party moves the Court to take action under S. 476, supra, and the Court rejects the application and after filing an appeal under this section he dies, the right to carry on the appeal does not survive to his legal representative or to anybody else, 47 A. 359. In an appeal against an order refusing to make a complaint of Court the party entitled to receive notice of appeal will be the person sought to be proceeded against. But if the appeal is by the person against whom a complaint of Court has been filed the opposite party as in all other cases is the Crown and not the person who moved the Court to make a complaint of Court, 29 Cr. L.J. 72=106 Ind. Cas. 585, following 8 Lah 563.

If it makes a Complaint the Provisions of S. 476, shall apply.—If the superior Court makes a complaint the provisions of S. 476, supra, shall apply to such complaint. This is quite clear and necessary. The accused can be sent in custody to Magistrate and the superior Court can bind over any person to give evidence before the Magistrate and the Magistrate must proceed according to law. But all these are quite different from saying that this section must apply over again and give a right of appeal on more to the High Court against the order of the lower Court, 85 C. 765.

Revision.—No further appeal lies to the High Court against the appellate order under this section and as a general rule it is undesirable that the High Court should interfere in revision with an appellate order refusing to withdraw a complaint of Court while it is in the discretion of the lower Court, 7 Lab. 108. The High Court will not interfere except perhaps under very extraordinary circumstances as the question whether a complaint of Court should be made or not is almost invariably a matter of discretion and if the lower Court thinks that there should be no complaint of Court it would be undesirable that the High Court should interfere, 38 B. 301. See also 37 A. 362, where the High Court entertained revision and set aside the order of the appellate Court directing the filing of a complaint when the Court of first instance refused to make a complaint. Where a superior Court set aside the order of the first Court refusing to file a complaint, reasons must be given by the superior Court as to why it thinks that the discretion was not properly exercised and where no reasons were given the High Court will be justified in interfering in revision, 52 C. 471. Where an order purported to be under S. 476, supra, but was not a complaint of Court as required by that section the High Court interfered in revision, 82 C. 656. In 27 Cr. L.J. 1240=98 Ind. Cas. 56, the Rangoon High Court distinguishing, 5 Pat. 262, set aside in revision an order under S. 476, supra, on the ground that no prima facie case had been made out and there was no likelihood of securing a conviction in a criminal Court. In 82 C. 1005 the High Court interfered in revision when the superior Court entertained an appeal which was filed more than thirty days from the date of the original order, holding that there was no rule of limitation to a case of this kind. When a civil Court takes action under S. 476, supra the High Court cannot revise the order under Ss. 435 and 439, infra, 26 Cr. L.J. 523=85 Ind. Cas. 362. S. 435, supra, only empowers the High Court to call for records of inferior Criminal Courts and no other, 24 A.L.J. 217=27 Cr. L.J. 276=92 Ind. Cas. 434 17 M.L.T. 268=16 Cr. L.J. 232=27 Ind. Cas. 904; 28 Cr. L.J. 16=89 Ind. Cas. 48. When a civil Court files a complaint of Court no appeal or revision lies to the High Court and Ss. 435 and 439 supra, cannot apply. The alteration made in S. 476 supra, has not affected the Full Bench decision in 26 A. 249 on this point, see also 24 A.L.J. 217. It is also clear having regard to the language of S. 115, C.P.C. no revision on the Civil side can be entertained although the order sought to be revised may have been based on faulty appreciation of facts or based on faulty view of the law and the Court cannot be held to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it or failed to have exercised a jurisdiction vested in it by law or to have acted illegally or with material irregularity. Some alteration in the law is desirable to obviate the difficulty. S. 476, supra, is a part of the Code and the Legislature in drafting it doubtless considered that Ss. 435 to 439, supra, would operate to afford means whereby the High Court could set aside such orders. Unfortunately by reason of the Full Bench decision in 26 A. 249 S. 115 C.P.C. and not Ss. 435 and 439, supra, applies when Civil Courts act under S. 476, supra, and the language of S. 115, C.P.C. is too narrow to meet a case. Where a Judge decides to file a complaint of Court on very insufficient or wrong grounds, S. 115, C.P.C. does not empower the High Court to interfere and quash an abortive criminal prosecution, 49 A. 536. The practice in Madras, and Calcutta is to entertain the application on the Civil side as the High Court cannot act under Ss. 435 and 439 as the civil Court cannot be said to be an inferior Criminal Court. Under S. 6, supra, only the High Court, the Sessions Court and the Courts presided over by Magistrates are Criminal Courts, 31 M.L.J. 440 at 432, following 25 M. 139; 26 A. 249 (F.B.); 37 C. 714. The long practice previous to 1902 of entertaining such revisions on the criminal side under Ss. 435 and 439, supra, was unsettled in 1907 (26 M. 139) and that unsettlement seems to have given rise to another settled practice during a long number of years which cannot be questioned now, 30 M.L.J. 440 at 448. A new Rule in the Criminal Rules of Practice in conformity with the decision in 26 M. 139 is in contemplation by the Madras High Court. See also 17 M.L.T. 288=18 Cr. L.J. 232; 30 M. 311; 18 M.L.T. 591 at 593 and 594; 51 M. 503 and 777; 40 C. 477=44 C. 816 at 823; 21 C.W.N. 654 at 656; 53 C. 1277 and 836; 23 A. 554; 30 Cr. L.J. 382=115 Ind. Cas. 812; 3 Luck. 155; 81 A. 338. The Lahore High Court in 30 Cr. L.J. 666=116 Ind. Cas. 711, takes a different view, following 1903 P.R. (Cr. J.) 5 (P.B.)=7 Cr.L.J. 281, and holds that a revision under S. 439, supra, lies even in a case where a civil Court takes action under S. 476, supra. Where a Collector was acting as a Revenue Court under the Tenancy Act and was exercising judicial powers in setting aside the order of a Deputy Collector, it was held that he was subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court and his order was revisable by the High Court under S. 115, C.P.O. and S. 107 of the Government of India Act and the High Court set aside the order directing the institution of criminal proceedings, 25 Cr. L.J. 1565=90 Ind. Cas. 445; See also 28 Cr. L.J. 296=100 Ind. Cas. 376.

Transfer.—The appeal contemplated by this section would be an appeal from the order of the Court filing a complaint of Court under S. 476, supra, when a District Judge is authorised to transfer an appeal from an order of the Munsif, it is competent for him to transfer an appeal presented under this section to the Court of a Subordinate Judge and the Subordinate Judge is competent to deal with such an appeal, 27 A.L.J. 53, following 49 A. 536. But see 30 Cr. L.J. 382=115 Ind. Cas. 812 which held that there cannot be a transfer by the District Judge.

Review.—In view of the fact that an appeal is allowed by this section a review would appear undesirable when the Court at first refused to make a complaint of Court and generally there is no provision in the Code for a review, 49 A. 752. A person may be called upon to show cause why he should not be prosecuted by the Court a second time even though previous proceedings under S. 476, supra, on the applications of a party had been dismissed for nonprosecution, 8 Pat. 736, following 6 Pat. L.T. 225.

Costs.—Proceedings under S. 195 and S. 476, supra, must be treated as of a criminal and not of a civil nature and the criminal law of procedure is to be applied to them. The Code does not authorise an order for payment of costs in those proceedings and it is not possible to justify an order for costs with reference to any inherent power of the Court, 17 Cr. L.J. 184 (1)=33 Ind. Cas. 824, following 30 M. 311. See notes under 'costs' under S. 195, supra, at p. 359-360. The Court when exercising powers under its revisional jurisdiction say under S. 115, C.P.O., cannot award costs. There is no provision in Chapter XXXV of the Code for awarding costs especially against one who is not a party to the civil litigation out of which proceedings under S. 476, supra, were initiated, 51 A. 338.

477. Repealed by Act XVIII of 1923, S. 129.

478. (1) When any such offence is committed before any Civil or Revenue Court, or brought under the notice of Power of Civil and Revenue Courts to complete inquiry and commit to High Court or Court of Session.

any Civil or Revenue Court in the course of a judicial proceeding, and the case is triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Session, or such Civil or Revenue Court thinks that it ought to be tried by the High Court or Court of Session, such Civil or Revenue Court may, instead of sending the case under section 476 to a Magistrate for inquiry, itself complete the inquiry, and commit or hold to bail the accused person to take his trial before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be.

(2) For the purpose of an inquiry under this section the Civil or Revenue Court may exercise all the powers of a Magistrate; and its proceedings in such inquiry shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XVIII and of Chapter XXXIII in cases where that Chapter applies and shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate.

Scope of the section.—This section deals with a special case where a Civil or Revenue Court is empowered to commit the accused to the Court of Session instead of sending the case for inquiry to a Magistrate under S. 476, supra, 28 A. 534 at 560 (F.B.). Such Court may complete the inquiry and frame a charge and commit, or hold to bail the accused person to take his trial before the Court of Sessions, but the Court is bound to send the charge with the order of commitment and the record of the case to a Magistrate authorised to commit for trial and such Magistrate shall bring the case before the Court of Session together with the witnesses for prosecution and defence, S. 479, infra. The present Ss. 476, 478 B, and this section have taken the place of the old Ss. 195 and 416 and when a subordinate Judge allowed the proceedings taken by him under S. 195, supra, to be dropped without passing any order of rejection, it is quite open to the District Magistrate to instruct the Public Prosecutor to move the District Court to take action under S. 476A, supra, 4 Pat. 24 at 31. When the Civil or Revenue Court takes action under this section the responsibility of the prosecution rests entirely upon the Court, 13 B. 384 at 388; 29 M. 331.

Any such offence.—This expression relates to offences referred to in S. 195, supra. There was really a conflict whether the conditions laid down by S. 195, supra, are also to be incorporated when construing the expression "any such offence." In 22 C. 1004 it was held that the word "offence" is not qualified by the circumstances under which it was committed as described in clause (c) of sub-section (1) of S. 195 by a party to any proceeding in any Court. See also 40 A. 115; 15 B. 381. The Madras High Court in 15 M. 221 took a different view holding that the offence must have been committed by a party to the proceeding. The view was followed in 40 M. 100 and confirmed by 42 M. 340 (F.B.).

Brought under its notice in the course of judicial proceeding.—This section refers not only to offences committed before any Court, Civil or Revenue but also refers to offences brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding. So far as Criminal Courts are concerned there is separate specific provision in S. 487, infra.

Instead of sending the case under S. 476.—The use of the word 'instead' is significant. The procedure herein contained is only alternative and the Court has no power on failure of one to adopt the other. The procedure in this section is alternative to that of S. 476. The Court cannot proceed under both the sections. When a Court specified in this section has the option under this section either to make a complaint of Court under S. 478, supra, or of committing the case direct to the Court of Session. When a Civil Court started proceedings under S. 476, supra, it is not debarred from committing the case to the Court of Session under this section simply because by passing an order of commitment under this section, it deprives the person proceeded against of the right of appeal secured to him under section 478 B, supra, if a complaint of Court is made under S. 478, supra, 43 A. 895. When a Civil Court had once sent a case under S. 476 supra for inquiry and the Magistrate after an enquiry discharged the accused the Civil Court has no power to revive the case against the accused before itself and issue notice to him to show cause why he should not be proceeded against Ratanlal 969, nor can it convert proceedings under S. 476, supra, to one under this section subsequently, 50 A. 32.

Itself complete the inquiry.—A commitment cannot be made without holding the preliminary inquiry required by this section, 4 M. 227; Welr II, 583; 23 W.R. (Cr.) 52; 1 W.R. (Cr.) 5. The preliminary inquiry must be conducted in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XVIII, supra.

And commit.—It is discretionary to commit, 7 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 29. If the offence has not been committed before (or is not one exclusively triable by a Court of Session then further inquiry is desirable and no commitment is to be made but the case sent to a competent Magistrate for inquiry, 4 B. 287. A Court not being bound to commit, the responsibility for the prosecution rests entirely on it, 13 B. 331.

Sub-section (2).—"With one exception perhaps I know of no statutory provision which confers upon any Civil Court as a Civil Court criminal powers of any kind. Enactments which create or appear to create new jurisdiction have to be construed strictly. In the one and only case in which I know of criminal jurisdiction being conferred upon Civil or Revenue Courts, viz., Ss. 478 and 479 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the powers and procedure are laid down in very precise and well defined terms"—per Knor, J., in 28 A. 554 at 560. The proceedings of a Civil or Revenue Court acting under this section shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate. A commitment made by a Civil or Revenue Court under this section can be quashed by the High Court under S. 215, supra, only on a point of law. But it was left open whether an appeal lay under S. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order of commitment made by a Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court exercising ordinary original jurisdiction but see 49 A. 893 and 43 M. 361 which hold that no appeal lay as S. 215, supra, controls and modifies S. 15 of the Letters Patent. Where a Civil Court neither examined the witnesses in the presence of the person against whom action is taken nor explained the charge to him the commitment was quashed as bad in law, 49 A. 32. There is no decided case holding that the Civil or Revenue Court acting under this section is an inferior Criminal Court within S. 435, supra, empowering a Sessions Judge to call for records in such a case or stay proceedings. All that the section says, is, that for the purpose of inquiry, under this section, the Civil or Revenue Court may exercise all the powers of a Magistrate and the inquiry shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with the provisions in Chapter XVIII or Chapter XXXIII if it applies and shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate, perhaps the last portion of sub-section (2) "shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate" it is submitted, makes the Court inferior to the Sessions Court.

Appeal—There is no right of appeal against an order passed under this section. There can be no right of appeal unless it is conferred by the statute and the only provision in this Chapter is S. 476B, supra, which gives a right of appeal against an order passed under S. 476, supra. There is no corresponding provision relating to the case of an order under this section. It is not for the Court to speculate why no right of appeal has been given against an order passed under this section. The fact remains that there is no right of appeal against an order under this section, 49 A. 898. No appeal lies against an order of commitment under this section made by a Judge of the High Court exercising ordinary original civil jurisdiction as S. 215, supra, controls and modifies the general provisions of S. 15 of the Letters Patent of the High Court, 43 M. 361.

479. When any such commitment is made by a Civil or Revenue Court, the Court shall send the charge with the order of commitment and the record of the case to the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or other Magistrate authorised to commit for trial, and such Magistrate shall bring the case before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be, together with the witnesses for the prosecution and defence.

This section speaks of the procedure to be adopted by the Civil or the Revenue Court after making an order of commitment, viz., to send the charge with an order of commitment and the record of the case to the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or any other Magistrate authorised to commit, and such Magistrate shall bring the case before the High Court or Court of Session with the witnesses for prosecution and defence. When a Judge of the High Court on the Original Side or a Judge of the Presidency Small Cause Court or City Civil Court makes a commitment, the procedure is to send the charge with the order of commitment and the record to the Chief Presidency Magistrate who shall bring the case before the High Court Sessions.

480. (1) When any such offence as is described in section 175, section 178, section 179, section 180 or section 228 of the Indian Penal Code is committed in the view or presence of any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court, the Court may cause the offender to be detained in custody and at any time before the rising of the Court on the same day, may, if it thinks fit, take cognizance of the offence, and sentence the offender to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, and, in default of payment, to simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, unless such fine be sooner paid.

(2) Nothing in section 294, or in Chapter XXXIII, shall be deemed to apply to proceedings under this section.

Scope of the section.—This section refers to five offences mentioned therein, namely, S. 175 (omission to produce a document); S. 178 (refusing oath); S. 179 (refusing to answer questions); S. 180 (refusal to sign statement); S. 228 (intentional insult or interruption of a judicial proceeding). Contempt of Court involves two ideas: (1) contempt of its power, (2) contempt of its authority. Power connotes ability to enforce obedience to its orders and authority connotes, its jurisdiction to declare the law and the rights of the parties. Generally speaking contempt of Court may be committed by any conduct tending to bring the authority and administration of the law into disrespect or disregard or interfere with or prejudice parties or witnesses during the litigation. The term generally applies to any disrespect or indignity offered to Judges while acting as such. In a case of intentional insult or interruption of a judicial proceeding, the record must show the nature, and stage of the judicial proceeding, in which the Court was insulted or interrupted and the nature of the insult or interruption. Talking outside in the Court verandah and refusing to come before the Court when ordered by the Court does not necessarily come within this section, 30 Cr. L.J. 118=113 Ind. Cas. 278.

Contempt of Court.—The essence of contempt of Court is an action or inaction amounting to an interference with or obstruction to or having a tendency to interfere with or to obstruct the due administration of justice, Acq. Cr. Pl., Ev. and Pr. p. 1157. "There are three different kinds of contempt, one kind of contempt is scandalising the Court itself. There may likewise be a contempt of this Court in abusing parties who are concerned in cases here. There may be also contempt of this Court in prejudicing mankind against persons before the cause is heard. There cannot be anything of greater consequence than to keep the streams of justice clear and pure, that parties may proceed with safety both to themselves and their character"—per Lord Hardwicke in 26 E.R. 683. Some contempts may arise on the face of the Court as by rude and contumacious behaviour by obstinacy, perverseness or provocation, by breach of the peace or by every disturbance whatever, others in the absence of the party as by disobeying or treating with disrespect the king's writ or process to the purposes of private malice extortion, or injustice; by speaking or writing contemptuously of the Court or Judges acting in their judicial capacity; by printing false accounts or true ones without proper permission of causes then depending in judgment and by anything in short, that demonstrates a gross want of that regard and respect which, when once Courts of justice are deprived of their authority, so necessary for the good order of the kingdom, is entirely lost among the people." Blackstone vol. IV 235. The jurisdiction in contempt is part of the legal system in this Country and therefore this part of this system should be executed as any other law, 4 Ran. 237. Any act done or writing published calculated to bring a Court or the Presiding Judge into contempt or to lower his authority is a contempt of Court. To impute improper motives to a court or Judge in its decision is a gross contempt of Court, 23 Cr. L.J. 727 at 742=103 Ind. Cas. 775. The jurisdiction to punish for contempt of Court is inherent in the High Court as a Court of Record and without it, its constitution as a Court of Record would altogether be useless. But the Court always exercises its power of punishing for contempt with great forbearance and acts with scrupulous care. It is ordinarily very chary in punishing people for contempt and where the occasion arises it deals with such question in the interests of the public, bearing in mind that the greater the power it possesses the more caution it is necessary to use in exercising it. In other words the Court does not interfere where the offence is of a slight or trifling nature and it only interferes where there is a real attempt to obstruct the course of justice. From very early times it has been held to be a contempt of Court to assault, ill-treat or threaten a process server engaged in his duty. The object in punishing for such contempt is not to vindicate the dignity of the Court but to prevent undue interference with the administration of justice. The law has armed the Courts with the power and imposed on it the duty of preventing bribe man and by summary proceedings any attempt to interfere with the administration of justice. It is on that ground and not on any exaggerated notion of the dignity of individuals that insults to witnesses, Jury men and process-servers are not allowed. The principle is that those who have duties to discharge pursuant to orders of Court are protected by the law and shielded on their way to the discharge of such duties while discharging them and on their return therefrom in order that such persons may safely have resort to Courts of justice and carry out their orders, 25 Cr. L.J. 1205=88 Ind. Cas. 725; See also 6 Lah. 528. The rule given in this section is made expressly to refer to all Courts whether Civil Criminal or Revenue. Evidently it is a rule introduced for a larger sphere than the law of criminal procedure and has been introduced in the Code only because it deals with summary punishment for certain acts which generally amount to offences under the Criminal law. It is a necessity universally acknowledged that Courts of law should have power to deal with cases of contempt then and there as otherwise the proper administration of justice may seriously be impeded, 10 Cr. L.J. 237=12 Mys. G.C.R. 170. Any act done, or writing published, calculated to bring a Court or a Judge of the Court into contempt, or to lower his authority, or any act done or writing published to obstruct or interfere with the due course of justice, or the lawful process of Court, is a contempt of Court, 33 B. 240 at 243; 10 B.H.C.R. 73. The object of punishing for contempts is the protection of the public from the evil which will result if their faith in the authority and justice of tribunals is interfered with, 47 B. 76. S. 175, I.P.O., intentionally omitting to produce a document before a public servant, etc.; S. 178, I.P.O., refusing oath when duly required to take oath by public servant; S. 179, I.P.O., refusing to answer questions being legally bound to state the truth, 26 Cr. L.J. 354=84 Ind. Cas. 706. S. 180, I.P.O., refusing to sign statement made to a public servant when legally required to do so; S. 228, I.P.O., intentional insult or interruption to a public servant sitting in any stage of a Judicial proceeding. Where a witness being asked his grand-fathers's name, replies that he does not remember it cannot be held that he refuses to answer to the question put to him and will not therefore render himself liable to be dealt with under this section, 27 Cr. L.J. 252=92 Ind. Cas. 428. Where an accused person walked with creaking shoes near the Court room, a Court is not justified in inferring that the accused intended to insult or interrupt its work, 5 M.L.T. 286=9 Cr. L.J. 309=1 Ind. Cas. 560. Where a pleader uses derogatory language and he assures the Court that they were not meant to apply to the Court, the Court ought to accept the assurance and action under this section is unwarranted, 11 A.L.J. 855=14 Cr. L.J. 687=21 Ind. Cas. 1007. But in 9 M.L.T. 443, it was held, without deciding whether the act of a person walking in the view of a Magistrate with shoes on, while the Magistrate was sitting as a Magistrate amounted to an offence under S. 228, I.P.O., that no suit for damages will lie against the Magistrate as it was found that the Magistrate acted bonafide though he could have maintained the dignity of the Court without taking notice of the conduct in question. It is a contempt of Court to make comment in a pending case if the effect of such comment is to prejudice the fair trial of an accused person, 14 Bom. L.R. 231=13 Cr. L.J. 461=15 Ind. Cas. 93; see 15 C.W.N. 771; 41 C. 173. There ought to be a spirit of give and take between the Bench and the Bar and every little persistence on the part of a practitioner should not be turned into an occasion for a criminal trial unless the practitioner's conduct is so clearly vexatious as to lead to the inference of intentional insult or interruption of the Court, 6 Bom. L.R. 541=1 Cr. L.J. 812. A contempt of Court being a criminal offence, no person e.g., a practitioner of the Court can be punished for contempt unless the specific offence charged against him is distinctly stated and an opportunity given to him of answering the same before passing a sentence. L.R. 2 P.C. 106. The general principle which must be applied in all cases of contempt however gross, and even if a witness has in evidence given immediately before the proceedings for contempt, admitted the contempt, and even if the attempt which he has admitted is a gross contempt, nevertheless he cannot be punished for that contempt unless the specific offence charged against him has been distinctly stated and unless he has had an opportunity of answering the charge the principle embodied in S. 535, infra, ought not to be applied here because although a formal charge may in certain circumstances be dispensed with in regular criminal cases where evidence is taken and the depositions of witnesses show for what offence the accused is being tried, a formal charge is essentially necessary in summary proceedings for contempt, where possibly no evidence to establish the offence may be recorded and where in the absence of a formal charge the person alleged to be in contempt may not know exactly what particular conduct of his is alleged to have amounted to contempt, 3 Ran. 257; see also 30 Cr. L.J. 118=113 Ind. Cas. 278.

In the view or presence of.—This is what is known in English law as contempt 'in the face of the Court.' In cases of such contempt the offender can be arrested and sentenced at the discretion of the Court immediately without further proof. This section cannot apply to the case of a witness who when summoned to produce a document stated that it was not in his possession, which was disbelieved by the Magistrate. He should proceed, if at all, under S. 476, supra, 13 M. 24.

At any time before rising of Court on the same day.—The procedure herein laid down should be strictly followed, and the provisions of the section were intended to be applied then and there, or at any rate before the rising of the Court in whose view or presence the contempt was committed; Courts, when resorting to a use of this section, will do well to follow the procedure therein laid down herein, 11 A. 661 at 364.

Sentence to fine not exceeding Rupees Two Hundred.—The power to punish is limited by the provisions of this section to rupees two hundred or in default to simple imprisonment for one month. The Magistrate has no power to award imprisonment, as a substantive punishment. If he considers a fine to be too light a sentence for the offence committed, he ought to proceed under S. 482, infra, by referring the case to some other Magistrate who would have had power to inflict the severe punishment awardable under S. 228, I.P.O. Notwithstanding the provisions as to punishment in S. 228, I.P.O., a Court proceeding under this section cannot pass a sentence in excess of that prescribed herein, Weir II, 603; 6 M.H.C.R. (Appx.) 16.

Appeal.—An appeal lies from every order of conviction made under this section, see S. 456, infra. A Sessions Judge cannot decline to interfere on appeal merely because in his opinion the matter is a mere trifle. He is bound to hear the appeal and decide whether the conviction is legal, Ratanlal 978.

Sub-section (2).—The provisions of this section apply to European British subjects also.

Power of High Courts and Chief Courts to punish for contempts of Inferior Courts.—Act XII of 1926—an Act to define and limit the powers of High Courts and Chief Courts in punishing for contempts, empowers them to punish contempts committed before Courts subordinate to them. Doubts having been expressed as to the power of superior Courts to punish contempts committed before inferior Courts; to remove that doubt the said Act has been passed. All contempts except when such contempt is an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code are liable to be dealt with by the superior Courts. The punishment under the Act is six months' simple imprisonment or fine which may extend to Rs. 2,000 or both and on an apology being made to the satisfaction of the Court, the accused may be discharged or the sentence may be remitted, see also 3 Ran. 257.

481. (1) In every such case the Court shall record the facts constituting the offence, with the statement (if any) made by the offender, as well as the finding and sentence.

(3) If the offence is under section 228 of the Indian Penal Code, the record shall show the nature and stage of the judicial proceeding in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting, and the nature of the interruption or insult.

Shall record the facts.—The intention of the Legislature in requiring that certain particulars shall be recorded by the Court was to provide a safeguard against an abuse of power and to enable the appellate Court to see whether the conviction was justifiable, 2 L.A. 303 at 310. The section does not say that a charge is to be framed but only that the facts constituting the offence are to be recorded. The directions contained in this section as to the recording of facts constituting the offence, with the offender's statement, finding and sentence are clearly mandatory and omission will vitiate proceedings, 10 C.W.N. 1032 = 4 C.L.J. 415 = 9 Cr. L.J. 210; 19 M.L.J. 324 (P.C.) = 13 C.W.N. 693 = 11 Cr. L.J. 277 = 4 Ind. Cas. 539; L.R. 2 P.C. 10; Courts when resorting to the use of this section would do well to follow the procedure laid down herein, 11 A 351; when the Magistrate did not specifically record his reasons and the facts constituting the contempt the order was set aside, 4 M.H.C.R. 229. See also 4 M.H.C.R. 143 where it was held that it was no contempt to laugh and hesitate in speaking. But in 13 Cr. L.J. 621 = 25 Ind. Cas. 623, the Madras High Court while holding that the defect was curable under S. 537, infra, was of opinion it will not be condoned when the records did not disclose the stage of the judicial proceeding in which the offence was committed and it was doubtful whether the facts amounted to an offence.

Statement, if any.—No person can be punished for contempt of Court which is a criminal offence unless the specific offences charged against him be distinctly stated and opportunity given him of answering the same. The expression "if any" in this section indicates that the Court cannot compel the accused to make a statement, but it does not mean that it should not give him an opportunity to make a statement. This is not an express provision of law enacting a special procedure contrary to the principle of criminal jurisprudence that a man must be heard before he is condemned, 24 Cr. L.J. 722 = 74 Ind. Cas. 642.

Finding and sentence.—The finding and sentence to be recorded under this section will fall within a "judgment" as held in 10 C.W.N. 1062 = 4 C.L.J. 415 = 4 Cr. L.J. 210.

Sub-section (2)—A coarse expression used by a party but not addressed to the Court can scarcely be treated as an insult to or interruption of the Court even if uttered within the hearing of the Presiding Judge, 13 Cr. L.J. 567 = 15 Ind. Cas. 293. Prevarication while giving evidence will not constitute contempt under this section or under S. 228, I.P.C., 4 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 6; see also 13 Cr. L.J. 621 = 25 Ind. Cas. 629, nor refusal or neglect to give direct answers to question, 4 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 7. Some latitude should be shown to a member of the Bar insisting upon his questions being taken down or his objections being noted by the Court when the Court thinks the question inadmissible or the objection untenable, 6 Bom. L.R. 541 = 1 Cr. L.J. 612. Where the records do not comply with the provisions of this sub-section by not showing the nature and stage of the judicial proceeding in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting and the nature of the interruption or insult, the proceedings were quashed, 23 Cr. L.J. 837 = 111 Ind. Cas. 444.

482. (1) If the Court in any case considers that a person has committed or is committing any of the offences referred to in sub-section (1) and is not prepared to be punished otherwise than in default of payment of fine, or that a fine exceeding two hundred rupees should be imposed, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order that the person should be committed to prison.

Procedure where Court considers that case should not be dealt with under section 480.

be imposed upon him, or such Court is for any other reason of opinion that the case should not be disposed of under section 480, such Court, after recording the facts constituting the offence and the statement of the accused as hereinbefore provided, may forward the case to a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the same, and may require security to be given for the appearance of such accused person before such Magistrate, or, if sufficient security is not given, shall forward such person in custody to such Magistrate.

(2) The Magistrate, to whom any case is forwarded under this section, shall proceed to hear the complaint against the accused person in manner hereinbefore provided.

Scope of the section—This section contemplates that the trial is to be by a judicial officer other than the person before whom the contempt was committed and it applies to cases when a more severe punishment than that is allowed by S. 480, supra. There is nothing to warrant the inference that an officer before whom, while acting in a particular capacity a contempt has been committed punishable under S. 228, I.P.C., can in another capacity take up and try the offence, an offence committed against himself. If he could do so, it would be a violation of that fundamental rule in the administration of justice that no man can be a Judge in a case wherein he is interested 12 W. R. (Cr.) 18 at 21. The necessity for commitment to another Magistrate arises only whether the Court thinks, imprisonment without the option of fine or a fine of two hundred rupees, is demanded by the circumstances of the case, 6 M.H.C.R. (Appx.) 16.

Sub-section (1).—Under this section the Court is to record a statement of facts constituting the contempt and the statement of the accused and then forward the case to a Magistrate, 11 W. R. (Cr.) 49; when a Civil Court omitted to call upon the person who was charged with contempt to make his defence it was held that the irregularity was fatal to the order and the High Court would set it aside, 7 B.H.C.R. 402, 5 Bom. L.R. 343, but where the offender was a practitioner who left the Court abruptly before a statement could be recorded from him the omission was held immaterial and the dismissal of the case of contempt against the practitioner on the sole ground that the offender was not allowed an opportunity of explaining his conduct was set aside by the High Court, Weir II, 604; the procedure under S. 480, supra, is summary and the punishment can be one of fine only and action should be taken on the same day the contempt was committed. This section need not be read along with S. 480, supra, and it is not imperative on a Magistrate to draw up the proceedings on the same day, 35 C. 161. A Magistrate instead of forwarding the case under this section may commit; see S. 487 (2) infra. In cases of contempt the Court is bound to accept, if sufficient bail is offered, 12 W. R. (Cr.) 18; 11 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

Sub-section (2).—The Magistrate to whom the case is forwarded shall proceed to hear the complainant in the manner hereinbefore provided, viz., in S. 200, supra, and following sections. The wording of S. 476 (2), supra, is narrower. Here the words used "hear the complaint and proceed as if upon complaint made under S. 200." The same officer in another capacity cannot try the offender for no man can be a Judge in a case in which he is interested, 12 W. R. (Cr.) 18.

When Registrar or Sub-Registrar to be deemed a Civil Court within sections 480 and 482.

483. When the Local Government so directs, any Registrar or any Sub-Registrar appointed under the Indian Registration Act, 1877, [now 1908] shall be deemed to be a Civil Court within the meaning of sections 480 and 482.

The section is in accordance with the decision in 13 B. L. R. Appx. 43=22 W. R. (Cr.) 113, where it was held that a Sub-Registrar under the Registration Act, being a public servant and the proceedings before him being judicial proceedings within S. 223, I. P. C., had jurisdiction to take contempt proceedings. A Sub-Registrar is held to be not a Court within S. 195, infra, 12 B. 36; 11 M. 3, 12 M. 201; 4 M. L. J. 182, and sub section (2) of S. 1-5 supra expressly enacts so. This section is an exception and makes a Sub-Registrar a Court for dealing with contumacious contempts and is an exception to the general system and an exceptional provision, 12 B. 36 at 42-43.

484. When any Court has under section 480 or section 482 adjudged an offender to punishment or forwarded him to a Magistrate for trial for refusing or omitting to do anything which he was lawfully required to do, or for any intentional insult or interruption, the Court may, in its discretion, discharge the offender or remit the punishment on his submission to the order or requisition of such Court, or on apology being made to its satisfaction.

Discharge of offender on submission or apology.

When a pleader was punished for contempt by a District Munsiff for certain words uttered in Court which the Munsiff thought was derogatory to his position and the Munsiff declined to accept the assurance of the pleader that the words had no reference to the Court and the District Judge on appeal declined to interfere the High Court in revision directed the Munsiff to consider whether it was not a case in which he should accept the assurance of the pleader and act under this section. Upon the Munsiff's declining to do so as the pleader had not withdrawn the words uttered, it was held that the assurance given that the words were not uttered with reference to the Court should be taken to be sufficient, 11 A. L. J. 535=14 Cr. L. J. 687=21 Ind. Cas. 1007. Litigants are bound to conduct themselves in an orderly manner in Court, but too much notice should not be taken of any sudden lapse, during a moment of excitement into language which is unfortunately too common among the lower class of rustics and is not meant to be taken seriously when a litigant is detained and adopts a submissive attitude when brought before the Court later on after excitement is worn off. A due admonition or a petty fine at the most is sufficient for preservation of order, 13 Cr. L. J. 567=15 Ind. Cas. 983.

485. If any witness or person called to produce a document or thing before a Criminal Court refuses to answer such questions as are put to him, or to produce any document or thing in his possession or power which the Court requires him to produce, and does not offer any reasonable excuse, for such refusal, such Court may for reasons to be recorded in writing, sentence him to simple imprisonment or by warrant under the hand of the presiding Magistrate or Judge commit him to the custody of an officer of the Court for, a term not exceeding seven days, unless in the meantime such person consents to be examined and to answer, or to produce the document or thing. In the event of his persisting in his refusal, he may be dealt with according to the provisions of section 480 or section 482, and, in the case of a Court established by Royal Charter, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt.

Imprisonment or committal of person refusing to answer or produce document.

"Any witness or other person" cannot include a complainant who cannot be punished under this, or S. 179, I.P.C. There is no case which brings in a complainant under these penal provisions, 13 B. 500 at 504.

It is to be borne in mind that Courts are necessarily presided over by Judges who, like other men are mortal and liable to err. It is no offence to subject their decisions to fair, honest and reasonable criticism. Indeed these criticisms may be couched in strong perhaps even in extravagant language but to ascribe their decisions not to error but to improper motives is to bring the Judges and the whole Court into contempt and undermine the confidence of the public in all judicial pronouncements and determinations. It is pointed out by Sir John Wilmot, C.J., in R. v. Almon, 94 E. R. 94, that "attacks upon Judges excited in the minds of the people a general dissatisfaction with all judicial determinations and whenever men's allegiance to the laws was so fundamentally shaken, it is most vital and dangerous obstruction of justice calling for more rapid and immediate redress than any other obstruction not for the sake of the Judges as private individuals but because they are the channels by which the King's justice is conveyed to the people," 23 Cr. L.J. 727 at 741=103 Ind. Cas. 775, 45 C. 169 & Lah. 523. The special power under this section is different from the power possessed by Courts of Record to commit for contempt. The High Courts in the Indian Presidencies are superior Courts of Record. The offence of contempt of Court and the powers of the High Court to punish it are the same as in the superior Courts in England and the jurisdiction was exercised by the High Court in such a case, 45 C. 169 at 183-185; 41 C. 173 at 218, 10 C. 109 (P.C.); 11 C.W.N. 273, 21 M.L.J. 832=10 M.L.T. 209; 33 B. 243; 43 A. 711; 6 Lah. 523; 28 Cr. L.J. 727=103 Ind. Cas. 775. The object which a Court has in view for punishing for contempt is the protection of the public from the evil which will result if their faith in the authority and justice of the tribunals is impaired, 47 B. 76. A District Court is not a Court of Record and as such has no inherent powers to punish for contempt, 26 M. 494. The power to punish for contempts is not by virtue of the Penal Code for British India and this Code, but by virtue of the Common Law of England, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 291. The jurisdiction to punish for contempt of inferior Courts also exists in the Superior Court of Record, 21 M.L.J. 832=10 M.L.T. 209. But a different view was taken by the Calcutta High Court in 41 C. 173 (Sp. B.) and now Act XII of 1926 expressly empowers High Courts and Chief Courts to punish contempts committed before Courts subordinate to them. See notes at p. 564, under S. 480 supra.

486. (1) Any person sentenced by any Court under section 480 or section 485 may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, appeal to the Court to which decrees or orders made in such Court are ordinarily appealable.

Appeals from convictions in contempt cases.

(2) The provisions of Chapter XXXI shall, so far as they are applicable, apply to appeals under this section, and the Appellate Court may alter or reverse the finding, or reduce or reverse the sentence appealed against.

(3) An appeal from such conviction by a Court of Small Causes in a presidency-town shall lie to the High Court, and an appeal from such conviction by any other Court of Small Causes shall lie to the Court of Session for the sessions division within which such Court is situate.

(4) An appeal from such conviction by any officer as Registrar or Sub-Registrar appointed as aforesaid may, when such officer is also Judge of a Civil Court, be made to the Court to which it would, under the preceding portion of this section, be made if such conviction were a decree by such officer in his capacity as such Judge, and in other cases may be made to the District Judge, or, in the presidency-towns, to the High Court.

This section provides for appeals in cases of conviction for contempt.

Ordinarily appealable.—This expression means appealable in majority of cases, 11 B. 438 at 443. When a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court refused on application to commit for contempt of Court, it was held an appeal lay to the Appellate Side of the High Court under S. 15 of the Letters Patent, 1863, 23 C. 236. See in this connection the decision in 56 C. 923, following 43 M. 923 and 43 B. 270, noted under S. 476B, supra, at p. 857.

Sub-section (3).—In this sub-section, it is provided that an appeal from a conviction by a Court of Small Causes shall be to the Court of Session. But in sub-section (1) the appeal lies to the District Judge. It is more appropriate to state that the appeal, under this clause also lies to the District Judge rather than to the Court of Session as the conviction is by a Civil Court. An appeal from a Court of Small Causes to the Court of Session is also inconsistent with the expression "ordinarily" occurring in sub-section (1).

487. (1) Except as provided in sections 480 and 485, no Judge of a Criminal Court or Magistrate, other than a Judge of a High Court, shall try any person for any offence referred to in section 195, when such offence is committed before himself or in contempt of his authority, or is brought under his notice as such Judge or Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding.

Certain Judges and Magistrates not to try Offences referred to in S. 195 when committed before themselves.

(2) Nothing in section 476, or section 482 shall prevent a Magistrate empowered to commit to the Court of Session or High Court from himself committing any case to such Court.

Object of the section.—This section is limited to offences referred to in S. 195 supra. The prohibition in the section is a personal prohibition, the mischief to be prevented being that the same person should not decide a matter which he may have already prejudged. It does not refer to the office of the Magistrate or Judge before whom an offence of the class described in the section is committed, but only refers to the person of the Magistrate, 1 M. 303. This section is enacted to bar the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Criminal Court or Magistrate, when the facts alleged to constitute the offence were committed by a person in the course of a judicial proceeding, 21 Cr. L.J. 696=57 Ind. Cas. 936.

No Judge of a Criminal Court.—The use of the word "Criminal" is significant and shows that the prohibition does not extend to a Judge of a Civil Court. Therefore a District Judge who takes action under S. 195 or S. 476, supra, is not debarred from trying the offence in his capacity as a Sessions Judge, 6 B. 479; 7 C.W.N. 708; 16 C. 766 (F.B.); 18 B. 380 (F.B.). The prohibition applies when a Sessions Judge directs prosecution in relation to a judicial proceeding before himself, 13 A. 354; 1 B. 311; Weir II, 609. Even though the trial is not illegal it is undesirable that the same person should try the offender, 6 B. 479; 1887 A.W.N. 139. The use of the word "Judge" is significant. The disqualification is personal and the successor in office is not disqualified to hold the trial.

Magistrate.—The word "Magistrate" includes a Presidency Magistrate, 12 C.W.N. 246.

Shall try any person for an offence.—This section does not prohibit the hearing of an appeal, Weir II, 607; 7 C.W.N. 708. The word "try" as used in this section includes the hearing of an appeal. The provisions of this section are mandatory. A Sessions Judge who files a complaint of Court has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the conviction for the offence in respect of which he had filed a complaint of Court, 25 Cr. L.J. 713=81 Ind. Cas. 201.

Referred to in S. 195.—This section specifically refers only to contempts referred to in S. 195 (1) (a) dealing with Ss. 172-188, I.P.C., contempts of the lawful authority of public servants, S. 195(1) (b) refers to offences against public justice, and S. 195(1) (c) to offences relating to documents given in evidence. A Tahsildar Magistrate whose summons to a person to appear before him was disobeyed, complained to himself as to an offence under S. 174, I.P.C., having been committed by the person summoned and he then issued a warrant the execution of which the accused person was alleged to have prevented. As this section precluded the Tahsildar from commencing to try the case of disobedience to his summons under S. 174, I.P.C., an offence falling under S. 195 (1) (a), supra, the warrant subsequently issued by him was without jurisdiction and by preventing the execution of the warrant, the accused cannot be held to have committed any offence, 27 Cr. L.J. 1341=98 Ind. Cas. 416.

Other than a Judge of the High Court—The High Court is a Court of Record and has the power of summarily punishing every contempt without sending the accused for trial to ordinary Criminal Courts, 21 M. 523 at 549 and 262; 8 W. R. (Cr.) 32; 1 B. 339.

Sub-section (2)—This sub-section gives no power to commit, to a Magistrate not ordinarily competent to commit. It only says that a Magistrate ordinarily competent to commit is not obliged to adopt the procedure of Ss. 476 and 482, supra. The inquiry will be in the way prescribed by Chapter XVIII of the Code.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

OF THE MAINTENANCE OF WIVES AND CHILDREN.

This Chapter seems to be out of place in a Code of Criminal Procedure and it is here inserted only because corresponding provisions were placed in the Codes of 1861 and 1872. Sir James Fitzjames Stephen thinks that this Chapter should be placed in Part IV relating to prevention of offences, as he says it is a mode of preventing vagrancy or at least preventing its consequences. Unfortunately, though vagrancy is an offence in England it is not in India and never has been an offence in India. Whitely Stoke's Anglo Indian Codes Vol. II, p. 29. The right to maintenance enforceable under the Code is a right which exists independently of the personal law of the parties. The provision is analogous to that made by the English Poor Law under which children who have no Common Law right to claim it from their father's hands may claim it before a Magistrate, 23 M. 473 at 473 (F.B.). Among Hindus marriage is not a mere contract but a sacrament. The marriage is complete and irrevocable on the performance of certain ceremonies. Mayne on Hindu Law says, "The maintenance of a wife by her husband is a matter of personal obligation arising from the very existence of the relation and independent of possession of property and this obligation attaches from the moment of marriage, where the wife is immature it is the custom that she should reside with her parents and they maintain her as a matter of affection but not of obligation. If from inability, unwillingness or any other cause, they choose to demand her maintenance from the husband he is bound to pay it and he alone is liable." Under Mahomedan Law evidence of continued co-habitation duly made out is sufficient to prove a marriage and the effect of a legal marriage is to place the wife under the dominion of the husband to confer on her right of maintenance, etc. The right to maintenance is expressly recognized under Mahomedan Law and even where the husband is absent without making any provision for the wife's maintenance she is entitled to have it out of his property. In case of divorce the wife is entitled to maintenance during the period of iddat, i.e., the period of her probation. Children whether legitimate or illegitimate are entitled to maintenance from the father until they reach an age when they can support themselves. The word used is 'unable to maintain himself.'

488. (1) If any person having sufficient means neglects or refuses to maintain his wife or his legitimate or illegitimate child unable to maintain itself, the District Magistrate, a Presidency Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class may, upon proof of such neglect or refusal, order such person to make a monthly allowance for the maintenance of his wife or such child, at such monthly rate, not exceeding one hundred rupees in the whole, as such Magistrate thinks fit, and to pay the same to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs.

(2) Such allowance shall be payable from the date of the order, or if so ordered from the date of the application for maintenance.

(3) If any person so ordered fails without sufficient cause to comply with the order, any such Magistrate may, for every breach of the order, issue a warrant for levying the amount due in manner hereinbefore provided for levying fines, and may sentence such person, for the whole or any part of each month's allowance remaining unpaid after the execution of the warrant, to imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or until payment, if sooner made :

Enforcement of order. ct Provided that, if such person offers to maintain his wife on condition of her living with him, and she refuses to live with him, such Magistrate may consider any grounds of refusal stated by her, and may make an order under this section notwithstanding such offer, if he is satisfied that there is just ground for so doing :

Provided, further, that no warrant shall be issued for the recovery of any amount due under this section unless application be made to the Court to levy such amount within a period of one year from the date on which it became due.

(4) No wife shall be entitled to receive an allowance from her husband under this section if she is living in adultery, or if, without any sufficient reason, she refuses to live with her husband, or if they are living separately by mutual consent.

(5) On proof that any wife in whose favour an order has been made under this section is living in adultery, or that without sufficient reason she refuses to live with her husband, or that they are living separately by mutual consent, the Magistrate shall cancel the order.

(6) All evidence under this Chapter shall be taken in the presence of the husband or father, as the case may be, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in the presence of his pleader, and shall be recorded in the manner prescribed in the case of summons-cases :

Referred to in S. 195.—This section specifically refers only to contempts referred to in S. 195 (1) (a) dealing with Ss. 172-188, I.P.O., contempts of the lawful authority of public servants, S. 195(1) (b) refers to offences against public justice, and S. 195 (1) (c) to offences relating to documents given in evidence. L.J. 1344=98 Ind. Cas. 418.

Other than a Judge of the High Court.—The High Court is a Court of Record and has the power of summarily punishing every contempt without sending the accused for trial to ordinary Criminal Courts, 24 M. 323 at 548 and 262; 8 W.R. (Cr.) 32; 1 B. 339.

Sub-section (2)—This sub-section gives no power to commit, to a Magistrate not ordinarily competent to commit. It only says that a Magistrate ordinarily competent to commit is not obliged to adopt the procedure of Ss. 476 and 482, supra. Scope and object of the section—This section invests Criminal Court with a sort marrage, divorce, paternity and the like but their decisions are not binding upon the parties in other litigations in Civil Courts. They are merely incidental to the main object of the competent Civil Court declaring the rights of the parties before him and cannot be heard to say that he was not bound to take the Civil Court's decrees into consideration, 3 Cr. L.J. 229.

See the new sub-section (2) to S. 459 infra, in this connection. An application for maintenance under this section is not a complaint of an offence. The neglect or refusal to maintain one's wife or child does not involve any punishment to be awarded under this section. The section is merely intended to enforce the legal obligation in a summary manner of the husband or father. The person proceeded against is not an accused person and there has been a deliberate change by the new amendment of the section showing a clear intention on the part of the Legislature that a person proceeded against does not come within S. 340 (2) supra, and he is entitled to offer himself as a witness in the case, 10 Lah. 406.

The object of this section is not to punish a parent for his past neglect but to prevent vagrancy by compelling those who can do so to support those who are themselves unable to do so and have a moral claim to be supported. It is the future support of the child that has to be considered and ensured, 25 Cr. L.J. 1249-51 Ind. Cas 257; 9 B. 43; 16 B. 266; 19 Cr. L.J. 811
-41 Ind. Cas 331. The intention of the Legislature is thus to enforce the liability of the husband of the woman and the male parent of an illegitimate child as the person primarily responsible for their maintenance, Weir II, 619. The object of law in enacting this section is down in Ss. 200 and 203 supra do not apply. The proceedings are more of a civil nature than criminal, 1903 P.L.R. (Cr. J.) 161 p. 661. There is no provision in the Code which bars a second application under this section when the first one was dismissed for default of appearance without recording any evidence. No adjudication was therefore arrived at and so there is nothing which prevents a second application being proceeded with, 21 C.W.N. 32; 30 C.L.J. 123=21 Cr. L.J. 3=54 Ind. Cas. 51, but where a Magistrate after recording the whole evidence and hearing arguments passed a final order dismissing the petition, he has no jurisdiction to entertain a second application on the same facts and the High Court in revision set aside the order passed on the second application, 17 Cr. L.J. 128=32 Ind. Cas. 842 where 5 A. 224 and 1 C.L.R. 89 are referred to. See also 18 Cr. L.J. 326=38 Ind. Cas. 438. On the general principle of res judicata a Magistrate will not be acting properly and in accordance with law in re-opening a matter of maintenance which had already been adjudicated on by another Magistrate, 5 A. 224 referred to in 8 Cr. L.J. 21=4 L.B.R. 337, but a Magistrate to whom an application is made knows or has reason to believe that a similar application on the same facts had previously been adjudicated upon, he ought not to act on the application without considering the previous judgment and it cannot be said that he was wrong in law when he does so and that his proceedings were therefore bad in law and void regardless of the merits, 8 Ran. 697, following, 9 Cr. L.J. 21=4 L.B.R. 337. An application under this section for maintenance of a child should be made not in the name of the mother but should be made in the name of the child by mother, as its guardian, 23 Cr. L.J. 1249=82 Ind. Cas. 237.

Sub-section (1): any person having sufficient means—The word 'means' does not signify only visible means such as real property or definite employment. If a man is healthy and able bodied he must be taken to have the means to support his wife, 50 M.L.J. 34 at 35=(1926) M.W.N. 146=27 Cr. L.J. 350=92 Ind. Cas. 562. A person against whom an order for maintenance is made under the section must have sufficient means, but the fact that the husband may be of slender means, Weir II, 617, or that the father or husband is a professional beggar, Weir II, 616, or that he is an undivided member of a Hindu family, 13 M. 17, or that he is a student at school, 5 N.W.P.H.C.R. 123, does not

 B. 562. The word used is 'any to be able to utilise his joint interest as well for his maintenance, as that of his wife when necessary to do so, 13 M. 17.

Neglects or refuses to maintain.—To give jurisdiction to a Magistrate an actual neglect or refusal to maintain must be established, Weir II, 630. Neglect or refusal may be by words or by conduct. It may be express or implied, 3 Bom. L.R. 359. Where a husband ill-treated his wife and turned her out of his house so as to make it impossible for her to live in the house, that would be neglect or refusal to maintain her, 5 Bom. L.R. 614; see also 27 A.L.J. 1208. What gives jurisdiction to a Magistrate to award and entitles the children to receive maintenance, is not merely a formal refusal of the father to maintain, but also his neglect to do so, 19 L.W. 530=(1924) M.W.N. 465=25 Cr.L.J. 84=76 Ind. Cas. 80. With regard to children it is sufficient if neglect or refusal to maintain them is proved and on such proof, the Magistrate can make an order for payment of monthly allowance for the child to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs. An offer to maintain order; the Magistrate may be entitled to consider the circumstances in which the offer was made and whether it is right and proper that children if not in their father's custody be handed over to him. With regard to the maintenance of a wife there is a special proviso in this section, that if the husband offers to maintain her on condition of her living with him and she refuses to live with him the Magistrate may consider the grounds of refusal and make an order notwithstanding such refusal if he is satisfied there is just ground for doing so, 27 A.L.J. 1208 at 1210. The Legislature has not included children in that proviso for very good reasons. The onus should not be thrown on them of stating grounds of refusal which would have to be considered before making an order. Expression of willingness to maintain will not deprive the Magistrate of his jurisdiction if he is satisfied that the father has neglected or refused, 49 B. 562 at 565-566. A husband against whom an order of adjudication is made cannot be held to have neglected to maintain, he being unable to pay and cannot be proceeded against for arrears due, 50 C. 867. See in this connection 31 Bom. L.R. 366 following 49 M. 851 and distinguishing 50 C. 867.

His wife or legitimate or illegitimate child.—A wife alone is entitled to claim maintenance under this section and proof of a valid marriage is necessary to enable a Magistrate to award maintenance, 16 B. 269; 19 A. 53. In maintenance proceedings under this section, the wife must show that she is wife of the person from whom she claims maintenance, 15 Cr. L.J. 434 (2)=24 Ind. Cas. 372 (2). A wife's means of earning a livelihood should not be taken into consideration before an order for maintenance is passed in her favour, 1887 A.W.N. 107; 10 Bur. L.R. 166; 10 Bur. L.R. 169; the fact that the wife has relations rich and able to maintain her will not relieve the husband from his duty to maintain her if he has sufficient means, Weir II, 615; 16 Cr. L.J. 80=26 Ind. Cas. 672. A concubine or kept woman cannot claim maintenance herself under this section although she is entitled to claim maintenance for her illegitimate child. A married woman is entitled under this section to claim a maintenance allowance for her illegitimate children from the putative father even during the life-time of her husband, Weir II, 619; 18 B. 468; 18 A. 107. A Mahomedan wife is entitled to maintenance even though irrevocably divorced by pronouncing 'talak', during the period of iddat, as by pronouncing an irrevocable divorce, the marital relationship between the parties is not completely destroyed until the expiry of the iddat and therefore an order already existing in favour of the wife can be enforced by the Magistrate during the period of iddat, 20 M.L.J. 12=10 Cr. L.J. 502=4 Ind. Cas. 130; see 21 Cr. L.J. 503=56 Ind. Cas. 663 where 5 A. 226 and 12 Cr. L.J. 82=9 Ind. Cas. 457 are followed. The word "child" means one who has not attained majority, 37 M. 555. When an application is made on behalf of a child for maintenance it is the duty of the Magistrate to inquire (1) as to whether the child is unable to maintain itself, (2) if the father has sufficient means, (3) whether the father has neglected to maintain it. Past neglect to support the child may be a cogent factor to be taken into account in finding, that at the date of the application the father is neglecting or refusing to support the child, 1917 P.R. (Cr.J.) 22. In proceedings under this section for maintenance of an illegitimate child, the real question at issue is, whether the respondent is the putative father of the child. Two persons most competent to give evidence about the parentage of the child are the woman and the alleged father, 18 A. 107. Mere assertion on oath by the mother that the respondent is the father, ought not to be acted upon without some independent corroboration of it, to satisfy the Court that her statement is true, 24 L.W. 409=27 Cr.L.J. 1095=97 Ind. Cas. 359. Where the mother stated on oath that the respondent was the father of the child and the respondent admitted his frequent visits to the woman's house and witnesses spoke that the petitioner was the respondent's mistress to whom he gave money and jewellery the Court will be justified in holding that the parentage of the child was proved, 12 Bur. L.R. 150=4 Cr. L.J. 39. It is the duty of the Court to find definitely the parentage of the child before awarding maintenance. It is not enough that the defendant may have been the father, Weir II, 621. Similarity of name and features of the child and the defendant cannot be taken into consideration, 16 C. 781; "child" simply means son or daughter and reference to age is purposely omitted. Maintenance can be claimed so long as son or daughter is unable to maintain itself, 11 Cr.L.J. 427=6 Ind. Cas. 960. An order awarding maintenance in respect of a child yet unborn, is illegal, Weir II, 618. If the wife fails to prove the marriage, maintenance can be recovered as for an illegitimate child if parentage is proved, 16 C. 781. A husband is bound to maintain his wife but he is not bound to do more than supply her with lodging, food and clothing; he is not bound to maintain her as his wife, 25 Cr. L.J. 1249; 16 B. 269. By maintenance it is not intended to go further than assure the wife or child with food, clothing and lodging and cannot include educational expenses, 25 Cr.L.J. 1249=82 Ind. Cas. 257; 11 Cr. L.J. 40=4 Ind. Cas. 753. The word 'child' is not defined in the Code and in the absence of any definition or anything contrary in the Code, child is a person who has not reached full age. It is only then that the child becomes competent to enter into any contract or enforce its claims. A child which had not attained the age of majority is within the meaning of this section, 37 M. 565; 26 Cr. L.J. 525=83 Ind. Cas. 376. The Code makes no restriction to the award of maintenance to illegitimate children. An illegitimate child of a Hindu born of a non-Hindu woman can claim maintenance under this section but the claim can be enforced only during the life-time of the father and ceases with his death, 27 M. 13. A father is bound to maintain his child whatever the position of the mother may be. Whether she makes the application to annoy him or not is immaterial. It is also immaterial that when the child goes to the father he gives little money. It is not necessary for a mother to prove that he had asked the father to support the child and he has refused to do so. The mere fact that it was necessary to institute proceedings may be taken to prove neglect or refusal on the part of the father. Mere sending a servant to go and ask the child to come and live with the father does not amount to any bona fide offer to support the child and cannot absolve the father from his responsibility to maintain the child, 15 Cr. L.J. 273=23 Ind. Cas. 486, following 11 Cr. L.J. 488=7 Ind. Cas. 460. A husband alone is liable for the maintenance of the wife and not the father-in-law of the woman, 4 Cr. L. Rev. 6; Cr. L.J. 110; 15 Cr. L.J. 577=25 Ind. Cas. 329; 30 Cr. L.J. 135=113 Ind. Cas. 327; 1905 P.L.R., p. 86, following 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 81.

Unable to maintain itself.—The expression 'unable to maintain itself' means unable to earn a livelihood for itself, that is to say, a complete livelihood such as an adult person might earn without depending on any other person. There is a continuing obligation upon a father who has sufficient means to maintain his child and he cannot contract himself out of that obligation. The fact that the child is not in a starving condition cannot be set up as an answer to an application for its maintenance. The essential point is that a man is bound to feed and clothe his minor offspring and he cannot be heard to say that the latter should help him to fulfill his obligation. The sum he should be ordered to pay is fixed according to his means, the status of the parties and the age of the child. No other consideration should come in. Were it otherwise, the Court in most cases will be obliged to enter upon calculations of some nicety as to the proportion of the expense which the child itself should bear. Every able-bodied boy or girl over ten years of age is a potent wage-earner. For instance, a town-bred boy of twelve or fourteen, even if attending school, might easily in his spare time earn an anna or two by hawking newspapers, but it does not follow that this should be taken into consideration in giving the sum which his father should be ordered to pay for his maintenance. A father who has sufficient means is bound to maintain his child who is under the age of majority and in fixing the sum payable no regard should be paid to the fact that the child is able to contribute to its own support by means of labour or work, 2, Ran. 682. There is some conflict of authority as to the interpretation of this expression. The interpretation of the words "unable to maintain itself" is not so simple as it appears to be. It may be said that the Legislature meant to provide for minor children and minority alone fulfilled the requirements of the section, 21 C.W.N. LXI. In 22 M. 246 and 22 M. 247 (f.n.) and 25 M.L.J. 355=1913 M.W.N. 997=14 M.L.T. 223=14 Cr. L.J. 597=21 Ind. Cas. 469, it was held that the expression meant physically unable, on account of tender years, to earn a livelihood, and therefore unable to maintain itself, but in 33 M. 937 it was held that the expression meant unable for want of sufficient means to maintain itself. The inability contemplated by this section applies as much to the case of a child which has got means of its own or which is entitled in law to be maintained, and is being maintained as in this case by some other person, as to a child which is able to earn a living by its own exertions. This is a summary procedure provided by S. 468 and it does not cover entirely the same ground as the civil liability of a father to maintain a child. It does not seem to have been within the contemplation of the Legislature that a child which is well-to-do should be entitled under S. 468 to an order for maintenance against its father—per Abdur Rahim, J., 33 M. 937 at 938, following 19 M. 461 and dissenting from 23 M.L.J. 355=1913 M.W.N. 997. This view was followed in 37 M.L.J. 361 and 46 M.L.J. 324=19 L. W. 275=1924 M.W.N. 305=25 Cr.L.J.370=77 Ind. Cas. 418. The view taken in the earlier Madras decisions that 'unable to maintain itself' refers to physical incapacity and not to property qualification of the child, seems, it is submitted, to be more reasonable and natural, regard being had to the object of the section to provide a speedy remedy for maintenance of children in a summary way and an elaborate inquiry into the property qualification of the child will in most cases frustrate the very object of the section and the intention of the Legislature. A child which is deaf and dumb is entitled to maintenance even after attaining majority, 5 N.W.P.H.C.R. 237. The mere fact that the girl to whom maintenance was awarded was subsequently married, will not necessarily make her able to maintain herself, if in spite of the marriage the husband is too poor to maintain, or for any other good reason the father's liability will still continue. 49 M. 503. All that has to be proved to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate is that the child is unable to maintain itself and the father neglected or refused to maintain it. Even a grown up child if unable to maintain itself, is entitled to maintenance from the father if he has the means, 49 M. 891 at 897. The law does not treat prostitution as a profession by which a girl may earn her livelihood and maintain herself. It is against public policy to do so 37 M. 565; 2 Ran. 682. A father cannot be compelled to educate a boy in a college and thus better his position. The liability is to maintain only, 24 Cr. L.J. 550=73 Ind. Cas. 334. A father has certain prima facie rights in regard to the custody of the children but it has been clearly laid down in 49 B. 562 that a Magistrate is entitled to consider the circumstances in which the father's offer to maintain his children is made and whether it is right and proper that children if not in his custody should be made over to him, 30 Bom. L. R. 938 at 961. When a father is ready to keep his minor children with him and maintain them, there is no reason to withhold them from him on the ground that the children are of tender years of six and two and in directing to pay maintenance, 27 Cr. L. J. 1319=93 Ind. Cas. 391 following 1894 P. R. (Cr. J.) 18; 18 Cr. L. J. 811=41 Ind. Cas. 331; 8 B.L.R. Ap. 19=16 W.R.(Cr.) 72; 15 Cr. L. J. 529=24 Ind. Cas. 841. A minor child living with a duly constituted guardian other than the father cannot be refused maintenance merely on the ground of the offer of the father to maintain the child if the latter comes and lives with him, 9 Lah 313 at 316, following 25 M.L.J. 355=14 M.L.T. 223=14 Cr. L.J. 557=21 Ind. Cas. 469 and 13 A.L.J. 636=16 Cr. L.J. 656=30 Ind. Cas. 480.*

The District Magistrate, etc.—The expression 'District Magistrate' refers to magistrates of the particular District in which the person proceeded against resides, 9 B. 40. Under this section maintenance cases must be tried only by the classes of Magistrates therein mentioned and any order for maintenance passed by a Magistrate not empowered in this behalf shall be void, S. 530, cl. (n), infra.

Upon proof of such neglect or refusal—Before a Magistrate makes an order under this section he must find that the husband has neglected and refused to maintain his wife or child, 16 B. 269; 6 N.W.P.H.C.R. 205; 3 Cr. L.J. 428. Neglect or refusal to maintain may be by words or conduct. It may be express or implied, 9 Bom. L.R. 359, 5 Bom. L.R. 614. Evidence must be recorded by the Magistrate himself and he is not competent to refer it to a Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry under S. 202, supra, Weir II 617; 11 M. 199. Sub-section (6) provides that evidence shall be recorded as in summons-cases and S. 355, supra, regulates the mode of recording evidence. Proceedings cannot be conducted as in a summary trial, 20 C. 351. "Proof" means legal proof on oath, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 19, and similarity of features of the child with its alleged putative father is not sufficient evidence, 16 C. 781.

May make a monthly allowance.—The use of the word "may" as distinguished from "shall" shows that the Magistrate has a discretion to decide in what cases the award of maintenance may properly be made. No doubt the discretion must be exercised judicially and reasonably and not capriciously, 31 M. 183. A Magistrate has no power to award anything but an allowance for maintenance. The husband cannot be ordered to provide a house for the wife to live in, 29 Cr. L. J. 909=111 Ind. Cas. 669. A man is bound to maintain his legitimate or illegitimate child but he is not bound to maintain the child of his wife by het former husband, 7 Lah. 365. The Magistrate 'may' and not 'shall' make an order. He has a discretion to consider and be guided by the social ideas and feelings of the community to which the parties belong, 20 M. 470 (F.B.) at 476, followed in 31 M. 183. Where the Magistrate exercised a judicial discretion in refusing maintenance, the High Court will not interfere with the order in revision, 31 M. 183. The proceedings of the Probate Division in England do not control the jurisdiction of the Magistrates in India, and the existence of an order to pay alimony is no bar to the Magistrate making an order under this section on the application of the wife if the husband neglects or refuses to maintain either by payment of alimony or otherwise, 49 M. 891 at 896. Similarly a decree for maintenance of a Civil Court which cannot be executed owing to the insolvency of the husband is no bar to proceeding for maintenance under this section. A mere decree of a Civil Court awarding maintenance is not equivalent to maintaining the wife, 31 Bom L.R. 1366 following 49 M. 891 and distinguishing, 50 C. 867. In fixing the amount, no luxury should be allowed, but only necessities of life should be considered, according to the station in life of the applicant and the means of the respondent, 13 Cr. L.J. 55=13 Ind. Cas. 381. The payment must be a monthly payment and in cash. An order directing the giving of two clothes annually, Weir II, 627, or grain Weir II, 626, 627, is not legal. So also an order directing a mixed payment in kind and in cash, 26 Bom. L.R. 136=25 Cr. L.J. 965=81 Ind. Cas. 613. An order directing the husband to give his wife twelve maunds of grain each harvest season and to provide her with a separate house is illegal, 25 Cr. L.J. 1271=82 Ind. Cas. 27. So also a conditional order that the husband do pay a fixed sum if after taking back the wife home he fails to maintain her or turns her out of the home, 7 Lah. 313, following Weir II, 630 and 18 Cr. L.J. 528=39 Ind. Cas. 496, or a conditional order that the wife should reside in the village of her husband, 30 Cr. L.J. 51=113 Ind. Cas. 67. A Court enforcing an order for maintenance cannot apportion the maintenance allowance between the mother and child when the original order, did not allot any particular portion for the mother or the child. The remedy, if the mother wants an apportionment, is to make an application for allotting her a separate allowance, 8 L. B. R. 49.

Not exceeding one hundred rupees in the whole.—The amount awardable under this section cannot exceed rupees one hundred per mensem in the case of a single individual and an order awarding rupees one hundred and fifty in favour of a wife is without jurisdiction even though the husband acquiesced in the same for some time, 23 Bom. L.R. 1298=28 Cr. L.J. 51=99 Ind. Cas. 83. The words 'in the whole' mean that only a sum of money not exceeding one hundred rupees should be ordered to be paid and no other payment either in the shape of fees or medical expenses, etc., should be ordered to be paid, nor can the Magistrate order the husband to provide a house for the wife 23 Cr. L.J. 1271=82 Ind. Cas. 279. It is to prevent the Magistrate making an order that the husband should pay so much for the schooling of children or so much for clothing or so much for medical expenses, and so on, that the words 'in the whole' has been put into the section, 49 M. 891 at 896. If a man has the luxury of more wives than one, his liability to maintain them is not lessened thereby. Every wife and every legitimate child and every illegitimate child can be awarded up to rupees one hundred as maintenance, provided the husband or the father has the means to pay. Where a wife and her two children were awarded one hundred rupees each, in all amounting to rupees three hundred, it was held that the order was not ultra vires as the maximum of rupees one hundred fixed by the section is the maximum awardable to each of the applicants, 49 M. 891; 19 L.W. 530=1924 M.W.N. 465=25 Cr. L.J. 94=76 Ind. Cas. 30.

Pay to such person as the Magistrate, from time to time, directs.—An order directing payment of a maintenance allowance into a public treasury is not legal, Weir II, 627 and the payment must be to the person in whose favour the order is made or to such other person as the Magistrate directs.

Sub-section (2).—The allowance can be made at the most from the date of the application for maintenance and cannot be given retrospective effect, Weir II, 633. The Magistrate has no power to make an order under this sub-section for the payment of any sum for a period prior to the date on which the application for maintenance is filed, 7 Lah. 363. A Magistrate can order payment of maintenance in advance from the date of his order.

It is only reasonable to supply the woman or child with means of subsistence for the time to come and not for the time past. This is clear from the wording of the section 'shall be payable from the date of the order,' Ratanlal 189.

Sub-section (3).—The words "wilfully neglect" have been omitted and the words "fails without sufficient cause" have been substituted for the same. The Legislature has deliberately used the expression "sufficient cause" obviously intending the Magistrate should be in a position to use his judicial discretion having regard to all the circumstances, and such judicial discretion should not be fettered or limited by any definite rule. The circumstances of each particular case should be considered in determining judicially whether there is or there is not sufficient cause, 43 M. L. J. 494 = 21 L. W. 702 = 26 Cr. L. J. 253 = 87 Ind. Cas. 105. A husband against whom an order has been made when adjudicated an insolvent cannot be proceeded against for failure to pay arrears due to the wife for maintenance; he being unable to pay his debts, his failure cannot be held to be a failure without sufficient cause, 50 C. 867, but this decision in 50 C. 867, is distinguished, in 31 Bom. L. R. 1366 at 1368 on the ground that the case is no authority on the question of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to pass an order under sub-section (1) supra, in case the husband has applied for insolvency and neglected to maintain his wife and there is also a change in the language in this sub-section from 'fails without sufficient cause' to 'wilfully neglects.' An order for maintenance can be enforced by the Magistrate who passed the order even though the person proceeded against resides within the jurisdiction of another Magistrate and a Magistrate acts illegally in returning the application, 52 M. 77. A Magistrate may himself issue a warrant for the collection of arrears of maintenance or refer the applicant to a Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the defendant is to be found, 4 M. 230. This sub-section authorises the Magistrate to issue a warrant for the levy of the amount in the manner provided in B. 386, supra, for the levy of fines, i. e., by distress and sale of any moveables of the person asked to pay the allowance. A police officer to whom the warrant is addressed in executing the warrant can break open inner-door of the house of the person whose moveables are to be attached and seize the moveables locked up by him and by doing so the police-officer acts legally, Ratanlal 431, and the new proviso fixes a period of one year within which an application for arrears of maintenance should be made. The maximum imprisonment will be for one month and it shall cease on payment of the amount due. There is nothing in this clause which compels the Criminal Court to award separate maintenance to a wife whom the husband agrees to protect in a suitable manner because he refuses to cohabit with her, 42 M. L. J. 566 = 5 L. W. 535. Where the husband offers to maintain his wife, the Magistrate must comply with requirements of this proviso, 27 Cr. L. J. 228 = 16 Ind. Cas. 394, where 16 B. 269 is approved. The first proviso to this sub-section does not apply to orders directing maintenance to children and such an order cannot be superseded by a decree for restitution of conjugal rights against the wife the father not being appointed guardian of the children, 1 Cr. L. Rev. 368. The proviso to this and sub-section (4) refers only to wives and cannot be extended to children. Where an order is obtained by the wife for herself and her children, any decree which the husband obtains against the wife for restitution of conjugal rights will not absolve him from the order to pay maintenance on behalf of the children, 14 Cr. L. J. 95 = 18 Ind. Cas. 658 where 23 B. 484; 27 A. 483 are referred to. See also 46 A. 877. The offer of the husband to supply the wife with food, clothing and separate residence or to admit her into his own house is sufficient. He need not agree to keep the wife with him as his wife. No authority is given for the proposition that the words "as his wife" must be read into the section. Criminal Courts have no sufficient machinery to direct domestic arrangements, or control the domestic rules of pater familias, 16 B. 269 at 274-275. The second proviso enacts that no warrant for arrears of maintenance shall be issued unless the application is made within one year of the amount falling due. For enforcement of orders passed in British India of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's Dominions and Protectorates and vice versa (see Act XVIII of 1921), Maintenance Orders Enforcement Act). See also 52 B. 252.

May consider grounds of refusal stated by her.—In dealing with the question whether a wife is justified in living apart we must consider the civil law applicable to the parties, e.g., Hindu Law, if the parties are Hindus. It is the duty of a woman to reside with her husband and it is her correlative right to be maintained by him under his roof, 16 B. 269 at 273; 30 Bom. L.R. 958 at 960=29 Cr. L.J. 1049=112 Ind. Cas. 473 following 9 B. 40. The mere fact that a Christian husband has become a convert to Judaism will not entitle the Christian wife living apart from her husband and claim separate maintenance so long as the Jewish husband allows his Christian wife to practice her own religion and does not press her to abandon her religion or to adopt his religion, she has no right to leave her husband, 27 Cr. L.J. 1177=97 Ind. Cas. 809. Concubinage is within certain limits recognised by Hindu and Mahomedan Law and is not in all circumstances to be reprobated by the public opinion of the communities. Keeping a concubine is not necessarily and in all circumstances to be regarded by the Magistrate as a sufficient cause for a woman to refuse to live with her husband though it is equally clear that the Magistrate may in certain cases regard it as a sufficient reason and award separate maintenance. The Magistrate must be guided by all the facts and circumstances of each case and with due regard to the social ideas and customs of the community to which the parties belong, 20 M. 470 at 476 (F.B.). Where the husband offers to maintain his wife, it is the duty of the Magistrate to ask the wife whether she is prepared to accept the offer and live with the husband and if she refuses, then to consider the grounds of her refusal and any order passed for maintenance without a consideration of these questions, of offer, refusal and the grounds of refusal are bad in law, 9 Cr. L.J. 501=2 Ind. Cas. 153, followed in 27 Cr. L.J. 1319=93 Ind. Cas. 331. Amongst the Hindu community concubinage is recognised and it is possible for a concubine to have a certain status. If, therefore a husband keeps a concubine in his house apart from his wife, it is doubtful whether such an act would entitle the wife to separate maintenance. But if he kept such a concubine in the same house as his wife lived, and against the wishes, or in such a manner as to offend the self-respect of his wife, that would entitle the wife to separate maintenance under this section, 20 M. 470 at 472. The question in each case will be whether the conduct of the husband is such as the wife consistently with self-respect and due regard to her position as wife, can live in the house of the husband. If this is possible and the husband is willing to receive her, the Magistrate may refuse separate maintenance, Ibid at 473.

If he is satisfied that there is a just ground for so doing,—It is to be noticed that in the earlier Act the words were "that he habitually treats his wife with cruelty" and these words have now been omitted in the present Code and the words "that there is just ground for so doing" have been substituted. The result of the amendment is that under the present Code the right of the wife who is living separately from the husband is not restricted to payment of maintenance to Cases in which she has been treated by her husband with habitual cruelty. The words "just ground" invest the Magistrate with larger discretion in the matter of granting maintenance under this section. Habitual cruelty may be a just ground but there may be other grounds apart from habitual cruelty which may be taken into account in awarding maintenance. 27 A. L.J. 1233 at 1210.

Sub-section (4).—This sub-section and sub-section (5) qualify the wide words of sub-section (1) to the extent that the wife is not bound to accept an offer for separate maintenance and residence by the husband. She can of course agree to it and if by mutual consent they are living separately up to the time of the application there would be a clear ground for refusal to make an order in her favour. It is only when she refuses the offer of the husband, she has to show sufficient cause for such refusal for getting an order in her favour and it is not necessary for the wife to show sufficient cause where the refusal is not of the offer to live with the husband but for separate residence, 52 B. 763. The provision of this sub-section does not authorise a Magistrate to entertain an application for separate maintenance by the wife who had, of her own accord, left her husband's house and protection. She must prove that there is just ground for her living away from her husband. In 23 C. 75, it was held that the duty imposed upon a Hindu wife to reside with her husband wherever he may choose to reside is a rule of Hindu Law and not merely a moral duty. Mayne on Hindu Law says, "As soon as the wife is mature her home is necessarily her husband's house. He is bound to maintain her in it while she is willing to reside with him and to perform her duties,

If she quits him of her own accord, either without cause or on account of such ordinary quarrels as are incidental to married life in general, she can set up no claim to separate maintenance. Nothing will justify her in leaving her home except such violence as renders it unsafe to her to continue there, or such continued ill-usage as would be termed cruelty in an English matrimonial Court." A wife who dictates her terms to her husband who is willing to maintain her in his home cannot demand separate maintenance from him, 30 Cr. L.J. 861=117 Ind. Cas. 903. The husband marrying a second wife is no ground for the wife living away from her husband, 7 M. 187; 23 Cr. L.J. 235=99 Ind. Cas. 1036; 27 Cr. L.J. 507=93 Ind. Cas. 971; 29 Cr. L.J. 895=111 Ind. Cas. 575, but marriage by a Mahomedan with the wife's step mother is a sufficient cause, as such marriage is prohibited by Mahomedan law, Weir II, 647. It was held in 20 M. 470 (F.B.) that adultery on the part of the husband may constitute a sufficient cause for the wife living away from the husband. Unless continuance of conduct is established it cannot be inferred from a single act of adultery that the woman is living in adultery. Although a woman has given birth to an illegitimate child, it is open to a Magistrate to find that apart from that circumstance she is not living in adultery within this sub-section, 29 C.W.N. 647=26 Cr. L.J. 1185=88 Ind. Cas. 608. The right of a wife to maintenance is not lost because she makes a false or scandalous allegation against her husband which must have been very annoying to him and subsequent proceedings may also show that there was no foundation for such scandalous allegations made by the wife. But that would not by itself justify the husband in denying his wife's right or insisting that the allegation should be unconditionally withdrawn in open Court before he would agree to maintain her. 52 B. 262. What the law contemplates by this sub-section is well recognized in affiliation proceedings between husband and wife under the English law, vis., where husband and wife have lived apart by a definite contract mutually made between them, then affiliation proceedings are inapplicable. A contract voluntarily and freely made between them and entered into by reason of the ill-treatment of the husband towards his wife would be an act of their own volition. If the parties separated under such terms, so that neither should molest the other and that both should be free to live and go where and whither they respectively wished, such an agreement would be a voluntary act and contract by the parties themselves, unfettered by the decree or declaration of any tribunal, 4 Pat. L.J. 109 at 112-113. Where a husband and wife are living apart in obedience to the arbitration of a panchayat of their caste men by which the wife was given a stipend as maintenance, it cannot be said that they are living apart by mutual consent. When once it is proved that the parties are living separately by mutual consent the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this section. Under this sub-section a wife living in adultery is not entitled to receive maintenance from her husband but the fact of living in adultery will not automatically deprive her of the right until the order that has been made is cancelled by the Court. An order cancelling maintenance cannot have retrospective effect and deprive her of the right to receive arrears which had accrued due prior to such cancellation, 30 Cr. L.J. 719=117 Ind. Cas. 67. Before an order for maintenance in favour of a wife can be disturbed the husband has to show under this sub-section how she became disentitled to the allowance. A solitary act of adultery will not so disentitle her, 30 Cr. L.J. 403=115 Ind. Cas. 161.

Sub-section (5).—This sub-section seems to deal with proof of facts which may have occurred subsequent to the order for maintenance being passed. It is a general principle of law that an order whose term is not fixed, and whose currency is not made expressly dependent upon the continued existence of certain circumstances or sets of circumstances, remains in force until it is cancelled; and prima facie this rule applies to orders for maintenance under this section. This sub-section provides that in certain specified circumstances, where the wife is living in adultery, where without sufficient cause she refuses to live with her husband or where the parties are living separately by mutual consent, the Magistrate shall cancel the order under S. 489 infra; it is open to the Court to alter the order, but it is for the husband to obtain a cancellation or alteration of the order and until that is done the original order remains in force. The mere fact that the wife had returned and lived with the husband for some time would not have the effect of automatically cancelling the original order, 50 M. 663 at 665 where 19 A. 50; 37 C.L.J. 180=24 Cr. L.J. 945=75 Ind. Cas. 522;

8 C.W.N. 210 are not followed. An order for maintenance once passed remains in force until it is cancelled by the Court, even though the wife came back and lived with the husband subsequently for a long time by some arrangement between them. In such a case it is the duty of the husband under this sub-section to have the order cancelled if he wishes to question the binding character of the original order, 38 M.L.T. 13=25 Cr. L.J. 237=99 Ind. Cas. 1037. A mere temporary stay of the wife, who had obtained an order for separate maintenance, with her husband for a few months will not have the effect of cancelling the order for maintenance although such stay may have the effect of suspending it, 37 C.L.J. 280=25 Cr. L.J. 945=75 Ind. Cas. 529. Mere second marriage will not justify first wife's refusal to live with her husband, 27 Cr. L.J. 507=93 Ind. Cas. 971, especially where a plurality of wives is allowed by Hindu and Mahomedan law, 29 Cr. L.J. 815=111 Ind. Cas. 575; 28 Cr. L.J. 236=99 Ind. Cas. 1036; see also 7 M. 187. Where a husband marries a second wife and offers to provide a separate residence for his first wife and she refuses to accept that offer, she cannot be said to refuse to live with her husband within this sub-section, 25 Cr. L.J. 453=77 Ind. Cas. 805. Adultery as contemplated by this section is the popular sense of the term, i.e., breach of the matrimonial tie by either party. The words "living in adultery" mean something more than a single act of adultery as these words refer rather to a course of conduct, 27 Cr. L.J. 1190=97 Ind. Cas. 930; 52 B. 160. A single act of adultery does not amount to living in adultery within this sub-section and will not justify refusal of maintenance. The construction put on the words living in adultery is the natural one. The significant present tense 'living' is used. The fact that in such a case the wife does not come to court with absolutely clean hands cannot affect her right. Under Hindu law also, a wife though leading an impure life cannot altogether be abandoned by the husband, 52 B. 160, following 29 Cr. L.J. 314=109 Ind. Cas. 24; 30 M. 332; 26 A. 326; 29 C.W.N. 647; 34 B. 278 at 293. The words "living in adultery" refer rather to a course of conduct or at least something more than a single lapse from virtue. The words point to a continuous course of conduct and not to isolated acts of immorality. Conduct which according to western notions could be condemned as a breach of marital obligation is not so condemned either by Hindus or Mahomedans, 20 M. 470 at 473 476. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 1190=97 Ind. Cas. 930. Therefore a single act of adultery does not necessarily amount to "living in adultery" so as to disentitle the wife from applying for maintenance, 30 M. 332 where 20 M. 470; 26 A. 326 are referred to. But a single act of misconduct may justify a husband to live away from his wife but it will not release him from his obligation to pay her maintenance, 27 Cr. L.J. 1190=97 Ind. Cas. 930. Where a single act of adultery by the wife was with a low caste-man entailing social ex-communication from caste, it was held that the Magistrate was justified in refusing maintenance to the wife, 34 M. 183; 27 Cr. L.J. 1190=97 Ind. Cas. 930. An order for maintenance passed in favour of a wife may be cancelled on proof of adultery, 8 B.H.C.N. (Cr. Ca.) 124; 5 A. 224; 24 C. 635. Where a wife lived with a paramour for 9 years, a strong presumption arises of her living in adultery and she must prove her chastity to entitle her to maintenance. Cr. R. C. 590 of 1929 (M. H. C.).

Sub-section (6)—It is not laid down in this sub-section that the procedure at the hearing of the application shall be the same as in the trial of summons-cases. All that is stated here is, that all evidence under this Chapter . . . shall be recorded in the manner prescribed in the case of summons-cases. This refers back to S. 355, supra, which prescribes that a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness shall be made as the examination proceeds in contradiction to the provisions of S. 356, supra, which prescribes a different manner for the record of evidence in other cases, 1903 P.R. (Cr. J) 163 p. 554; 23 Cr. L.J. 478=101 Ind. Cas. 606. Evidence ought to be taken in the presence of the father or the husband or his pleader unless he is wilfully avoiding the service of summons. The petition cannot be referred to a Subordinate Magistrate to take evidence and report upon the facts stated in the petition and no order can be passed by a first class Magistrate for maintenance in the absence of the husband, 11 M. 199; 1 C.L.J. 102; Weir, II, 628. Evidence should be recorded as provided in S. 355, supra, and the procedure is as in summons-cases. The provisions of S. 342, supra, as to questioning the accused do not apply to proceedings under this section which are more of a civil nature and the person proceeded against is entitled to give evidence on oath, 52 B. 768, following 25 Cr. L.J. 1091=81 Ind. Cas. 915; see also 9 Lah. 313. Any separate order for maintenance made may, for good cause shown on application made within three months from the date, be set aside. An order cannot be enforced after the death of the person against whom the order was passed. From the language of the sub-section it is quite clear that in the mind of the Legislature the instance of the deceased person, against whose estate arrears of maintenance may be claimed was never present, 17 C.W.N. 1130=2 Cr. L. Rev. 247 at 248. The proviso to this sub-section empowers a Magistrate to re-open a case in which an order for maintenance had been made by his predecessor and to revise that order if a petition for the same is presented within 3 months of the date of the original order and the original order is made ex parte without effecting personal service of notice, 24 Cr. L.J. 923=75 Ind. Cas. 304.

Dispense with personal attendance.—A Magistrate has a discretion in an application under this section to dispense with the personal attendance of the applicant when she is a pardanashin lady. Such applications are not complaints within S. 4 (1) (b) supra, and it is not laid down that the whole procedure is to be that of a summons-case and the section itself recites in the first para that the Magistrate may give relief upon "proof" of such neglect or refusal. Very obviously in regard to one class of cases coming under this section, vis., the case of an infant child, it is not intended to insist on the personal attendance of the person in whose favour the order is to be made which is nowhere laid down in the section and exemption from personal attendance even of the person against whom the application is made is specifically provided in this sub-section. Of course an applicant absenting herself may run a greater risk of having her application dismissed but that is a different matter for her own consideration, 1903 P.R. (Cr. J.) 158 p. 663.

Sub-section (7).—Power is herein given to award costs as in proceedings under Chapter XII, S. 148, supra, but it was held in 48 M. 262 (F.B.) that the High Court in revision cannot award costs. The Magistrate passing the decision is alone entitled to award costs. Similarly the High Court in revision under this section will not be entitled to pass orders as to costs and the question was not argued and considered in 49 M. 891, where costs were awarded. The reasoning of the Full Bench may apply to these proceedings also. It is submitted that the language used in this sub-section 'the Court in dealing with applications under this section shall have power to make such order as to costs as may be just' is not restricted as in S. 148 (3) to the effect 'the Magistrate passing a decision under S. 145 may direct by whom costs shall be paid.' The High Court in revision, can be said without violence to the language used, to be the Court dealing with application under this section and it may have power to award costs. See 29 Cr. L.J. 1177 at 1179=97 Ind. Cas. 809; where costs in revision were refused.

Sub-section (8).—The first process calling upon the husband or father to maintain his wife or child should be sought in the District in which the obligation to maintain (and the breach of the obligation took place) is prima facie to be fulfilled, i.e., in the District in which the husband or father resides. Such duty and correlative right cannot be altered by anything stated ex-parte by the wife when applying for a summons 24 C. 638, following 9 B. 40 at 43. The jurisdiction is to be exercised ordinarily in the District where the party against whom an order for maintenance is sought has his residence, 9 B. 40; 1894 A.W.N. 153; 24 C. 638; 1 C.W.N. 577; 1893 P.R. (Cr. J.) 5; 1895 P.R. (Cr. J.) 13; but where the wife was compelled by the husband's conduct to choose her own place of residence then the Court of that place where she resided, 13 A. 343; 5 N.W.P.H.C.R. 237. It is the duty of the wife to reside with the husband and it is her correlative right to be maintained by him under his roof. The term "Reside" means primarily to have a settled abode for a time. But a man may reside or have a settled abode at a place where his family or his servants eat, drink, or sleep. In 1 A. 51, it was held that a soldier who travels about from place to place with his regiment, has his dwelling place where his family lived and whither he had the intention of returning. A man may therefore be said to reside with his wife at any place where his wife has a settled abode and is not necessary that he himself should live there permanently or ordinarily, provided he has the intention of going there and living there when opportunity occurs. Though 'reside' connotes a stay for sometime no minimum time has been laid down as a 'qualification. In 38 C. 963 the parties were held to have resided together for purposes of the Divorce Act at a Calcutta hotel for about a fortnight, they having no permanent residence. In the case of a kept mistress it cannot reasonably be demanded that the nature of the residence of the man should be more permanent than in the case of a lawful husband. A man may be said to reside with the mother of illegitimate children if he visits her only occasionally at her settled place so long as he has the intention to continue his visits. A period of two months was considered to be a sufficient stay to constitute residence for the purpose of this section, it being not shown that the woman had any permanent residence, 13 Cr. L.J. 522=15 Ind. Cas. 799. Temporary residence within jurisdiction of Magistrate when the application is made is sufficient to give jurisdiction, 21 C.W.N. 873; 8 M. 205; 36 C. 564. In cases where the husband and wife have a fixed abode or permanent place of residence, a temporary residence in any other place will not confer jurisdiction on the Magistrate at that place under this sub-section but where the parties have no fixed abode and no permanent residence, casual residence at a particular place, say, for eight days for procuring an employment there, will give the Magistrate of that place jurisdiction to entertain an application under this section, 31 Bom. L.R. 931, referring to 33 A. 203 (F.B.); 35 C. 964; 45 B. 547; 25 Bom. L.R. 178 and following 21 C.W.N. 872 and distinguishing 27 Cr. L.J. 820=93 Ind. Cas. 594. Where a wife returning from a short visit to her sister found her husband living with another woman in the house and left the house immediately for another District where she claimed maintenance, it was held that refusal to maintain was a breach committed at the place where the application was made and the Magistrate had jurisdiction to pass an order under this section, 13 A. 343; 5 N.W.P.H.C.R. 237. A Magistrate may himself issue a warrant for the collection of arrears or refer the applicant to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the man is to be found, 4 M. 239. The fact that the parties were married within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate will not be sufficient to confer jurisdiction on the Magistrate to act under this section 27, Cr. L.J. 1009=58 Ind. Cas. 865. The words "last resided" occurring in this sub-section do not refer to a mere casual residence in a place for a temporary purpose with no intention of remaining there. Where the wife residing with her father in G District is visited sometimes by the husband residing in J District in the father's house in G District, the Magistrate in G District had jurisdiction to entertain the wife's application under this section as the husband and wife last resided in that district when they met in the wife's father's house, 29 Cr. L.J. 897=110 Ind. Cas. 239. Where a husband was employed as a carpenter in the Railway Workshop at Lahore and has been residing there continuously for several years, a temporary sojourn or a temporary stay at Lucknow with his wife will not confer jurisdiction on the Magistrate at Lucknow to entertain an application for maintenance, 1 Luck. 393; 32 A. 203; 36 C. 964; 45 B. 547 are referred to. A flying visit to attend to business in a lodge of freemasons cannot amount to residence. A person may have a permanent residence and also a temporary one. The point at which a visit or a stay becomes capable of being held a residence is one difficult to define. A stay for two months in a temporary place with occasional visits to the permanent place of residence is sufficient residence within this section. The expression 'resided' will include a temporary residence and is not confined to a permanent residence, 25 A.L.J. 435=28 Cr. L.J. 494=101 Ind. Cas. 670. An order passed under this section by a Magistrate who is otherwise competent to do so would not be vitiated by the mere fact that proceedings were held in a wrong district. S. 531 (a) will apply to such a case, 49 C.L.J. 205=30 Cr. L.J. 525=115 Ind. Cas. 602.

Appeal and Revision.—No appeal lies from an order of the Magistrate under this section, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 40; 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. CA.) 81; 28 M.L.J. 583. The High Court in its revisional jurisdiction may set aside an illegal order; see 40 Cr. L.J. 609=30 Ind. Cas. 433; 18 B. 269.

Review.—Whether the provisions of S. 369, supra, which appears in Chapter XXVI apply in terms to orders passed under the section or apply only to cases of judgments in trials terminating in either conviction or acquittal, it is unnecessary to decide. Even if S. 369 supra did not apply in terms, the principle laid down in that section applies, as proceedings under this section are judicial and the final order or reasons given for a final order under this section is in effect a judgment and cannot be reviewed, 21 C.W.N. 344=18 Cr. L.J. 556=30

Ind. Cas. 700. Apart from any change in circumstances which could be the basis of a new order under S. 482, infra, the Magistrate cannot review the original order under this section as S. 369, supra, precludes such a course, 30 Bom. L.R. 617=29 Cr. L.J. 903=111 Ind. Cas. 668. The rejection of an application in one District for want of jurisdiction is no bar to the renewal of the application in the proper District, 5 N.W.P.H.C.R. 237; 9 B. 40. When an application under this section was dismissed for default and not on the merits a second application will lie as there is nothing in the section which bars a second application, 30 C. L.J. 128.

Further Inquiry.—When an application under this section is dismissed, no further inquiry under S. 486, supra, can be ordered, 25 A. 545; see 1 C.L.J. 102.

Civil Suit not barred.—The order of a Magistrate awarding maintenance did not take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to make a declaration under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. The decree of the Civil Court being final, it is binding upon the parties to it and the husband who is ordered to pay maintenance by the Magistrate is entitled to insist that the Magistrate's order is not enforced. It is not open to the Magistrate to ignore the final decree of the Civil Court on the ground that it rests on reasons which do not appear to him to be satisfactory, the jurisdiction vested in him being auxiliary to that of the Civil Court. This will not preclude the interference of the Magistrate, if there should arise any fresh causes for such interference, Welr. II, 615; 33 M.L.J. 459; 20 M.L.J. 12; 2 M.L.T. 344=7 Cr. L.J. 235; 46 M. 721; 18 L.W. 132; 43 A. 835; 27 B. 493. See the new sub-section (2) to S. 489 infra. But it is not competent to a Civil Court to make a decree setting aside an order for maintenance, passed by a Magistrate, Welr. II, 614; nor can the Civil Court grant an injunction restraining the Magistrate from enforcing his order, 14 C. 276.

489. (1) On proof of a change in the circumstances of any person receiving under section 488 a monthly allowance, or ordered under the same section to pay a monthly allowance to his wife or child, the Magistrate may make such alteration in the allowance as he thinks fit:

Alteration in allowance.

Provided that if he increases the allowance the monthly rate of one hundred rupees in the whole be not exceeded.

(2) Where it appears to the Magistrate that in consequence of any decision of a competent Civil Court, any order made under section 488 should be cancelled or varied, he shall cancel the order or, as the case may be, vary the same accordingly.

Amendment—In sub-section (1) the monthly allowance has been raised to rupees one hundred consequent on the change in S. 488, sub-section (1); sub-section (2) has been newly added to explain the change of circumstances recognising Civil Court's decree as a ground for cancelling or varying the order awarding maintenance which depended before, on judicial decisions under this section. See 45 M. 721; 43 B. 835; 14 C. 276; 27 A. 433.

On proof of change of circumstances.—The change in the circumstances referred to is a change in the pecuniary or other circumstances of the party paying or receiving the allowance, which would justify an increase or decrease of the amount originally fixed and not a change in the status of the parties which would entail the stoppage of the allowance, or the expiry of the period of iddat where the parties are Mahomedans and an irrevocable divorce is pronounced, (20 M.L.J. 12=10 Cr. L.J. 502=3 Ind. Cas. 440; 21 Cr. L.J. 503=56 Ind. Cas. 663.) 19 A. 50 (F.B.). This section does not refer to a change in the status of the parties but only contemplates a change in the financial circumstances of the person affected by the order, 30 Bom. L.R. 617=29 Cr. L.J. 903=111 Ind. Cas. 663. following 19 A. 50 (F.B.) but the question of a valid divorce being effected between the parties can be raised whenever the husband is called upon to show cause why he has not complied with the order to pay the allowance, 30 Bom. L.R. 617=29 Cr. L.J. 909=111 Ind. Cas. 668. A Magistrate is entitled to alter the rate of monthly allowance, for example, when the child gets older, or the birth of another child or by the death of a child, 12 C. 535, 14 M. 398, or that the girl had been married, Weir II, 630. The fact that a child in whose favour an order for maintenance is made is able to maintain itself or the fact that the amount available for a farward becomes insufficient to maintain the children would be a sufficient change of circumstance, 37 M. L.J. 361; 19 L.W. 275. The fact that a Mahomedan wife got a decree for divorce after the order for maintenance and married a second husband will not be a change in the circumstance, absolving the first husband from his duty to maintain his children, 27 A. 11, but if there is a valid divorce that affects the change of status which renders the order for payment of maintenance inoperative after the date of such divorce and if the husband adduces satisfactory evidence of such a valid divorce then the Magistrate may act on such evidence, 30 Bom. L.R. 617=29 Cr. L.J. 909=111 Ind. Cas. 668. The fact that the wife might possibly be able to earn something by her own labour is not a change in the circumstance, 1887 A.W.N. 107. An agreement by parties subsequent to an order for maintenance modifying in terms will entitle the party interested to apply and get the original order altered, 23 A. 165. The mere fact that a minor daughter who had been awarded maintenance has been subsequently married does not disentitle the Magistrate to cancel the order. The question will really be whether the altered circumstances are such that the child has become able to maintain itself by reason of her marriage and cease to depend on the original maintenance. If in spite of the marriage the child still remains unable to maintain itself, either because the husband is too poor to maintain her or for any other good reason, the father's liability still subsists, 43 M. 303. If a husband can object to the enforcement of the order for maintenance relying on his having divorced his wife as in, 19 A. 50 (F.B.) there appears to be no reason why a father should not be entitled to object to payment to the child when the child for whose maintenance he was ordered to pay had become able to maintain himself. The foundation of the order was taken away when he became able to maintain himself and so far he was concerned the order had spent itself and become unenforceable, 18 Cr. L.J. 103=37 Ind. Cas. 311. Without proof of change of circumstances and without an application by a party a Magistrate of his own motion has no power to alter the order of maintenance to a lower scale, Weir II, 623. A Magistrate hearing an application for alteration of the rate of maintenance under this section cannot go into the question whether at the time of the original order and at the time of the first application the husband had sufficient means to pay, because by so doing he would be in effect reviewing the previous order of the Court contrary to the provisions of S. 509 supra. When an order for maintenance is once passed, apart from any change of circumstances which could form the basis of a new order under the section, the Magistrate has no power to review the previous order by inquiring into the sufficiency of the means of the husband, 30 Bom. L.R. 617 at 620=29 Cr. L.J. 909=111 Ind. Cas. 668.

The Magistrate may make such alteration.—These words preceded by the word wife and followed as they are by a limitation as to the amount of the monthly allowance, clearly indicate that the alteration in the allowance contemplated by the section only refers to a power to alter the amount and not to a total discontinuance thereof, 5 A. 228 at 228; 5 C. 558; 1885 A.W.N. 29, 8 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Cas.) 95; 7 B. 180; 14 C. 278. An order under S. 483, supra, cannot be cancelled on the ground that the marriage was null and void as no evidence as to the illegality of the marriage can be adduced in the lower Court and the proper remedy of the husband in such a case is to move the matrimonial Court to declare that the marriage was null and void, 28 Bom. L.R. 1293=23 Cr. L.J. 31=99 Ind. Cas. 83, but now sub-section (2) expressly permits a total discontinuance of the maintenance awarded. A Magistrate has no power to reduce the amount of maintenance under this section which has already accrued due. The reduction will be limited only to payments accruing due after the date of the order, Weir II, 630; 21 C. 281. When the parties make an agreement subsequent to the order modifying its terms, it will be competent to the party's interest to apply under this section and get the order altered, 23 A. 165. A Magistrate is competent when varying the rate of maintenance under this section to give effect to his order from the date of the application for maintenance, 27 Cr. L.J. 940=96 Ind. Cas. 396. The word "alter" is not used in any restricted meaning. The reduction of the maintenance awarded to nothing, would also come within the meaning of the word "alteration."

Sub-section (2)—This is in accordance with the decisions in 45 M. 721; 18 L.W. 132; 5 C. 553; 14 C. 276; 7 B. 180; 43 B. 685; Weir II, 614, 615; 27 A. 433; 15 A. 143, 23 B. 434; 33 M.L.J. 449=1918 M.W.N. 65=6 L.W. 536=22 M.L.T. 29 and various other decisions. Under this sub-section it is competent for a Magistrate to cancel or vary an order for maintenance, if he thinks that it should be cancelled or varied in consequence of any decision of a competent Civil Court. When the Civil Court gave a decree to the husband for restitution and he bona fide wished to execute it and the wife refused to obey the decree and return to him, that would be a good ground for cancelling the maintenance order. But where the husband did not wish to have his wife back but his real object in getting the decree for restitution was merely to get the maintenance order cancelled, then in the exercise of the discretion under this sub-section it would be wrong on the part of the Magistrate to cancel the order, 49 M.L.J. 269=22 L.W. 479=(1925) M.W.N. 645=27 Cr.L.J. 30=91 Ind. Cas. 62; see 27 Cr. L.J. 876=96 Ind. Cas. 124; 44 B. 972. See also 3 Ran. 150 where it was held that such decree for restitution will not necessarily be conclusive but is only to be taken into consideration along with other circumstances by the Court. There is clear authority for the position that a Magistrate ought to treat an order for maintenance made by him as determined if the wife failing to comply with the Civil Court's decree subsequently obtained for restitution of conjugal rights, refuses to live with her husband. The order for maintenance in such a case is spent up and has no legal effect, 17 Cr. L.J. 412=35 Ind. Cas. 972 following 23 B. 434. See 46 A. 877, where it was held that the weight to be attached to a decree for restitution must depend upon the circumstances of each case and no hard and fast rule can be laid down that the Civil Court's decree is for ever and always binding on the Magistrate or that his discretion is never fettered and when a husband enforcing the decree for restitution took the wife to the house and there ill-treated and drove her away the Magistrate's order for maintenance was held to be justified.

Revision—A revision lies to the High Court against a wrong order under this section. It is only proper that it should be corrected by the High Court in its revisional jurisdiction, 27 Cr. L.J. 876=96 Ind. Cas. 124.

490. A copy of the order of maintenance shall be given without payment to the person in whose favour it is made, or to his guardian, if any, or to the person to whom the allowance is to be paid; and such order may be enforced by any Magistrate in any place where the person against whom it is made may be, on such Magistrate being satisfied as to the identity of the parties and the non-payment of the allowance due.

Enforcement of order of maintenance.

Scope of the section—The provisions of this section cannot be held to derogate from S. 488 (3) supra under which a Magistrate who passed the order can levy the amount due in the manner of levying fines, i.e., he can issue a warrant under S. 386, supra, for the attachment and sale of any moveable property of the person proceeded against and such warrant can be executed within or without the Magistrate's local limits under S. 387, supra, when endorsed by the District Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the moveable property is found. It must be held that this section merely provides an alternative remedy by enabling an application for execution direct to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the person against whom the order was passed may be and that Magistrate after satisfying himself as to the identity of the parties and non-payment of the allowance can enforce the order by proceeding under S. 386, supra. It is left to the applicant to choose whether she will apply to the Magistrate who passed the order or to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the person against whom execution is sought may be. The Magistrate who passed the original order cannot decline to receive the petition on the ground that the person sought to be proceeded against resides in another Magistrate's jurisdiction, 13 Cr. L.J. 701=26 Ind. Cas. 449, see also 52, M. 77. "It is not the intention of the Legislature that the Magistrate to whom the application is made to enforce an order for maintenance should take into consideration anything further than the identity of the parties and the non-payment of the allowance. It is true that in the Court one step further has been taken, and we have held that it is open to the Magistrate to consider whether the person to whom the order of maintenance has been given is at the time she makes the application, still holding the position of a wife, but I know of no further step relaxing the clear words of S. 480. To me the reason appears obvious. If a person against whom an order for maintenance has been made considers that such an order should no longer be in force against him, it is for him to apply under S. 489 and get the order altered. It does not seem suitable or expedient that it should be open to a second Magistrate to call in question an order duly given upon proof"—per Knox, J. in 25 A. 165 at 166-167. The conditions mentioned herein as to the identity of parties and non-payment of the allowance, have special reference to cases where enforcement of order is sought at a place other than the one where the order was originally passed or by a Magistrate other than the one who passed the order, and cannot be taken as exhaustive. Another material question for consideration will be whether the order sought to be enforced is still in force, e.g., a decree for restitution of conjugal rights may supersede the order for maintenance. But an order for the maintenance of a child will not be superseded by such a decree against the wife, especially where there is no order appointing the father as guardian of the child, 1 Cr. L. Rev. 368. When proceedings under S. 488, supra, ended in a compromise whereby the husband undertook to pay a fixed allowance to the wife and on his failure to pay the same, the wife applied to the Magistrate for recovery of the arrears, and warrant of attachment for the same was issued, it was held, that once a compromise is entered into there is no refusal to maintain and S. 488, supra, had no longer any application, and any order passed by the Criminal Court regarding such compromise is without jurisdiction and the proper remedy lay in the Civil Courts to enforce the compromise, 27 Cr. L.J. 779=93 Ind. Cas. 315 following 2 Cr. L.J. 690.

May be enforced by any Magistrate.—A Second-class Magistrate of a place where the husband is at the time is competent to enforce the order for maintenance made against him and is a competent Magistrate on that behalf, Ratanlal 238. A Magistrate cannot refuse to enforce an order for maintenance on the ground that the amount is excessive, Weir II, 633, or on account of the defendant's inability to pay, Weir II, 636 but he may decline to enforce it if the claim has been released, 10 M. 13; 2 Cr. L.J. 690.

The words used are "any Magistrate" and therefore even a second class Magistrate is empowered to enforce an order for maintenance although he is incompetent to pass an order awarding maintenance under S. 488, supra, Ratanlal 239. The section does not deprive the Magistrate who originally passed the order, of the jurisdiction given him under S. 488. When the defendant is beyond his jurisdiction he may in his discretion exercise the jurisdiction or refer the applicant to the Magistrate having jurisdiction at the place where the defendant is to be found, 4 M. 230. This view has not been accepted in 13 Cr. L.J. 701=26 Ind. Cas. 449, where it was held that the Magistrate who passed the order cannot return the petition on the ground that the person proceeded against resided within the jurisdiction of another Magistrate who alone could enforce the order under S. 386 supra. A Court cannot refuse to exercise jurisdiction on the ground that some other Court has also concurrent jurisdiction. It is left to the applicant to choose whether to apply to the Magistrate who passed the order or to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the person sought to be proceeded against resided, and the order of the Magistrate who passed the original order for maintenance returning the application to be presented to the other Magistrate was set aside and he was directed to receive the petition and deal with it according to law. See also 52 M. 77, which took the same view and held that the order could be enforced by the Magistrate who passed the original order even though the person against whom execution is sought was not within the Magistrate's jurisdiction. When a Magistrate for enforcing the order issues a warrant, the party is not exempt from arrest under S. 135 of the Civil Procedure Code as that section gives exemption from arrest under Civil process to a person engaged in a civil litigation, 30 Cr. L.J. 788—117 Ind. Cas. 238.

The new sub-section (2) to S. 489, supra, declares that when it appears to the Magistrate that in consequence of a decision of a competent Civil Court, an order under S. 488, supra, should be cancelled or varied, he shall cancel or vary the order.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

DIRECTIONS OF THE NATURE OF A HABEAS CORPUS.

Power to issue directions of the nature of a Habeas Corpus.

491. (1) Any High Court may, whenever it thinks fit, direct—

(a) that a person within the limits of its appellate criminal jurisdiction be brought up before the Court to be dealt with according to law;

(b) that a person illegally or improperly detained in public or private custody within such limits be set at liberty;

(c) that a prisoner detained in any jail situate within such limits be brought before the Court to be there examined as a witness in any matter pending or to be inquired into in such Court;

(d) that a prisoner detained as aforesaid be brought before a Court-martial or any Commissioners acting under the authority of a Commission from the Governor General in Council for trial or to be examined touching any matter pending before such Court-martial or Commissioners, respectively;

(e) that a prisoner within such limits be removed from one custody to another for the purpose of trial; and

(f) that the body of a defendant within such limits be brought in on the Sheriff's return of cepi corpus to a writ of attachment.

(2) The High Court may, from time to time, frame rules to regulate the procedure in cases under this section.

(3) Nothing in this section applies to persons detained under the Bengal State Prisoners Regulation, 1818, Madras Regulation II of 1890, or Bombay Regulation XXV of 1827, or the State Prisoners Act, 1850, or the State Prisoners Act, 1858.

Amendment.—"Any High Court" instead of "any of the High Courts of Judicature of Fort William, Madras, Bombay, etc.," are substituted. In sub-section (1) (a) for the words "ordinary original jurisdiction" the words "appellate criminal jurisdiction" are substituted.

History of the writ of 'Habeas Corpus.'—The writ of habeas corpus was originally issuable out of the Court of King's Bench and out of the Court of Chancery in England but that in very early days the Court of Common Pleas and Exchequer had claimed the right to issue the writ in protection of their own officers and suitors, and that this practice has been gradually extended to other cases. In the Seventeenth Century, the Habeas Corpus Act 1640 (16 chas. 1. C. 10) expressly recognised the right and duty of the Court of the Common Pleas to order the writ to issue and the Habeas Corpus Act, 1679 (31 Chas. 2, C. 2, S. 6) enacted that it shall be lawful to move and obtain Habeas Corpus as well out of the High Court of Chancery or Court of Exchequer as out of the Courts of King's Bench Division or Common Pleas or either of them. This latter Act further provided that the Lord Chancellor or anyone of His Majesty's Justices might grant Habeas Corpus in vacation and imposed heavy penalties upon any Judge who wrongfully refused to entertain the application, 28 L.W. 874 (P.C.) at 878=30 Cr. L.J. 113=113 Ind. Cas. 273. The writ is a high prerogative writ for the protection of the liberty of the subject and it would be a startling result, if a statute enacted primarily for the simplification of procedure should have materially cut down that protection and the Judicature Act of 1873 has had no such result Ibid at 897 (P.C.). In every part of the British Empire every person has a right to be protected from illegal imprisonment by the issue of the prerogative writ of Habeas Corpus. The King's Bench Division in England exercised the power of issuing such writs throughout the British Empire till the statute known as the Habeas Corpus Act, 25 and 26 Vic., C. 20, was passed. By that Act the powers of the King's Bench are limited to England and such places outside England which have no local Court competent to exercise the power. The right to such a writ is an absolute right either from a Court in this country, and if there be no competent Court to grant it, from the King's Bench Division sitting in London. It is fully established that the High Court has all necessary powers and is competent to grant the writ. The High Court has succeeded under the High Courts of Judicature in India Act, 24 and 25 Vic., C. 104 and the Letters Patent issued thereunder, to all the powers of the Supreme Court of Madras and the Supreme Court had by its Charter of 1800, Art. 8, given to it the powers over all the territories which are now or hereafter may be, subject to, or dependent upon the Government of Madras aforesaid and to have such jurisdiction and authority as Our Justices of Our Court of King's Bench have and may lawfully exercise within that part of Great Britain called England as far as circumstances will admit. These words give to the Supreme Court the right usually exercised by the King's Bench in England of issuing writ of Habeas Corpus, 35 M. 922 at 925-926, 6 B.L.R. 392; 35 M. 72. The Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act (Supplementary) 1935, S. 6, says that the powers conferred by this section shall not be exercised in respect of any person arrested, committed to or detained in custody under the said Act and is valid law See 31 C.W.N. 593.

Scope of the section—Habeas Corpus is the most celebrated writ in English law, being the great remedy which the law has provided for the violation of personal liberty. The most important species of Habeas Corpus is Habeas Corpus ad sub iudicandum which is the remedy used for deliverance from illegal confinement. This remedy is resorted to for deliverance of persons illegally confined and the writ is directed to any person who detains another in custody and commands him to produce the body of the person so confined. It is well settled in England that the Court hearing an application for a writ of Habeas Corpus is not a Court of Appeal from the Magistrate on questions of fact; but has only to see that he had such evidence before him as gave him authority and jurisdiction to commit. The Court will not review the decision of the Magistrate, if there was any evidence before him to justify a commitment. The sufficiency of such evidence is a question entirely for the Magistrate, but when there is no evidence before the Magistrate, the High Court will interfere, 39 C. 164 at 201. The proceedings by way of Habeas Corpus are proceedings calling upon a person having custody of a prisoner to produce him and demonstrate under what authority he holds him in custody. If the authority be a legitimate one the Court cannot interfere and all that the High Court is empowered to do is to see that there is no patent defect visible in the authority by which the person having custody detains the person, 27 Cr. L.J. 37=91 Ind. Cas. 69. When a person arrested in British India under a warrant issued by a Native State and removed out of British India and taken in the custody of that Native State the person so arrested is no longer within the limits of the High Court's jurisdiction and its powers to issue directions in the nature of Habeas Corpus under this section could not be exercised nor can it direct the Political Agent of the Native State to produce the person before the High Court.

when the Political Agent has no custody or control over that person, 27 A.L.J. 520 distinguishing 50 B. 616 where it was held that the High Court has jurisdiction to issue a writ in the exercise of its Common law power for the production of certain children who are outside British India in a case when it is satisfied that they are in the custody or control of a person within its jurisdiction. When a person arrested under the orders of the Manager of an Encumbered Estate under S. 10 of Sind Encumbered Estates Act, the High Court has no jurisdiction under this section to issue the writ, 28 Cr.L.J. 124 (2) = 99 Ind. Cas. 930 (2), following 31 B. 604 at 609. The High Court retains all the powers, which the Court of the King's Bench in England can exercise and therefore has under its Common Law powers jurisdiction to issue a writ for the production of minor children outside British India, if it is satisfied that they are in the custody or control of a person within its jurisdiction and the Legislature by enacting this section has not in any way limited such Common law powers for the issue of writs of Habeas Corpus, 50 B. 616. The discretionary powers vested in the High Court under the provisions of this section are not to be exercised when the applicant has another effective remedy open to him, say under the Guardians and Wards Act under which the rights of the parties can be more satisfactorily settled than by the summary proceedings under this section, 27 Cr. L.J. 737 = 93 Ind. Cas. 65. The Executive have certain special powers under the Goondas Act and the High Court can interfere under this section only when those powers have been exercised and the person arrested is illegally or improperly detained in public custody, 30 C.W.N. 791 ; 53 C. 962, but see 51 C. 460. Judging from the context of this section, the Criminal Appellate Bench of the High Court, being the highest Court of Criminal appeal or Revision has got ample powers to deal with an application under this section. The terms of the section as it now stands give the Appellate Criminal Bench, jurisdiction to entertain and dispose of the application, 52 C. 319 at 325. This section merely substitutes or adds a different form of procedure less cumbersome than the granting of a writ of Habeas Corpus. This section does not apply to the case of an accused convicted and sentenced by a Judge of the High Court at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court, on the ground of irregularities having been discovered after the delivery of the verdict, 44 C. 723, but this decision is of a doubtful authority by the amendment in sub-section (1) (a). The writ of Habeas Corpus is distinguishable from the directions in the nature of a Habeas Corpus dealt with by this section, 39 C. 164. The underlying principle of every right of Habeas Corpus is to ensure the protection and well-being of the person brought before the Court under this writ. See 57 M.L.J. 642 = 1929 M.W.N. 689 = 30 L.W. 685. The real interest and well-being of a person brought up on a writ of Habeas Corpus ought to be not only the determining factor but the sole factor for consideration, 12 Bom. L.R. 891 at 896. It has been repeatedly held in England that the main consideration which ought to weigh with the Court of Chancery in issuing directions in the nature of Habeas Corpus is really the question of the welfare of the child. The jurisdiction arises from the power of the Crown delegated to the Court of Chancery and it is essentially a parental jurisdiction and is to be exercised for the benefit of the infant. It is also settled law that the welfare must be taken in its widest sense. The moral and religious welfare must be considered as well as its physical well-being and due regard must be had to the ties of affection. The rules as administered by the Court of Chancery in England are applicable to the Courts in India, and the Guardians and Wards Act recognises those rules and S. 17 of the said Act enacts that the Court shall be guided by what appears in the circumstances to be for the welfare of the minor and where the minor is old enough to form an intelligent preference the Court may consider that preference, 43 M. 299 at 301-302, see 23 C. 290. It is not reasonable or normal procedure to make applications to the High Court under this section or for bail while applications by the same persons for bail are still pending in the Sessions Courts. The proper course in such matters is to apply to the lower Courts and to obtain their orders before coming up to the High Court and there is no reason to depart from that course, 30 Cr. L.J. 301 = 114 Ind. Cas. 444.

Any High Court.—The High Court which by this section is invested with certain powers is defined in S. 4 (1) (j) supra, to mean the highest Court of Criminal Appeal or Revision for any local area. The High Court may act under its Letters Patent, by any Judge or any Division Bench thereof, subject to any rules that may be made or directions that may

(2) The District Magistrate, or subject to the control of the District Magistrate, the Sub-divisional Magistrate may in the absence of the Public Prosecutor, or where no Public Prosecutor has been appointed, appoint any other person, not being an officer of police below such rank as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, to be Public Prosecutor for the purpose of any case.

Public Prosecutor.—For definition of "Public Prosecutor" see S. 4 (1) (d), supra. The Crown represented by the Public Prosecutor is the party in criminal cases, 13 B. 389 and in a case conducted by the Public Prosecutor any Pleader appearing for a private party can instruct the Public Prosecutor and act under his instruction, S. 493. A Public Prosecutor has the right to appear without written authority, S. 493, and without permission of the Court, S. 495, and he has the power to withdraw charge, S. 491. His duty is to assist the Court in the furtherance of justice and not to act as Counsel for any particular person or party, 8 C. & P. 286. He should not by his statement aggravate the case against the prisoners or keep back a witness because his evidence may weaken the prosecution. His only object should be to aid the Court in discovering the truth, 9 C. & P. 23. It is elementary that great care must be taken by the counsel for the prosecution in the observations he makes to the Jury, 50 C.L.J. 106 at 125—33 C.W.N. 101 (F.B.). He should avoid any proceeding likely to intimidate or unduly influence witnesses on either side. There should be on his part no unseemly eagerness for or grasping at conviction. He ought to endeavour to perform his duties with that calmness and impartiality which should ever characterise a Public Prosecutor, 8 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 126 (F.B.) at 154; 4 B.L.R. Appx. 1; 26 Cr. L.J. 163—83 Ind. Cas. 723. In the case of Crown Prosecution in England, where the Attorney General or Solicitor General is conducting the case for the prosecution there is never the vestige of animosity or prejudice. The practice and procedure prevailing in England should be adopted in India, 8 C.W.N. xvii. Purpose of a criminal trial is not to support at all costs a theory but to investigate the offence and determine the guilt or innocence of the accused, and the duty of a Public Prosecutor is to represent not the police, but the Crown and his duty should be discharged by him fairly and fearlessly, and with a full sense of the responsibility that attaches to his position. The guilt or innocence of the accused is to be determined by the tribunals appointed by law and not in accordance with the tastes of any one else. It is undoubtedly the duty of the Public Prosecutor especially in capital cases to place before the trial Court the testimony of all available eye witnesses 8 Pat. 239 at 303 and 623. Every witness who was present at a transaction ought to be called even if they give different accounts, so as to enable the Courts from the evidence, to form its own conclusion as to the real truth of the matter. This is no technical rule; it is founded on common sense and is dictated by humanity. It is not the duty of the Public Prosecutor to call only those witnesses who speak in his favour, 42 C. 422 at 427-428, followed in 30 Cr. L.J. 675 at 683—116 Ind. Cas. 770. The only legitimate object of a prosecution by the state is to secure not a conviction but that justice be done. The prosecutor is not free to choose how much evidence he will bring before the Court. It is prima facie his duty to call those witnesses who prove their connection with the transaction in question and also must be able to give important information. The only thing that can relieve the prosecutor from calling such witnesses is the reasonable belief that if called, they would not speak the truth, 8 C. 121; 10 C. 1070 49 C. 277; 42 C. 937; 45 M.L.J. 846—1923 M.W.N. 782—33 M.L.T. 213—25 Cr. L.J. 75—75 Ind. Cas. 937; 25 L.W. 437—23 Cr. L.J. 307—100 Ind. Cas. 531. It is beyond the region of doubt that Counsel for the prosecution ought not to struggle to obtain a conviction, but should regard himself rather as a minister of justice assisting in its administration, 50 C.L.J. 106 at 125—33 C.W.N. 1121 (F.B.) following [1915] 2 K.B. 621. It is the duty of the Public Prosecutor to conduct the case for the Crown fairly. His object should be not to obtain an unrighteous conviction, but to see that justice is vindicated, and in exercising his discretion as to the witnesses whom he should or should not call, he should bear that in mind. A Public Prosecutor should not refuse to call or put in the calendar one as a witness for the Crown, merely because the evidence of such witness might in some respects be favourable for the defence, 16 A. 81 (F.B.) at 88. There should be no unseemly eagerness on the part of a public prosecutor to grasp at conviction. He is to perform his duties with calmness and impartiality and not to aggravate the case against the accused. He is to aid the Court in discovering the truth and it is his duty to do justice between the Crown and the prisoner, 26 Cr. L.J. 163=83 Ind. Cas. 723. It is a question how far it is open to a Public Prosecutor to propound an inconsistent opinion with the position successfully taken by the Crown in the Court below and on a previous occasion in the High Court. Where the construction of a section admitted of two opinions a Public Prosecutor in view of his personal opinion is not justified in throwing overboard the case for the Crown which could have been argued by him to be of assistance to the Court in deciding which of two possible constructions is more acceptable, 30 Cr. L.J. 1019 at 1021=119 Ind. Cas. 625. S. 270, supra, provides that in every trial before a Court of Session the prosecution shall be conducted by a Public Prosecutor.

493. The Public Prosecutor may appear and plead without any written authority before any Court in which any case of which he has charge is under inquiry, trial or appeal and, if any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute in any Court any person in any such case, the Public Prosecutor shall conduct the prosecution, and the pleader so instructed shall act therein, under his directions.

Public Prosecutor may plead in all Courts in cases under his charge Pleaders privately instructed to be under his direction.

Any private Pleader engaged by a party cannot conduct the prosecution; and he shall act in the case under the directions of the Public Prosecutor who alone is entitled to conduct the prosecution. The Public Prosecutor may avail himself of the services of a Pleader retained by a private party but under S. 417 supra, it is the Public Prosecutor that ought to prefer an appeal against an acquittal, 41 C. 425. The general conduct of the case vests in the Public Prosecutor, 11 B.H.C.R. 102. A representative of a Railway appointed under S. 145(2) of the Railway Act cannot insist to lead the prosecution in the presence of the Public Prosecutor who has charge of the prosecution and a Pleader instructed by a private person including the Agent of a Railway administration shall act under the direction of the Public Prosecutor, 1926 Pat. 74=27 Cr. L.J. 313 (2)=22 Ind. Cas. 697 (2). This section does not refer to an application by a private party that a charge in a particular case has not been framed under proper sections of the I.P.C. and that it should be framed under the appropriate sections 29 Cr. L.J. 1056=112 Ind. Cas. 430.

494. Any Public prosecutor may, with the consent of the Court, in cases tried by jury before the return of the verdict, and in other cases before the judgment is pronounced, withdraw from the prosecution of any person either generally or in respect of any one or more of the offences for which he is tried and upon such withdrawal,—

Effect of withdrawal from prosecution.

(a) if it is made before a charge has been framed, the accused shall be discharged in respect of such offence or offences;

(b) if it is made after a charge has been framed, or when under this Code no charge is required, he shall be acquitted in respect of such offence or offences.

Amendment.—The words "appointed by the Governor-General in Council or by the Local Government" have been omitted. After the words "withdraw from the prosecution of any person" the words "either generally or in respect of any one or more of the offences for which he is tried" have been added, and after the words "discharged and acquitted" the words "in respect of such offence or offences" have been added. All Public Prosecutors are now empowered to exercise the power of withdrawal from a prosecution.

Scope of the section.—This section gives a wide discretion to the Magistrate whether he will consent to the withdrawal by the prosecutor from the prosecution. The discretion is to be exercised not arbitrarily but on correct legal principles and the order to be passed by him is a judicial order and reasons are to be recorded to satisfy the High Court that consent to the withdrawal was rightly given, 56 C. 1023. Reading the words of this section it is reasonably clear that it contemplates the case of a withdrawal of a prosecution by the Public Prosecutor in cases tried by Jury before the return of the verdict by the Jury and in other cases before the judgment is pronounced by the trial Court and it does not contemplate the case of a withdrawal by the Public Prosecutor after the conviction of the accused by the trial Court and in the appellate stage of the case even though the petition of withdrawal was inspired by the Magistrate of the District, 46 C.L.J. 121=28 Cr.L.J. 833=105 Ind. Cas. 449.

Any public prosecutor.—Any private person in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary can commence a criminal prosecution but the prosecution is always at the instance of the Crown. Hence it is that the criminal proceedings were called Pleas of the Crown. The Crown only can stay process or remit a punishment awarded by any Court," 12 R.R. 450=104 E.R. 501=15 East 1, quoted in, 21 Cr. L.J. 641 at 642=57 Ind. Cas. 657. A person acting under the directions of the Public Prosecutor duly appointed for the district can withdraw, 30 C.L.J. 255.

May with the consent of the Court withdraw.—This section lays down that the consent of the Court must first be obtained, 6 Pat. 208; 33 C.W.N. 468. But the failure to obtain such consent to confine the prosecution to some of the charges only, is a mere irregularity which will not vitiate the proceedings unless objection is taken at the beginning of the trial, 6 Pat. 208. The only Prosecutor who may, under the provisions of the Code, withdraw from a prosecution without obtaining the consent of the Court and without giving reason, is the Advocate General. No other Public Prosecutor is placed in that privileged position; and if the consent of the Court is to be regarded as a ministerial act or merely as an executive act we do not understand why it should have been necessary for the Legislature to insert such a provision in this section. It is clear that, in either withholding consent or in according consent, the Court is acting in a judicial capacity, and, for its order as for every order judicially made, it ought to give and record its reasons. If the consent has been improperly recorded, it is clear that the consequential discharge must also be looked upon as improper. When a Court acting under this section gives its consent to a withdrawal from a prosecution it acts in a judicial capacity, and must record its reasons in order that the High Court may be in a position to say whether the discretion has been properly exercised, 22 C.W.N. 65 at 71=26 C.L.J. 28=18 Cr. L.J. 886=41 Ind. Cas. 998; 33 C.W.N. 468; 25 C.W.N. 880 followed in 43 C. 1103; 24 Cr. L.J. 229=71 Ind. Cas. 693; 24 Cr. L.J. 361=72 Ind. Cas. 361; 1 Ran. 736. The test to be applied by the High Court is whether the Magistrate in coming to the conclusion has taken into consideration extraneous circumstances which ought not properly to have been taken into account in making a judicial order, 33 C.W.N. 468. It was held in 2 Pat. 709 at 710, that the Calcutta decisions overstated the law and this section does not expressly require the Court to give any reasons for consenting to the withdrawal, nor is there any provision which compels a Court to write a reserved judgment establishing the propriety of an order. There are many final orders known to the Court for which no recorded judgment is required. See 5 M.L.T. 216=11 Cr. L.J. 193=4 Ind. Cas. 1125, where it was held that the provisions of this section are to be regarded as a mere ministerial or executive act for which it is not necessary, that Magistrate should set out any reason. In 1 Ran. 756, the Calcutta view was followed and it was held that in withholding or according consent the Court acts in a judicial and not in a ministerial capacity and ought to give and record reasons; if good and sufficient reasons are required in a case of discharge, they are all the more necessary in a case of acquittal in which case a remedy by way of revision is not ordinarily available; see also 2 Pat. 708 at 710 where the Calcutta rulings are not followed.

Before judgment is pronounced.—The words cannot be held applicable to the pronouncement of the judgment by the appellate Court and this is clear from the wording of the section. To construe the section as authorising to withdraw from the prosecution after the accused had been convicted is something which is not only on the face of it startling but also absurd having regard to the words of the section, 46 C.L.J. 121=23 Cr. L.J. 833=104 Ind. Cas. 449

Of any person.—When a Public Prosecutor is appointed to conduct a prosecution it means he is to conduct the whole case and therefore he has power to withdraw under this section from the prosecution of an accused person who was added subsequent to his appointment as Public Prosecutor, 18 Bom. L.R. 266.

Before charge the accused shall be discharged of such offence.—There is nothing in law to prevent a Magistrate from entertaining a complaint after the discharge of the accused in a previous police case under this section. The explanation to S. 403, supra, provides that an order of discharge is not an acquittal for the purposes of that section, 1924 Pat. 276=26 Cr. L.J. 129=83 Ind. Cas. 689; 2 Pat. L.J. 34; 40 C. 71. A formal order of discharge should be made, 33 C. 1333 and after discharge he is a competent witness, 47 C. 154. This section clearly provides that if the Public Prosecutor withdraws a case before a charge has been framed, then the accused shall be discharged. There is no difference in law in the case of a person discharged by a Magistrate on a consideration of the evidence tendered against him and of a person discharged at the instance of the Public Prosecutor under the section so far as ordering a further inquiry is concerned, 30 Cr. L.J. 233=114 Ind. Cas. 50. See also [1911] 2 M.W.N. 74=12 Cr. L.J. 440=11 Ind. Cas. 624, which took a different view as to the power to order further inquiry.

Withdrawal after charge the accused shall be acquitted.—An acquittal is a matter of right to the accused after the Public Prosecutor has withdrawn from the prosecution with the consent of the Court. The opinion of the Assessors need not be taken in such a case. An acquittal is a matter of right then, whatever the opinion of the Assessors may be. It may be disregarded, Ratanlal 397. As soon as the Public Prosecutor withdraws from the prosecution an accused person becomes a competent witness against the remaining accused even though the Court omits to record a final order of discharge, 47 C. 154; 21 Cr. L.J. 641; 18 C.W.N. 1213; 15 Cr. L.J. 693=26 Ind. Cas. 141; 33 C. 1333; 7 A.L.J. 86, and the evidence of discharged accused is admissible, 18 Bom. L.R. 266; 25 B. 422; 23 B. 213; 16 B. 661; 7 M. 102. This section and S. 337 supra should be read together; S. 337 supra does not govern this section and does not in any way abridge the wide language of this section. S. 337 supra does not suggest the idea that the only method of obtaining the evidence of a co-accused against another is by tendering a pardon under S. 337, 56 C. 1023. S. 403 supra applies to an order of acquittal made under this section, see 18 Cr. L.J. 329=38 Ind. Cas. 441; when a Public Prosecutor withdraws from a prosecution in a summons case before summons is served on the accused to appear and the accused is acquitted, it was held that the rule of English Law requiring the accused to have been tried and acquitted to plead autrefois acquit in bar of trial embodied in this section is inapplicable to statutory acquittals embodied in this section and S. 247 and S. 345 supra which are intended to bar further proceedings whether the accused can be said to have been tried or not, 40 M. 976. An order under this section was held good even though the avowed object of the prosecution was to secure the evidence of one accused against his co-accused, 23 B. 422; (1911) 2 M.W.N. 74=12 Cr. L.J. 440=11 Ind. Cas. 624. This section controls the other sections of the Code relating to sessions trials, 24 Cr. L.J. 3=71 Ind. Cas. 53. This section, S. 495 and S. 403 do not apply to security proceedings and such proceedings cannot be withdrawn, 36 M. 315. The effect of an unauthorised withdrawal is that the result contemplated by this section does not follow, but the trial proceeds and an accused person cannot plead that he was discharged or acquitted in such a case. When an accused person accepts a tender of pardon he ceases to be an accused person and it is unnecessary for the prosecution to withdraw the charge against him, 10 M.L.J. 147. It was previously held that a Public Prosecutor is not competent to withdraw only one of the charges. If he withdraws at all, he must withdraw all the charges, 2 C.L.J. 18(N). Now he can withdraw all or any one of the charges. An acquittal by Sessions Judge on appeal from the conviction acting on a petition of withdrawal presented in the appellate Court even though such petition was inspired by the District Magistrate is no acquittal and there is no judicial determination of the appeal pending before the Sessions Judge, 46 C.L.J. 121=28 Cr. L.J. 833=104 Ind. Cas. 449.

Revision.—In 5 M.L.T. 216=11 Cr. L.J. 193=4 Ind. Cas. 1126 it was held that the acquittal under this section being a statutory right, the High Court will not interfere in revision but the question whether the High Court can interfere in revision with the discretion of the lower Court in giving its consent to the withdrawal of a prosecution under this section was left undecided in 1914 M.W.N. 776 at 778=13 Cr. L.J. 541=25 Ind. Cas. 841. It is for the Crown to consider whether a case is a fit one to be proceeded against or whether it is a proper one to be withdrawn or proceedings to be dropped. It is not competent to the High Court to quash proceedings on the ground that it is an harassment to the accused 5 Pat. 432. Where a Court permits a complaint to be withdrawn, it should record reasons in order that the High Court may be in a position to say whether the discretion vested in the lower Court has been properly exercised 1 Ran. 756. The High Court will be slow to interfere in revision with an order allowing withdrawal when reasons are given by the Court below for allowing the same, 24 Cr. L.J. 5=71 Ind. Cas. 53. Where a discretion has been exercised by a Court of competent jurisdiction which is not on the face of it arbitrary the practice of the High Court is that as a Revisional Court it will neither inquire into the reasons nor interfere, 2 Pat. 703. Where the Sessions Judge rejects an application by the Public Prosecutor under this section in a proper way the High Court will not interfere with his order in revision even though the reasons given by the Judge may not be the only reasons and on that ground it cannot be said that the Judge did not exercise a judicial discretion in granting or refusing permission to withdraw, 23 L.W. 101=27 Cr. L.J. 334 (1)=92 Ind. Cas. 750 (1). But where a private complainant was permitted to conduct the prosecution and after charge was framed a Prosecuting Inspector was allowed without consulting the complainant to withdraw the prosecution and the Magistrate acquitted the accused, the High Court in revision set aside the acquittal, 46 A. 88.

495. (1) Any Magistrate inquiring into or trying any case may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than an officer of police below the rank to be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf but no person, other than the Advocate General, Standing Counsel, Government Solicitor, Public Prosecutor or other officer generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, shall be entitled to do so without such permission.

Permission to conduct prosecution.

(2) Any such officer shall have the like power of withdrawing from the prosecutions as is provided by section 494, and the provisions of that section shall apply to any withdrawal by such officer.

(3) Any person conducting the prosecution may do so personally or by a pleader.

(4) An officer of police shall not be permitted to conduct the prosecution if he has taken any part in the investigation into the offence with respect to which the accused is being prosecuted.

Scope of the section.—This section applies only to proceedings which could end in an acquittal or discharge of the accused; and not to proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Code where there is no accused in the strict sense of the term and there can therefore be no discharge or acquittal, 38 M. 315, See also 12 Cr. L.J. 533=12 Ind. Cas. 301. Sub-section (1) of the section does not in any way limit the scope of sub-section (3) There is nothing in this section to warrant the action of a Magistrate in taking the prosecution out of the hands of the complainant's pleader and handing it over to some other person who is not the Public Prosecutor, 25 Cr. L.J. 571=81 Ind. Cas. 59.

May permit any person.—The question whether a particular person should be permitted to conduct the prosecution is left to the discretion of the Magistrate. But such a discretion must, of course, be exercised in a judicial manner and the Magistrate should in a case of dispute give adequate reasons for his order whether he grants or refuses permission to person applying to him. The fact that the complainant in a case is also the Prosecuting Inspector of the Court does not deprive him of his right to prosecute the case in his private capacity as a private citizen, 17 Cr. L.J. 436=36 Ind. Cas. 166. It is doubtful whether the words "any person" in S. 495 of the Code would include an absolute stranger who had no connection in the remotest degree with the prosecution and whose desire to help the prosecution, was based on a personal grudge only, 11 A.L.J. 313 at 314=1 Cr. L. Rev. 202=14 Cr. L.J. 333=20 Ind. Cas. 213. The words 'any person' include persons other than certificated Pleaders. It is however discretionary with the Criminal Courts in each case to permit such persons to conduct the prosecution M.H.C. Pro dated 2nd September 1892. When a Magistrate has, after due consideration, exercised the discretion allowed by this section and allowed a particular person to appear for the prosecution, the High Court cannot as a Court of Revision set aside the order and direct the Magistrate to refuse to allow the person to appear, Weir II 633. The Officer who has power to withdraw is the Officer referred to in sub-section (1). A withdrawal, by a Police Inspector not coming within sub-section (1) is no withdrawal, 9 M.L.T. 203=(1911) 1 M.W.N. 106=11 Cr. L.J. 722=8 Ind. Cas. 867. See also 10 Cr. L.J. 501=4 Ind. Cas. 132, where it was held that a Police Officer who was not permitted by the Court to conduct the prosecution cannot legally withdraw from the prosecution and an acquittal based on such withdrawal is no acquittal at all.

Below the rank prescribed by Government.—No officer below the rank of a Head Constable shall be permitted to conduct a prosecution under this section. Before permitting him to conduct a prosecution, the Magistrate shall satisfy himself that the case is of a simple character, such as can properly be entrusted to him and that the services of the ordinary prosecuting staff are not available, G.O. No. 1564, Jul. dated 19-7-1897. Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. Rule No. 38.

Other than an officer of police.—When a police-officer is himself the complainant in a case, the Court cannot refuse him the right to conduct his own case as a private citizen, 17 Cr. L.J. 436=36 Ind. Cas. 166.

Sub-section (2).—When a private complainant is permitted to conduct the prosecution it does seem to be highly improper that after he had closed his evidence and a charge had been framed, the prosecution should suddenly drop without consulting him. If there was no evidence against the accused at all, the accused were entitled to have a clear acquittal and not an acquittal at the instance of a Court Inspector who never went any where near the Court when the case was being tried and took no part in the trial and who was in no sense a Public Prosecutor, 45 K. 83. The word 'any such officer' in this sub-section refers to the Advocate General and other officers mentioned in sub-section (1). It is only those officers who are empowered to withdraw from the prosecution with the effect stated in S. 491, supra, and if an Advocate privately engaged by a complainant and permitted by the Magistrate to appear for the prosecution withdraws, the effect provided by S. 491, supra, does not follow; in other words the trial proceeds, 10 Cr. L.J. 14.

Sub-section (3).—The scope of this sub-section is not in any way limited by sub-section (1). There is nothing in the section to warrant the action of a Magistrate taking away the prosecution out of the complainant's Pleader's hands and entrusting the same to some one who is not the Public Prosecutor, 25 Cr. L.J. 571=81 Ind. Cas. 59.

Sub-section (4).—"When a Police-officer has been engaged in the investigation into the offence with respect of which the accused is being prosecuted attends the Court, his function should be confined to his examination as a witness and to the suggesting of questions to be put by the Prosecuting Police-officer. The Government of India thinks that it is undesirable that questions to be asked of witnesses should be suggested directly to the Magistrate by the investigating officer and the appointment of a police-officer to prosecute should be made in all cases in which such appointment is necessary for the proper conduct of the case" G.O. No. 1564, dated 19-7-1887 G.O. No. 148 Mfs. Pub., dated 20-2-1926. In all important cases, especially in grave offences such as murder, dacoity, etc., the investigating Police-officer should be examined regarding the circumstances of the investigation and to ascertain what each witness stated during investigation. Hence the exclusion of investigating officers, Ratanlal 173; 13 W.R. (Cr.) 18; 26 B 533; but the violation of the provisions of this sub-section is not fatal unless it has occasioned a failure of justice, 26 B. 533.

Revision.—The power of the High Court to interfere in revision with the discretion of a Magistrate giving his consent to the withdrawal of a prosecution, was left undecided in (1914) M.W.N. 776=16 Cr. L.J. 641=25 Ind. Cas. 841. It is submitted that when the discretion is arbitrarily exercised the High Court has power to interfere in revision.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

OF BAIL.

The word "bail" is not defined in the Code. "Bail" literally means either to carry or take away or to deliver or to give. In modern legal sense it means, "deliver on trust on certain conditions," "freeing or setting at liberty one arrested or imprisoned upon others becoming sureties for his appearance at a day and place assigned, he also entering into his own recognizance." When it is said "a man is let on bail," we mean, he is released from the custody of the officers of law to the custody of private persons who are sureties, and bound to produce him whenever called upon. The object of bail is to save a man from being in custody before conviction where there is a reasonable doubt as to his guilt. "Bail is not intended to be punitive but only to secure the attendance of the prisoner at the trial"—per Lord Russell, C.J. Bail is not to be withheld as a punishment. The requirements as to bail being merely to secure the attendance of the accused at the trial, the proper test whether bail should be granted or refused, is whether it is probable that the accused will appear to take his trial. The test should be applied by reference to the following considerations. (1) The nature of the accusation. (2) The nature of the evidence in support of the accusation. (3) The severity of the punishment which conviction will entail. (4) The character of the sureties, that is whether the sureties are independent or indemnified by the accused. (5) The character of the accused and his behaviour, 8 Pat. 802; 29 Cr. L.J. 128=99 Ind. Cas. 860; 27 Cr. L.J. 1063 (2)=97 Ind. Cas. 39(2). It is not usual to grant bail on charges of murder, Arch. Cr. Pl. Ev. and Pr. p. 87 (25th Ed.); 2 Ran. 346. The chief grounds for refusing bail are (1) a reasonable opinion that the accused will, if released on bail, fail to appear to answer the charge (2) a reasonable opinion if bail is granted he will abuse his liberty by tampering with prosecution witnesses or otherwise seek to impede the course of justice 8 Pat. 802. However serious the offence charged may be, if it is bailable and there is no reason to believe that the accused may abscond if released on bail, the seriousness of the offence alone will not justify a Court in refusing bail when under the law the accused is entitled to it 26 A L J. 363=29 Cr. L.J. 450=108 Ind. Cas. 689. The discretionary power of Court to admit to bail is not arbitrary but is judicial and is governed by established principles. The object of the detention of the accused being to secure his attendance to abide the sentence of law, the principal inquiry is whether a recognizance would effect that end. In seeking an answer to this inquiry, the Court must have considered the seriousness of the charge, the nature of the evidence, the severity of the punishment prescribed for the offence, and in some instances, the character, means and standing of the accused. The discretion of the Court to grant bail under the amended Code is less fettered, 51 C. 402. There is no difference between the English and the Indian practice, 6 Pat. 802, but it was held in, 29 Cr. L.J. 470=109 Ind. Cas. 118, that it is not open to the Courts in India in view of the express provisions of the Indian Statute to follow English authorities which lay down the principle on which bail is granted in England. The decisions of the English Courts are necessarily a safeguard to the Courts in India in interpreting the sections of the Code and the English Cases will not help in cases of a really grave nature. The Code divides offences into two classes bailable and non-bailable. When the police arrest the person under S. 55, supra, they are bound to give the person arrested, the option of bail and that bail shall be, as the Code requires, not excessive but in accordance with the position in life occupied by the person arrested.....To deprive any person of his liberty is a most serious step to take and it is hardly too much to say that every step in the process should show extreme deliberation and care, and if a person has to be arrested previous to inquiry he should be given the option of release upon proper bail, 14 A. 43 at 47.

496. When any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared at any time while in the custody of such officer or at any stage of the proceedings before such Court to give bail, such person shall be released on bail :

In what cases bail to be taken.

Provided that such officer, or Court, if he or it thinks fit, may, instead of taking bail from such person, discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided :

Provided, further, that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of section 107, sub-section (4), or section 117, sub-section (3).

Amendment.—The proviso has been newly added.

Scope and object of the section.—The detention of an accused under trial is not penal, but its object is to secure attendance. The seriousness of an alleged offence, and some evidence of its preparation by the accused would however justify detention, 38 C. 174 at 179; 2 C.W.N. xxv. It is the intention of the law that when a person is arrested no needless impediments should be placed in the way of his being admitted to bail. The intention of the law undoubtedly is that a man is ordinarily to be at liberty; and it is only if he is unable to furnish such moderate security, if any, as required of him, as is suitable for the purpose of securing his appearance before a Court pending inquiry, that he should remain in detention. That is the almost universal application of law on this point, 20 Bom L.R. 121 at 123=19 Cr. L.J. 329=41 Ind. Cas. 343. See also 6 N.W.P.H.C.R. 363. Under S. 55, supra, an officer in-charge of a police-station may arrest any person who is by repute a habitual thief etc., but if such person is prepared to give bail as laid down in this section he must be released on bail. This section does not authorise a Police-officer to take a third person's bond for the appearance of the accused without taking an undertaking from the accused himself, 29 Cr. L.J. 491=103 Ind. Cas. 219. A Sessions Judge has power to grant bail when a person is arrested by the Police and is in the lock up. It is a mistake to suppose that the jurisdiction of the Judge arises only when the person arrested is put up before a Court. Further the restriction contained in this section that bail can be granted only to a person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence is not applicable to Court of Session, 30 Cr. L.J. 718=117 Ind. Cas. 99.

Other than accused of non-bailable offence.—The terms of this section are imperative and a Magistrate is bound to release on bail a person accused of a bailable offence, 32 C. 80; 30 Cr. L.J. 809=117 Ind. Cas. 623; 31 M. 315 (F.B.). In all bailable offences bail may be claimed as of right and a Magistrate is not competent to refuse the same. Persons arrested under S. 55, supra, should always be given the option of being let out on bail, 15 A. 43. In non-bailable offences owing to the serious nature of the the offences and their likelihood of producing dangerous consequences to the safety of the public and the tranquillity of the State, as of right bail cannot be asked for. Persons accused of non-bailable offences should not be released on bail as a rule, but they may be released if there are reasons for believing that the case against them is such that it is not likely to succeed or if there are special grounds justifying bail, under B. 497 and sub-section (5) of that section the High Court can set aside the order for bail and direct the accused to be arrested and committed to custody if there are no justifiable grounds for the lower Courts to grant bail, 26 Cr. L.J. 4=83 Ind. Cas. 483. It must be understood that while a wide discretion in granting bail in cases other than those involving capital punishments has been placed in the hands of the Magistrates they are bound when weighing the probabilities of the prisoner appearing at the trial to consider the nature of the offence charged, the character of the evidence against the prisoner and the punishment which if convicted is likely to be inflicted on him. Again mere vague allegations that if the person be released on bail he will tutor witnesses, should not be taken into account. The Magistrate will refuse bail where the prisoner is of such a character that his presence at large will intimidate witnesses or where there are reasonable grounds for believing he will use his liberty to suborn evidence, 3 Ran. 538 at 542; 27 Cr. L.J. 1063=97 Ind. Cas. 39. Bail should not be refused to a person proceeded against under S. 110, supra, 20 Sind. L. R. 122.

Shall be released on bail—In bailable offences there is no question of any discretion in granting bail. The words of the section are imperative, 32 C. 80. The Court may call for a report from the police as to the sufficiency of bail when admitting a person to bail. But the ultimate duties of deciding the sufficiency or otherwise is with the Court itself and not with the police, 15 C. 455. At the time of granting bail, the Court is not called upon to conduct a preliminary trial of the case and consider the probability of the guilt or innocence of the accused person. It may have incidentally to look at the weight of evidence against the accused person. But its proper function is only to inquire whether the giving of bail as opposed to arrest of the accused might lead to a real danger of his absconding and not appearing to take his trial or whether there is a real reason to suppose that he is likely to tamper with the witnesses who would be called against him, 22 L.W. 158=26 Cr. L.J. 1593=60 Ind. Cas. 665.

Save as provided, etc.—Section 107 (1) and B. 117 (2) permit the detention of an accused person until the completion of an inquiry and this section does not control those provisions. This has been made clear now and is in accordance with the decision in, 38 M. 474; 32 C. 80 and 12 Cr. L.J. 533=12 Ind. Cas. 301. Where certain persons proceeded against under B. 107, supra, executed bonds under S. 117(3) supra, pending inquiry but were re-arrested by the Magistrate in the representation of the Police that there was an imminent danger of the breach of the peace and were refused bail, it was held that the order refusing bail was illegal and bail was granted by the Patna High Court remarking that if the reasoning of the decision in 36 M. 474, is right in refusing bail then the provisions of not only S. 107 but also B. 117 (3) were exceptions to B. 496—a proposition which could not be accepted, 30 Cr. L.J. 809 at 812=117 Ind. Cas. 623.

For form of bail bond, see Form No. XLII in Schedule V. The terms of a bail bond should be in accordance with this form. This form and form XXV and other forms of bail bonds indicate what the contents of the bond with sureties should be. In order to be enforceable, a bail bond must be in accordance with these forms; unless in proper form no legal liability is incurred thereby, 29 Cr. L.J. 391=159 Ind. Cas. 219.

Bail.—This section coupled with form No. XLII contemplates two kinds of security—
 (1) simple recognizance of the principal, (2) security with sureties. The word "bail" is only applicable to the second kind of security and that is the meaning which has been attached to the word in the practice and procedure of the Courts, 15 C.W.N. 736 at 737.

197. (1) When any person accused of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears, or is brought before a Court, he may be released on bail, but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty, of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life :

provided that the Court may direct that any person under the age of sixteen years or any woman or any sick or infirm person accused of an offence be released on bail.

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation or inquiry or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence, but there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or, at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) An officer or a Court releasing any person on bail under subsection (1) or sub-section (2) shall record in writing his or its reasons for so doing.

(4) If at any time after the conclusion of the trial of a person accused of a non-bailable offence and before judgment is delivered, the Court is of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of any such offence, it shall release the accused, if he is in custody, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance to hear judgment delivered.

(5) A High Court or Court of Session and, in the case of a person released by itself, any other Court may cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested and may commit him to custody.

Amendment.—To sub-section (1) a proviso has been added authorising the Court for reasons to be recorded to release on bail in a non-bailable offence any person under 16 years or any woman or sick or infirm person. Sub-section (4) is new and provides for bail to appear on the date fixed for pronouncing judgment; the opening words of sub-section (5) are new.

Scope of the section.—The section gives ample powers to Sessions Judges to grant bail in non-bailable offences but in practice bail is seldom granted in such cases. This is due to the fact that the principle on which bail should be granted is generally overlooked and so far as this principle is concerned there is hardly any difference between the English and Indian practice. In England bail in treason or felony is discretionary with the or Court having jurisdiction to try the offence while bail in misdeemeanour is said to be of right in Common law. This distinction is reflected in S. 496 and this section which deal with cases of bailable and non-bailable offences. The discretionary power to grant bail is not arbitrary but is governed by established principles. It is well established that the purpose of bail is not punitive but to secure the attendance of the accused 32 C.W.N. xlii. This section which deals with cases of persons accused of non-bailable offences gives the Court a discretion in granting bail and the power is given to the High Court and the Court of Session to have the person released on bail, to be arrested and committed to custody when it appears that an accused who was released on bail attempted to pervert the course of justice by tampering with witnesses; the High Court under its inherent power under S. 661A infra can direct the cancellation of the bail bond and direct the accused to be committed to custody, 32 C.W.N. 839. In the case of under trial prisoners the present policy of the law is to allow them bail rather than refuse it, 27 Cr. L.J. 302(2)=92 Ind. Cas. 590 (2). Bail is not to be withheld merely as a punishment and the requirements as to bail are merely to secure the attendance of the accused at the trial 6 Pat 802. The amendment seems in the case of offences punishable with death or transportation for life, to limit rather than enlarge the powers of the Court in granting bail in non-bailable cases. In deciding the question of granting bail in non-bailable offences, the Magistrate must follow the provisions of this section but the High Court is not limited by the limitations specified in the section. It has an absolute discretion in the matter, but will not depart generally from the practice of refusing bail in cases punishable with death or transportation for life, 2 Ran. 516; 3 Ran. 538; 25 Cr. L.J. 1132=81 Ind. Cas. 956. In exercising a discretion under this section the Court should take into consideration, (1) the nature of the evidence, (2) character of the evidence available, (3) position in life of the accused, (4) chance of the accused evading justice, (5) seriousness of the punishment which will be inflicted if found guilty. See 51 C. 402 at 416; 27 Cr. L.J. 1063=97 Ind. Cas. 39; 30 Cr. L.J. 718=117 Ind. Cas. 99 or of his terrorizing prosecution witnesses Ibid. The fact that in case of conviction it would necessitate a severe punishment on the accused was held to be no sufficient ground for a refusal to grant bail, 30 Cr. L.J. 718=117 Ind. Cas. 99. The main question for consideration in determining matters of bail is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty of the offence charged. Other considerations must also arise in deciding the question and one of these which has always guided English and Indian Courts is whether there are any grounds for supposing the accused would abscond and attempt to escape justice avoiding or delaying an inquiry or trial. Under this section the accused should ordinarily be released on substantial bail until reasonable grounds are made out for presuming his guilt, 36 C. 174 at 177 following 10 C.W. N. 1093. This section is limited to the jurisdiction of the trial Courts while S. 498 infra invests the High Court and the Courts of Session with similar jurisdiction as a Court of superior appellate or revisional jurisdiction and the powers of the Courts of superior jurisdiction are not controlled by this section. The restriction as to bail if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life is not applicable to the High Court and Courts of Session but the High Court and the Court of Session are not to act arbitrarily and must exercise the power on judicial grounds, 25 Cr. L.J. 1132=81 Ind. Cas. 956. But see 42 C. 23 and 39 Bom. L.R. 622 which took a different view and held that the restrictions contained in S. 497 (1) supra apply to the High Court also in granting bail. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 470=109 Ind. Cas. 118. Certain dicta of Judges in England on the subject of releasing offenders on bail have been referred to showing the governing principles guiding the Courts. The section says nothing about the likelihood or non-likelihood of the accused absconding or any other matter except, whether or not there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has been guilty of the offences charged. It is no doubt true that the High Court is not limited within these bounds and it has an absolute discretion in the matter, but the Legislature having placed the initial stage of dealing with crime with Magistrates and having in effect enacted that persons accused of non-bailable offences shall be detained in custody, except when there are no reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed the offence charged. The High Court is bound to follow the general law as a rule, and not to depart from it except under special circumstances especially in the initial stage of the case, 2 Cr. L. Rev. 35. As a rule persons accused of non-bailable offences should not be released on bail. But if there are reasons for believing that the case against them will not stand and there are special circumstances justifying bail, they may be released on bail, 26 Cr. L.J. 4=83 Ind. Cas. 433. In considering an application for bail in a non-bailable offence the Court must be satisfied by examination of the investigation, inquiry or trial whether or not there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed such offence, 21 Cr. L.J. 161=54 Ind. Cas. 709; if after remand no incriminating evidence is forthcoming and the prosecution had sufficient time to adduce such evidence, the Court will reasonably come to the conclusion that such evidence was not forthcoming and should then release the accused on bail whatever be the nature of the offence, 36 C. 174; 6 M. 63; see also 51 C. 432. The law as it now stands does not say that bail ought to be refused merely because an offence is non-bailable. That is now restricted to offences punishable with death or transportation for life, 26 Cr. L. J. 1285=89 Ind. Cas. 150. This section empowers the High Court to grant bail in cases pending anywhere in the Presidency, 55 M L.J. 690 at 692.

If there appear reasonable grounds for believing:—This is certainly a matter of determination in each case according to the particular circumstances. The section does not say that in all non-bailable offences the Magistrate must refuse bail. It is left to the discretion of the Magistrate to release on bail, but the Magistrate shall not release an accused on bail if he is of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of the offences of which he is accused, see 38 C. 165 and 174. The rule in respect of non-bailable offences is that bail is not to be taken except in special circumstances, 8 Bom. L.R. 420=3 Cr. L.J. 439. But the special power of the High Court and Court of Session under S. 493, infra, is not limited by this section, Weir II, 657; 25 Cr. L.J. 1132=81 Ind. Cas. 956; 51 A. 603 but see 42 C. 25 and 30 Bom. L.R. 622; 29 Cr. L.J. 470=109 Ind. Cas. 118 which take a different view.

Offence punishable with death or transportation for life.—These words were substituted in the amending Act, 1923 for the words 'the offence of which he is accused' and this cannot but be regarded as the result of a liberalising influence on the policy of the Legislature, and the discretion of the Court is now less fettered than before. That being so, when the Court has been placed in possession of facts, which might enable it to entertain reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has been guilty of the offence with the commission of which he is charged, it ought to grant bail. The Court is not to be influenced merely by the fact that the charge against the accused is a serious one, 32 C.W.N. xliii. This phrase is not particularly an elegant one from a grammatical point of view and were it intended to be disjunctive, one could be inclined to favour the alteration of the phrase to "an offence punishable with death or with transportation for life." The phrase is however taken directly from the Indian Penal Code which deals with a number of offences in which either punishment may be inflicted at the discretion of the sentencing Court. The phrase must not be taken as extending to offences punishable with transportation for life only, 3 Ran. 533 but see 5 Ran. 276 (F.B.) where it was held that the view taken in 3 Ran. 533 was wrong and there can be no doubt whatever that the section lays down that a person accused of murder shall not be released on bail if reasonable grounds exist for believing him guilty of the offence charged. See also 30 Bom. L. R. 622=29 Cr. L. J. 201=111 Ind. Cas. 661, following 5 Ran. 276 (F.B.).

Proviso to Sub-section (1):—This proviso is new and exception is made in the case of juveniles, women, sick and infirm persons. Women have always been given a certain amount of consideration in cases where a discretion is to be exercised; women also do not often figure in criminal Courts as accused; so also juveniles and sick and infirm persons.

Sub-section (3).—A Magistrate may re-arrest under this sub-section if further evidence calls for such a step, even if the accused has been released on bail.

Sub-section (5).—This sub-section empowers the High Court to revise the order granting bail and cancel the same if circumstances warrant or demand such a course, 22 L. W. 135 = 26 Cr. L. J. 1593 = 90 Ind. Cas. 865. In an application of an urgent nature to the High Court, for the cancellation of bail granted by a Sessions Judge to certain accused persons, by the Public prosecutor under instructions from the District Magistrate, it is desirable that the Public Prosecutor should apply, if he has sufficient time to do and obtain the order of Government before making the application, 30 Cr. L. J. 845 = 117 Ind. Cas. 773.

Revision.—It is open to the High Court to grant bail when two Lower Courts have refused bail, 38 C. 174. But in case where there is no order whatever by any Court refusing bail the accused living in Police custody and not produced before any Court the High Court has no power to direct the offender to be released on bail either under this section or S. 498 infra, 44 C. L. J. 134. Where a Sessions Judge granted bail, holding that there are no grounds for believing the accused guilty, the High Court will not go behind the order, 10 M. L. J. 311. In prosecutions for cognizable offences the private prosecutor has no locus standi. The Crown is the prosecutor and the custodian of the public peace and if it decides to let go an offender no other aggrieved party can be heard to object, 2 Pat. 708. So when bail was granted by a sessions Judge, an aggrieved private party has no locus standi to move the High Court to cancel the bail. If the granting of bail is improper the Crown ought to move in the matter, Cr. Mis. Pet. 443 of 1927 (M. H. C.).

498. The amount of every bond executed under this Chapter

Power to direct admission to bail or reduction of bail.

shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and shall not be excessive; and the High Court or Court of Session may, in any case, whether there be an appeal on conviction or not direct that any person be admitted to bail, or that bail required by a Police Officer or Magistrate be reduced.

Scope of the section.—The Powers of the High Court or Court of Session under this section are not controlled by the statutory limitations under S. 497, supra, of refusing to release an accused person on bail if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life. The Powers under this section are not fettered by any of the rules defining the limits within which they should be exercised as in S. 497, supra. Though the exercise of the powers under this section is left entirely to the discretion of the Court without any fetter being imposed, the Court will not act arbitrarily but only on judicial grounds, 25 Cr. L. J. 1132 = 81 Ind. Cas. 958; 2 Ran. 548. There is no reason why any restriction should be placed upon the wide powers conferred by this section, 50 C. 969. This section gives the High Court and the Court of Session wide powers to admit to bail even when an accused has been convicted and has not appealed. Even in a non-bailable offence it is clear from the section that the accused may be admitted to bail. Admission to bail is a matter of discretion with the Sessions Judge and when the discretion has been exercised with proper care, the High Court will decline to interfere with the order of the Sessions Judge, 1903 A. W. N. 195 = 5 A. L. J. 419 = 8 Cr. L. J. 49. Magistrates should bear in mind in fixing bail the hope expressed in, 22 B. 549 at 550 that they "will always be lenient to accused persons, at any rate until they are convicted."

The provisions of this section are not controlled by those of the preceding section and it is open to the High Court or Court of Session to admit any person to bail for good and sufficient cause. The general rule, however, in respect of non-bailable offences is that bail is not to be granted except in special circumstances, Weir II, 657, 8 Bom. L. R. 320 = 3 Cr. L. J. 429; 51 A. 603; 1903 A. W. N. 193, but in 42 C. 75 it was held that the rule laid down in S. 497, supra, is a rule founded on justice and equity which should be followed by the High Court as well as by every other Court unless anything appears to the contrary. Both on principle and authority this section must be interpreted as being controlled by the provisions of S. 497 (1) supra. The extended powers of the High Court under this section are not to be used to get rid of the reasonable and proper provision of law contained in S. 497, supra.

29 Cr. L. J. 470=109 Ind. Cas. 118, following 37 C. 412 and 42 C. 25. See also 30 Bom L.R. 622, which holds that the High Court in exercising its discretion in granting bail should have proper regard to what is laid down in S. 497 (1) supra, to the effect that bail shall not be granted in a case where there appear reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty of the offence punishable with death or transportation for life but 25 Cr. L.J. 1132=81 Ind. Cas. 956, which took a more liberal view and held that the powers of superior Courts like the High Court and the Courts of Sessions are not controlled by S. 497 (1) and the restriction in S. 497 (1) supra is not applicable to High Court, etc., but the High Court and the Court of Session are not to act arbitrarily but should exercise the power on judicial grounds; see also 30 Cr. L. J. 697=116 Ind. Cas. 748. The Court will be very cautious in interfering with the discretion of a Magistrate in a case of bail under this section especially when the prosecution has not tendered evidence to connect the accused with the offence, 6 M. 63 and 69; Ratanlal 892. The High Court and Courts of Session have wider powers under this section, 51 A. 603, and the superior Courts have an absolute discretion in the matter of granting bail in non-bailable cases: The Legislature has placed the initial stage of dealing with crimes with Magistrates and having in effect enacted that persons accused of non-bailable offences shall be detained in custody except when in the opinion of the Magistrate there are no reasonable grounds for believing that he had committed the offence charged against him, the High Court is bound to follow the general rule of law and not to depart from it except under special circumstances especially in the initial stages of the case, 2 Ran. 536. Under this section the High Court has concurrent jurisdiction with that of a trying Magistrate and not merely a revisional jurisdiction, 36 C. 174 at 177.

See 50 C. 585 where it was held that the High Court has no inherent power after disposal of a case before it, to grant bail pending appeal to Privy Council, but in 49 A. 237, a different view was taken and there it was held that the High Court, had inherent power to grant bail when the appeal was pending in the Privy Council and the sentence was likely to expire before the appeal is heard and disposed of by the Privy Council. The decision in 24 M. 161 is followed and that in 1908 P.R. (Cr) 15=8 Cr. L. J. 89 is distinguished and not followed. The High Court has also power to grant bail pending review of a conviction had at the High Court Sessions, on a certificate granted by the Advocate General. See Cr. M. P. No. 1009 of 1929 (M. H. C.).

Whether there be an appeal or not.—Whether there be an appeal or not, the High Court or Court of Session may release the accused on bail, but a Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to release an accused person after convicting him on bail pending his appeal to the High Court. This section does not give him power in any way to alter or vary his order, 4 Bom. L.R. 55; 10 B. 176 (F.B.). When a Sessions Judge after considering the evidence comes to the conclusion that there are no reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty, and admits him to bail, the High Court will not go behind the finding and discharge the accused on bail, 10 M.L.J. 411. The power of the High Court to grant bail to an accused person under this section is untouched by the provisions of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. But the conditions for release on bail provided by S. 497, supra, will apply 37 C. 412 and 439. Where there is a reasonable doubt as to the correctness and legality of the conviction had, or when the judgment is based on incorrect exposition of fact or law, or is based on mere surmises not warranted by the evidence on record or where the evidence is more consistent with the case set up by the accused, or where the sentence is unduly severe, or very short and will expire before the appeal is heard and decided, the appellate Court will be acting properly in releasing the appellant on bail.

In any case.—These words ought not to be construed in their widest and unlimited sense. The Code authorises only appellate Courts under S. 426, infra, and Courts of revision under S. 439 supra, to release the accused on bail. Therefore the Court has no power to grant bail because the accused wishes to move the Privy Council, 10 Sind. L.R. 59. These words cannot include a case in which the Court has reached finality and has no further jurisdiction to exercise, 50 C. 535 at 593, but see 49 A. 247 which took a different view and held that the High Court in its inherent power can grant the bail when an appeal against the High Court's decision had been admitted by the Privy Council and there is a fear that the sentence would expire before the appeal can be heard and disposed of by the Privy Council. The provisions of this section regarding admission to bail are particularly wide and a Sessions Court may in any case direct any person to be admitted to bail. When proceedings were started against certain persons under S. 110, supra, and an order under S. 118, supra, being made, they being unable to furnish the security demanded, the proceedings were laid for orders under S. 123, supra, before the Court of Session. When bail was applied for, the Sessions Judge held he had no jurisdiction to grant bail. There are no words in S. 123 (2) controlling the provisions of this section. If a convicted person can apply for bail and a person against whom an order under S. 118, supra, is passed, can get the order revised by the Court of Session under S. 123, supra, it stands to reason that if bail can be allowed to a convicted person on appeal it is allowable to one against whom an order under S. 118, supra, is made which is subject to revision by the Sessions Court. THERE IS NO RESTRICTION SHOULD BE PLACED UPON THE WIDE PROVISIONS OF THIS SECTION, 50 C. 969 When bail is granted by the High Court and the Magistrate receives reliable information thereof, by means of a telegram sent by the accused's Counsel the Magistrate is bound to act immediately though he had not received the High Court's order. The High Court also remarked, it must lay down most stringently that all bail orders must be issued on the very day on which they are pronounced irrespective of the written order on record, 38 C. 293 where 2 C W N. 489 is followed.

499. (1) Before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such sum of money as the police officer or Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police-officer or Court, as the case may be.

(2) If the case so require, the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court, Court of Session or other Court to answer the charge.

Scope of the section.—A bail bond must be interpreted with reference to its own language if it is plain and no external evidence can be admitted to explain the conditions therein. Where A was released on bail pending a revision against his conviction on a bail bond executed by his surety which provided that A should attend the Chief Court on the day or days he will be ordered by the Court to attend and on his failure so to appear, the surety bound himself to forfeit the amount specified in the bond, and A failed to surrender to his bail after the disposal of the revision, it was held that the surety vouched for the appearance of A on the day or days he was ordered to do so and in the absence of any such notice to appear by the Court, the surety committed no breach of the bond when A absconded after the disposal of the revision. 1902 P.L.R. (Cr.J) 55 at p. 193. A Magistrate cannot take bail from a person to appear before a tribunal in a Native State but he can when the accused appears before him execute any warrant issued by the political Agent of any particular Native State and shall on security being given release such person from custody, 33 C. 1032 at 1033. A bail bond taken should specify the Court before which the accused was to appear, 1885 A.W.N. 44 and there is no duty cast on a surety for production of the accused to produce him before a Court to which the case had been transferred, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 59; 30 C. 107.

As the police-officer thinks sufficient—The Police-officer need not necessarily be an officer in-charge of a police station. 55, 57 (2) and 59 (3) empower any Police-officer to release any person on execution of a bond, etc., for appearance in Court.

Sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend, etc—The sureties are required to guarantee that the person released on bail shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond and nothing more. Unlike S. 112 supra, the sureties do not make themselves liable for the good conduct of the person for whom they stand sureties. There is nothing illegal in requiring the accused to execute a bond conditioned on their appearing in Court everyday, 6 M H.C.R. Appx. 33 at 39, but see 20 W.R. (Cr.) 23 at 29—11 B L.R. Appx. 8 at 12 When the bond taken was for appearance on the first day of inquiry or at other times required and the accused appeared on the first day but failed to appear on a subsequent date as required verbally by the Court, the bond can be forfeited, Weir II, 658. A surety who stands bail must be taken to know the date on which the accused has undertaken to appear, and if the accused does not appear the surety bond is liable to be forfeited, 19 Cr. L.J. 637=46 Ind. Cas. 47. It is perhaps greater hardship on a man of position brought up in luxury and holding a high position in society, to be subjected to jail rules, than it is to men who have to make their way in the world. In the absence, as yet, of convincing direct evidence, we are willing to yield to the petitioner's request to submit to conditions on being released on bail. He may be released on bail on condition of his being guarded at his own house and debarred from all communications with persons said, rightly or wrongly to be his associates in crime, 36 C. 166 at 172.

Until otherwise directed by the Police-officer.—These words indicate that a bond taken under S 497, supra, may be conditioned to appear before the Police and the provisions of S. 497, supra, are not limited to appearance before the Court, 14 Cr. L.J. 631=21 Ind. Cas. 679; a bail bond should be construed strictly, 28 Cr. L.J. 339=84 Ind. Cas. 933.

For Form of bond, see Schedule V, Form No. XLII.

500. (1) As soon as the bond has been executed, the person for whose appearance it has been executed shall be released; and, when he is in jail, the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release to the officer in-charge of the jail, and such officer, on receipt of the order, shall release him.

Discharge from custody.

(2) Nothing in this section, section 496 or section 497 shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed.

501. If, through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it, and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and, on his failing so to do, may commit him to jail.

Power to order sufficient bail when that first taken is insufficient.

This section applies only to cases where there are sureties and where through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted; it does not apply to a case where, there are no such grounds, 38 M. 1088. A Court is justified in demanding increased bail if after further inquiry, the offence turns out to be a more serious one than was originally made out, 13 Cr. L.J. 474=19 Ind. Cas. 314.

502. (1) All or any sureties for the attendance, and appearance of a person released on bail may at any time apply to a Magistrate to discharge the bond, either wholly or so far as it relates to the applicants.

Discharge of sureties.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his warrant of arrest directing that the person so released be brought before him.

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged either wholly or so far as it relates to the applicants, and shall call upon such person to find other sufficient sureties, and if he fails to do so, may commit him to custody.

Sub-section (2).—When once an application is presented by a surety and received by a Magistrate, there is no option left to the Magistrate but to act under this section. There is no such thing as hearing of the application on the merits, and the presentation of an application for cancellation imposes a duty on the Magistrate to issue a warrant for the arrest of the accused. The surety need not do anything further, 9 Bom. L.R. 1235=6 Cr. L.J. 385; 27 Cr. L.J. 848=93 Ind. Cas. 768.

CHAPTER XL.

OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

The issue of a commission to examine a witness is not a very satisfactory mode of proceeding either in civil or criminal cases. On the one hand the Court has no opportunity of noting the demeanour of a witness and on the other hand of controlling irrelevant and unnecessary or harassing cross-examination of the witness. This chapter no doubt confers a wide discretion on the Court to issue a commission. But such discretion should be sparingly exercised and only in a case of real hardship and inconvenience, having due regard to the prejudice which is likely to be caused thereby to the opponent. O. XXVI C.P.C., which provides for the issue of commission to examine a witness residing within the local limits of the Court is more specific and limited than those in this Chapter (Ss. 503 and 506) which refers to commissions to examine witnesses generally, whether residing within the jurisdiction of the Court or not. Without in any way crystallising the grounds on which a criminal Court may issue a commission to examine a witness living within its local limits, in ordinary cases the provisions of O. XXVI, r. 1, C. P. C., may be accepted as a safe guide by criminal Courts also. This rule provides for the issue of a commission where the witness is either exempted under the Code or where he cannot attend the Court on account of illness or infirmity. Under this rule pardanashin ladies, and women who lead a life of seclusion have been exempted, unless the presiding Judge thinks it rightly desirable to note the demeanour of the witness. Personal attendance of Government officials is also dispensed with. A Mahant, however high his position may be, cannot claim exemption except where he has been exempted by special notification of Government, 27 Cr. L.J. 89=91 Ind. Cas. 393. It is desirable that it should generally be understood that objection as to appearing in a criminal Court to give evidence cannot be entertained and it should be a cheerful duty of every one to attend a Court of Justice when summoned to give evidence as a witness, particularly on behalf of the accused, 8 A. 663 at 671. It may be distasteful and unpleasant for a Raja to appear as a witness in a criminal Court, but it is his duty as one of Her Majesty's subjects living under the protection of law, to obey that law and attend before the Judge in obedience to a summons. The Judge will undoubtedly make every arrangement so that such attendance be as convenient and unobjectionable as possible and consistent with the interests of the accused, Ibid at 672. It is improper to examine an expert witness on commission in the absence of the accused. The evidence of an expert has always to be carefully weighed but when his evidence is given on commission, its value is very considerably reduced, 29 Cr. L.J. 377=103 Ind. Cas. 369. see also [1911] 1 N.W.N. 97=3 M.L.T. 335=12 Cr. L.J. 64=9 Ind. Cas. 347.

503. Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial or any other proceeding under this Code, it appears to a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Court of Session or the High Court that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides, to take the evidence of such witness.

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with.

Issue of commission and procedure thereunder.

(2) When the witness resides in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Indian Government, the commission may be issued to such officer.

(3) The Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is issued, or, if he is the District Magistrate, he or such Magistrate of the first class as he appoints in this behalf, shall proceed to the place where the witness is, or shall summon the witness before him, and shall take down his evidence in the same manner, and may for this purpose exercise the same powers, as in trials of warrant-cases under this Code.

(4) Where the commission is issued to such officer as is mentioned in sub-section (2), he may delegate his powers and duties under the commission to any officer subordinate to him whose powers are not less than those of a Magistrate of the first class in British India.

Scope of the section.—This section applies only to cases pending before Courts specified in this section, 10 Cr. L.J. 211, and a discretion is given to issue a commission or not, 25 Cr. L.J. 652=81 Ind. Cas. 140. Therefore a special Judge under the Malabar Ordinance, I of 1922, having only the powers of a Magistrate under S. 10, supra, cannot issue a commission for the examination of witnesses, 18 L.W. 859. An Additional District Magistrate authorised to exercise all the powers of a District Magistrate mentioned in Schedule III, Part IV (18) is empowered to issue a commission to a witness within his jurisdiction, 21 A.L.J. 791=24 Cr. L.J. 622=73 Ind. Cas. 510. There is no provision for taking evidence in Foreign Countries, 10 Cr. L.J. 571=4 Ind. Cas. 400, and there is no apparent reason why the Legislature has not given to criminal Courts the same power that is given to civil Courts under the Civil Procedure Code to issue commissions. This section is primarily intended for the purpose of getting the evidence of witnesses other than the parties principally concerned although it may include any party to a proceeding. This section speaks of persons whose presence could not be obtained without an amount of delay and expense which under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable, 19 C. 113 at 121; see also 19 B. 749. The terms of the section are wide enough to include not only an inquiry and a trial but any other proceeding which authorises the examination of any witness and the complainant is certainly a witness, 42 C. 19 at 24. There is nothing in the language of the section to support the contention that the Court has no authority to issue a commission to examine a witness when he is within the jurisdiction, 6 B. 233; 24 C. 551. But the witness must be in British India or within the territories of a Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Government, 5 B. 338. The High Court has no authority either to issue a commission or a letter of request to the English Courts for the examination of a witness in England in a criminal case. The High Court must look to the Code for authority to make such an order and no such authority exists in the Code, 10 Cr. L.J. 571=4 Ind. Cas. 400 where 5 B. 388 is referred to. Witnesses in criminal cases should not be examined on commission except in extreme cases of delay, expense or inconvenience, 5 A. 92; 12 A. 69. It is most unsatisfactory to examine a witness in a criminal case on commission in the absence of the parties and the High Court directed that the witnesses be examined in the presence of the parties with liberty to put question to them, 27 Cr. L.J. 840=95 Ind. Cas. 760. Issue of a commission is entirely a discretion of the Court and in 8 C. 896 a commission to examine an old man of 63 years who was ill was refused, the Court holding that in a criminal case the issue of a commission would be most unsatisfactory and one dangerous to the interests of the prisoner. Further what the Court should look to in issuing a commission is rather the 'ends of justice' than the convenience of the witness, 8 C. 896. Taking of evidence on commission in criminal cases is unknown to English practice, 5 A. 92 at 94. The Magistrate is to consider whether it is necessary at all to examine the witness and whether it is a proper case for issuing a commission, 12 Cr. L.J. 398=11 Ind. Cas. 582; where an expert witness is the principal witness in the case, his examination on commission should not be allowed, [1911] 1 M.W.N. 97=9 M.L.T. 334=12 Cr. L.J. 64=9 Ind. Cas. 347. A party who desires to have a witness examined on commission must apply for it after commitment either to the Court or to the particular Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction or to the Sessions Court, as the case may be, 19 B. 749 at 756. A District Magistrate is given a discretion in the matter of issuing a commission. It may be issued for the examination of a witness if the evidence is necessary but his attendance cannot be secured without unreasonable expense, 23 Cr. L.J. 652=81 Ind. Cas. 140. It is for the Magistrate to decide whether he will issue a commission for the examination of a witness residing in a Native State under this section and once he has decided and issued a commission, it is not in the discretion of the officer to whom it is issued to decline to execute the a commission for the reason that it is inconvenient for him to do so and there exist other possible means of examining the witness. It is of course to be assumed that Magistrates do not and will not issue commissions unnecessarily, 8 Lah. 347. As regards power to issue a commission to a Court in a Colony or dependency to take evidence in criminal cases, see G. O. No. 1803, Jud., dated 27-12-1901.

Sub-section (1).—Expense or inconvenience or delay in securing the attendance of witnesses is no valid ground for issuing a commission. Under the circumstances of each case the Court will have to find them unreasonable, 5 A. 224. There is no provision in the Code which protects pardanashin ladies from appearing in a Court of Justice and very rightly so, all necessary safeguards to protect their privacy that are reasonable, being adopted, but it is undesirable to compel their attendance. In the event of the Magistrate finding it absolutely necessary to examine a pardanashin lady he would do well to consider very seriously whether he should issue coercive process for the purpose of compelling her attendance, 12 A. 69 at 72. It will be a weakness to surrender as a general principle to be adopted in all cases that pardanashin ladies whose evidence is required in criminal trials are to be allowed to compel the Court to examine them in some place other than the Court-house itself, 12 A. 69 at 72-73. If a witness secures a house or room in close proximity to the Court house, her evidence may be recorded there, regard being had to the gosha being observed, 12 Cr. L.J. 501=12 Ind. Cas. 221, or she may be examined in the chambers of the Magistrate or Judge, 12 Cr. L.J. 398=11 Ind. Cas. 582. Applications under this section are granted on the principle that in matters of procedure the custom and habits of people are to be taken into consideration, 15 C. 775 at 779. Pardanashin ladies may be examined on commission under this section, 9 Cr. L.J. 249. They may be examined in Court in a paliki or otherwise on proper identification, 18 W.R. 230; 1 B.L.R. (Shn.) 5. Whenever the deposition of a Gosha woman has to be taken the Court should, if necessary, adjourn to a place where the witness can be examined with due regard to her privacy in the presence of the accused precautions being of course taken to make sure of her identity, Mad Cr. Rules of Pr. Rule 169. There is no express provision in the section for such a course. The word "inconvenience" may empower a Court to allow examination of this class of ladies who do not appear in public and whose attendance cannot be compelled according to the customs and manners of the country, 4 C. 20; 15 C. 775; Weir II, 669; 42 C. 19. The fact that a woman is the daughter of a prostitute does not ipso facto make her the less a pardashin if she is lawfully married and observes goshā in fact, 14 Cr. L.J. 3-18 Ind. Cas. 157=1 Cr. L. Rev. 277. See 27 Cr. L.J. 89-91 Ind. Cas. 393 where a Mahant was allowed to be examined at his private residence. It is entirely within the discretion of the presiding Judge to require a witness to stand or permit him to sit while under examination, Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. Rule, 170.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section authorises the issue of a commission to the Officer representing the British Indian Government in the Territories of any Prince or Chief in India when the witness sought to be examined on commission resides in such territories. In 30 Cr. L.J. 913 (2)=118 Ind. Cas. 643, when the Officer representing the British Government in the Native State holding that he had no power to compel the attendance of the witness, a subject of the state, before him, informed the Court which issued the commission that he could not record the evidence, the Lahore High Court remarked thus on the view of the Agent "It is manifestly unfair to retain a provision in the enactment which has no practical utility or which the Courts concerned are incapable of enforcing or would consider it unfair to enforce: It is however inconceivable that the Government introduced a provision in the Code which has no legal sanction or to carry out which they have made no adequate arrangements. If it is a fact that the Officer representing the British Government in the territory of a Prince or Chief, has no power to compel the attendance before him of the witnesses residing in such territory, then the Government must consider the question of either securing such power, or of repealing the law which authorises criminal Courts to issue commissions to such Officer as it is unfair to all concerned that such Courts should be expected to pass orders which they cannot enforce."

Sub-section (3).—This sub-section provides that such officer shall proceed to the place where the witness is or shall summon him to appear before the officer and shall take down the evidence as in warrant-cases and sub-section (1) authorises delegation of powers by such officer to any officer subordinate to him. Thus it will be seen that the Code nowhere speaks of a Resident or Political Officer representing the British Government in such territories irrespective of the actual place of residence and also once a commission is issued under this section to the officer, it is his duty to proceed to the place where the witness is or summon him to appear before him or delegate his powers to a subordinate officer competent to execute the commission. But neither the code nor any other law leaves it to the option of such officer to decline to execute the commission on the ground of inconvenience or some other similar reason and sub-section (3) is mandatory in this respect, 9 Lah. 347.

Sub-section (4).—This was introduced to meet the difficulty which existed that when a commission was issued to a Political Agent in a Native State he was not empowered to delegate it to a subordinate, but was bound to execute it personally. The power of delegation is expressly given by this sub-section.

504. (1) If the witness is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Presidency Magistrate, the Magistrate or Court issuing the commission may direct the same to such Presidency Magistrate, who thereupon may compel the attendance of, and examine, such witness as if he were a witness in a case pending before himself.

Commission in case of witness being within presidency-town.

(1A) When a commission is issued under this section to a Chief Presidency Magistrate, he may delegate his powers and duties under the commission to any Presidency Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the power of the High Court to issue commissions under the Slave Trade Act, 1876, section 3.

Sub-section (1A) is new and permits delegation of powers and duties under the commission by the Chief Presidency Magistrate to another Presidency Magistrate.

Within Local Limits of Jurisdiction of Presidency Magistrates.—See S. 20, supra, which defines the local limits of the Presidency Magistrate's jurisdiction, see 16 C 238. Where the Calcutta High Court issued a commission to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, to examine on commission the captain and the second officer of a ship, in a case in which a British sea-man was charged with murder of a fellow sailor on board a British ship on the high seas and the evidence so taken on commission was admitted at the trial and the accused was convicted on such evidence.

The Slave Trade Act, 39 and 40 Vic., Ch. 46, S. 3, enables the High Court to obtain evidence on commission in cases of offences relating to slave trade or abetment of such offences committed on the high seas as if such offences had been committed in any place in British India, see Ss. 370, 371, 376, I.P.C.

505. (1) The parties to any proceeding under this Code in which a commission is issued, may respectively forward any interrogatories in writing which the Magistrate or Court directing the commission may think relevant to the issue, and the Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is directed, or to whom the duty of executing such commission has been delegated, shall examine the witness upon such interrogatories.

Parties may examine witnesses.

(2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or, if not in custody, in person, and may examine, cross-examine and re-examine (as the case may be) the said witness.

This section enables witnesses being examined on commission on interrogatories and the only restriction is that such interrogatories have to be approved as relevant to the issue by the Magistrate or Court issuing the commission.

506. Whenever, in the course of an inquiry or a trial or any other proceeding under this Code before any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness, whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate stating the reasons for the application; and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided or reject the application.

Power of Provincial Subordinate Magistrate to apply for issue of commission.

This section enables provincial Subordinate Magistrate to apply to the District Magistrate for the issue of a commission stating the reasons for the application, and it is left to the discretion of the District Magistrate to grant the request or not. S. 503 supra applies only to cases pending before the Court specified therein. See 10 Cr. L.J. 211; a District Magistrate is empowered by this section to issue a commission to examine a female witness in suitable cases, 9 Cr. L.J. 249; 12 Cr. L.J. 398=11 Ind. Cas. 582.

507. (1) After any commission issued under section 503 or section 506 has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the deposition of the witness examined thereunder, to the Court out of which it issued; and the commission, the return thereto and the deposition shall be open at all reasonable times to inspection of the parties, and may, subject to all just exceptions, be read in evidence in the case by either party, and shall form part of the record.

(2) Any deposition so taken, if it satisfies the conditions prescribed by section 38 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court.

Sub-section (2).—It was held in 19 C. 113 that evidence taken on commission before a committing Magistrate, viz., a Presidency Magistrate, in the course of a preliminary inquiry, cannot be used in evidence at the Sessions before the High Court, and this ruling was approved in 19 B. 749; see 6 C. 532. To meet this difficulty, this sub-section was enacted making the deposition so taken admissible at a late stage of the case provided the conditions prescribed by S. 38 of the Indian Evidence Act have been complied with. See 16 C. 238, where it was held that the evidence taken on commission was admissible in the trial of a seaman for an offence committed on the high seas.

508. In every case in which a commission is issued under section 503 or section 506, the inquiry, trial or other proceeding may be adjourned for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission.

May be adjourned for a specified time.—The adjournment contemplated by this section is for a specified time reasonably sufficient for execution and return of the commission and not limited to fifteen days at a time as under the proviso to S. 344, supra. The discretion given by the section must be exercised in a reasonable way so as not to subject the accused to unnecessary detention. In 19 C. 113 an application for adjournment of a trial for examining the Niram of Hyderabad as a witness after the Jurors were sworn in in a sessions trial, was refused.

CHAPTER XLI.

SPECIAL RULES OF EVIDENCE.

509. (1) The deposition of a Civil Surgeon or other medical witness, taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused, or taken on commission under Chapter XL, may be given in evidence in any inquiry, trial, or other proceeding under this Code, although the deponent is not called as a witness.

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, summon Power to summon medical witness. and examine such deponent as to the subject-matter of his deposition.

Scope of the section.—This section is enacted to obviate the great inconvenience which would result from a Civil Surgeon being summoned to give evidence in a Court at a great distance from his station, especially when his evidence is likely to be of a formal character. The rule regarding the admission of medical evidence in the Sessions Court departs in a very marked particular from the ordinary rules of evidence in that the statement of the medical witness, if duly taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused is admissible in evidence in the Sessions Court, although the medical witness is not himself called. It ought therefore to be recorded with the utmost care and accuracy and again the evidence should carefully be scrutinised by the Judge and if it appears that the deposition is essentially deficient or requires further explanation or elucidation, the Judge should summon and examine the witness. A medical witness is only excused from attendance because his time may be very valuable to him. This is a useful provision in ordinary cases but a Sessions Court ought not to hesitate to call him rather than attempt itself to explain what on the face of it does not appear clear. When in a murder case the method by which the murder was committed as given in the confessions did not fit in with the medical evidence, the Judge is not entitled to theorise which is unsound in principle and the learned Judge ought certainly to have called and examined the medical witness. To obviate further delay the High Court thought it proper to examine the officer in the High Court and satisfied itself that there was nothing in the medical evidence inconsistent with the confessions on record, 18 Cr. L. J. 330 at 331-32—33 Ind. Cas. 764. This section does not enact that deposition of a Surgeon shall be taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused; what it does provide is that a deposition of a Surgeon, if so taken and attested, may be put in evidence. A Magistrate should take and attest a deposition in the presence of the accused and should also by the use of a few apt words on the face of the deposition make it apparent that he has done so, 10 A. 174 at 173-179, followed in 13 C. 129; 9 A. 720.

Taken and attested by a Magistrate.—The deposition may be taken by any Magistrate and not necessarily by the committing Magistrate who holds a preliminary inquiry, but it must be taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused, 1893 A.W.N. 180. Where there is no attestation as required by this section the evidence is not admissible under this section, 3 C.W.N. 49 at 55. The defect can be cured by calling the committing Magistrate or any other person present in Court where the deposition was taken and able to testify to the facts under sub-section (3); the defect can also be cured by summoning and examining the deponent as a witness in the Sessions Court.

In the presence of the accused.—Except in the case provided for in B. 512, infra, the evidence of a medical witness should be taken in the presence of the accused. Otherwise the evidence is inadmissible against the accused when put on his trial, 8 C. 739; 9 A. 720; 10 A. 174; 13 C. 129.

Or taken on commission under Chapter XL.—This was introduced in the 1893 Code and enables the deposition of a medical witness taken on commission to be put in evidence, a provision which did not exist previously. It is not sufficient to ask the witness merely to attest the accuracy of the statements in the certificate, Weir II, 639.

Sub-section (2).—Ordinarily it is the practice to call and examine the medical witness in the Sessions Court when the death of a person is involved and the Sessions Judge is specially empowered under sub-section (2) to require the attendance of the medical witness to be examined in the Sessions Court. See 55 C. 565 as to the necessity of examining the Medical Officer in the Sessions Court in a Murder Case, where the medical report is inconsistent with the prosecution evidence.

A post mortem report is no evidence. It can only be used to refresh the memory of the witness while giving evidence, 27 C. 295; but the report itself is inadmissible in evidence. So when another medical officer is examined he cannot be asked his opinion on the facts stated in such a report but from facts already on record, 9 C. 433; 11 W.R. (Cr.) 23; 27 C. 293. So also an inquest report by itself is not evidence, 1 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 75. A mere letter of a medical officer, 12 W.R. (Cr.) 23 or his medical certificate is no evidence unless the medical officer proves the facts stated therein as a witness; see 9 C. 455 & C. 211.

510. Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government, upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code.

Report of Chemical Examiner.

May be used as evidence.—In order that the report referred to in this section may be used as evidence it must purport to be signed by the officer who detected, say poison, in the articles submitted to him for examination, and who from personal knowledge could certify to the correctness of the result embodied in the report, Weir II, 661. It must be the original report bearing the signature of the Chemical Examiner and not merely a copy of the report that is evidence in the case, 6 B.L.R. Appx. 122—13 W.R. (Cr.) 49. An Additional Chemical Examiner's report was held to be inadmissible in evidence, as the section speaks of no such officer, 10 C. 1026, but to meet this ruling the word 'any' was introduced subsequently. The law makes the contents of the report of a Chemical Examiner to Government, evidence and dispenses with the necessity of examining him as a witness, but such report can be of no use unless there is proof of the identity of the articles found during investigation and sent to the Chemical Examiner with the articles examined by him 20 M.L.J. 637=1910 M.W.N. 77=7 M.L.T. 314=11 Cr. L.J. 222=6 Ind. Cas. 51. The Chemical Examiner must be satisfied on the evidence that the substances examined were in fact what they were said to be, 18 C.W.N. 180=15 Cr. L.J. 147=22 Ind. Cas. 723. Under this section any document purporting to be a report under the hand of a Chemical Examiner may be used as evidence. This does not however imply that without tendering it as evidence in the trial Court, it can be used for the first time in appeal. The report is only a piece of evidence which does not require formal proof but it must be tendered as evidence so that the accused may have an opportunity of questioning the identity of the material objects sent for Chemical examination, 21 A.L.J. 869=26 Cr. L.J. 200=83 Ind. Cas. 904 but a report made by a Government excise analyst does not come within this section, 30 Bom. L.R. 648. A certificate of a Professor of Anatomy as to identity of certain bones submitted to him for examination is no evidence under this section without examining the Professor as an expert witness, 47 B. 74. There is no provision in the Code authorising the Court to send up articles for chemical examination or the procedure of submitting the same; usually they are submitted during police investigation and the person who takes them is examined as a witness. A Court is entitled to send for examination a material object say a bottle alleged to contain opium to a chemical examiner to satisfy itself unless it found that it was necessary to have further evidence on the question whether the material object produced contained opium or not. The only legal way in which such a thing could be done is to take evidence regularly if necessary, then send for a report which should be formally put in evidence with additional evidence to prove that the thing sent for examination was the identical thing seized from the possession of the accused, 27 Cr. L.J. 1231=98 Ind. Cas. 177.

511. In any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, a previous conviction or acquittal may be proved, in addition to any other mode provided by any law for the time being in force—

Previous conviction or acquittal how proved.

(a) by an extract certified under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had to be a copy of the sentence or order, or,

(b) in case of a conviction, either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted, or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered;

together with, in each of such cases, evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted.

This section deals with the mode of proving previous conviction or acquittal of an accused person

Previous Conviction.—The filing of a certified extract of the kind required by the section is not by itself proof of a previous conviction. The accused should be asked to plead to the previous conviction and if necessary evidence should be taken, 2 L.B.R. 53. In order to support a charge of a previous conviction there should be on record a copy of some judgment, or extract from a judgment, or some other documentary evidence of the fact of such previous conviction. The examination by the Magistrate of the accused in respect of such previous conviction is without legal warrant or justification, 28 C. 689; 26 C. 49. But under S. 310 (b) the accused may at the stage indicated therein be asked whether he has been previously convicted. A Presidency Magistrate is not absolved from the ordinary rules of evidence in taking proof of previous conviction, 43 C. 1128. A previous conviction must be strictly proved in the manner provided by this section, 17 Cr. L.J. 179=33 Ind. Cas 819, and unless strictly proved, the Court cannot take into consideration the previous conviction, 43 C. 1128. A finger-print expert, on a comparison of certain finger prints of accused taken in Court, with some other finger-prints on a paper which contained a record of such convictions which purported to be the convictions of the accused, pronounced them to be similar. It was held by the High Court that the previous convictions were not properly proved in the case as required by law, 21 C.W.N. 469=18 Cr. L.J. 362=39 Ind. Cas 302. See also 5 Cr. L.J. 220, as to the value of finger-impression evidence.

Evidence as to identity of the accused.—This identity of the accused with the person so convicted or acquitted is very essential, 9 B.L.R. Appx. 151=15 W.R. (Cr. 53); 1881 A.W.N. 144. The section does not say that the identity of the accused must be proved by calling witnesses or in any other particular way. What the section says is "in addition to any other mode provided by law for the time being in force." Any relevant evidence upon which the Court can properly act to find the accused before the Court was previously convicted is sufficient. For example finger impressions furnish a surer test of identity than any other comparable bodily features of a person. See 1 C.W.N. 33; 32 C. 759; 26 C. 49; but see 21 C.W.N. 469 noted above. The Jailor or some other Jail authority can be examined to prove the accused's identity, Ratanlal 52; 1900 A.W.N. 51, when some evidence as to the identity of the accused has been let in, the accused may be asked to explain the fact and if he admits, further proof is unnecessary, 9 Cr. L.J. 56.

512. (1) If it is proved that an accused person has absconded and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of may, in his absence, examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution, and record their depositions. Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into, or trial for, the offence with which he is charged, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence, or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable.

Record of evidence in absence of the accused.

(2) If it appears that an offence punishable with death or transportation has been committed by some person or persons unknown, the High Court may direct that any Magistrate of the first class shall hold an inquiry and examine any witnesses who can give evidence concerning the offence. Any depositions so taken may be given in evidence against any person who is subsequently accused of the offence, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or beyond the limits of British India.

when offender unknown.

Scope of the section.—The general rule is that statements given against a person in his absence cannot be used as evidence against him in a criminal trial. Exceptions to the rule can be created by statute and when a statute permits something to be done which, a fundamental rule prohibits, it can only be done by compliance with the statute which creates the exception. Where two witnesses gave evidence against certain persons then under trial who happen to refer to an absconding person, their statements at the subsequent trial of the person who had absconded cannot be read as evidence merely because the witnesses happened to be absent and cannot give evidence. Evidence given at a trial for one purpose cannot be converted by an ex post facto operation into an equivalent of what is called a deposition under this section when at the time the witnesses gave their evidence the question of recording a deposition under this section was not contemplated, 43 A. 375. What this section requires is that it should be proved that the accused has absconded and there is no immediate prospect of arresting him and not that a finding to that effect should be recorded, 6 Lah. 439. This section is a departure from the ordinary rule that evidence must be taken in the presence of the accused and should therefore be construed strictly and every statement placed on record should be strictly proved, 1890 A.W.N. 100. A Court is given jurisdiction to record evidence in the absence of an accused person only in cases in which it has been proved (1) that the accused has absconded, (2) that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him. If these facts are not found, evidence recorded behind the back of the accused is inadmissible in evidence when he is put on his trial. When practicable the witnesses, whose statements had been previously recorded under this section in the absence of the accused, should again be examined, 22 W.R. (Cr.) 33.

If it is proved that a person has absconded—The word used here is "proved" and not "has reason to believe" as in S. 87, supra. This section nowhere says that the Magistrate must record a finding as to the absconding of the accused and that there is no immediate prospect of his arrest. 1900 A.W.N. 100; 1896 A.W.N. 182. The Magistrate before recording evidence in the absence of the accused ought to satisfy himself, first that the accused is absconding and that there is no immediate prospect of his arrest and it is certainly advisable that he should recite in his order that he finds this to be the case, 10 C. 1037; 21 W.R. (Cr.) 12; 1883 P.R. (Cr.) 31. If he fails to record clear findings on these questions although they may be clearly inferred from the evidence on record, the provisions of the section have been complied with, 41 A. 60 where 33 A. 29 which took a narrow construction of the section was distinguished. See also 3 A. 672; 1886 A.W.N. 182 and 10 C. 1037; 13 A.L.J. 1033. Under this section a Magistrate cannot decline to call for documents desired by the complainant or to record evidence on his behalf on the ground that the accused has absconded and no inquiry was, therefore, conducted by him. But he is bound by the provisions of this section to record all the available evidence to prevent the complainant becoming a victim of serious injury, 2 Bom. L.R. 707.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section was added in the Code of 1898 at the suggestion of the Bombay High Court. It applies only to cases of great gravity and should only be put in force under the orders of the High Court, and mere delay, expense or inconvenience in obtaining the presence of the deponent contemplated by sub-section (1) should not be a sufficient ground for recording the evidence during the absence of the accused and subsequently using it against him. Under this sub-section a deposition recorded thereunder may on the arrest of the absconder be given in evidence against him at his trial but if the witness who gave the deposition actually appeared in Court and said that he did not remember details of the occurrence, it cannot be said that he is incapable of giving evidence. If a witness becomes dumb or insane he could properly be held to be incapable of giving evidence, and the proper procedure where the witness says he does not remember details is to refresh his memory under S. 159, Indian Evidence Act, by reading out the deposition previously recorded and without doing so the deposition cannot be admitted in evidence, 25 Cr. L.J. 95-76 Ind. Cas. 31. The deposition taken under this section may be given in evidence not only when the witness is dead but also in cases where after diligent search the witness could not be found or where he resides outside British India or has become incapable of giving evidence, e.g., has become a lunatic. But if the witness is living and his presence can be procured, it cannot be treated as evidence, 12 Cr. L.J. 214-10 Ind. Cas. 119; 25 Cr. L.J. 95-76 Ind. Cas. 31. A proceeding under this sub-section is not an inquiry or trial within S. 517, infra, 25 Cr. L.J. 666-81 Ind. Cas. 154.

CHAPTER XLII.

PROVISIONS AS TO BONDS.

513. When any person is required by any Court or officer to execute a bond, with or without sureties, such Court or officer may, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, permit him to deposit a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as the Court or officer may fix, in lieu of executing such bond.

Except in the case of good behaviour.—The object of law in providing for security for good behaviour is that a surety, should be responsible for the good behaviour of the persons called upon to furnish security, while in the case of other bonds the object is merely to ensure attendance, in which case a deposit of cash security is permissible, 2 N.W.P. H.C.R. 295 Ratanlal 674. See Ss. 109 and 118, supra.

Execute a bond with sureties.—When a person executed a bond for a sum certain to be paid to government if he should within the period specified commit any offences, and two persons subscribe an undertaking to be sureties the proper procedure for the Magistrate who intends to confiscate the bond is to call upon the Government or its representative before him to declare against which of the persons liable it elects to proceed and for what amount and to pass orders accordingly. In no case can the amount be in excess of the amount secured by the bond be demanded or recovered from the person bound or his sureties jointly or severally, 12 Cr. L.J. 404-11 Ind. Cas. 588. The bond contemplated by Ss. 112 and 118, supra, is a single bond for a specific amount and is discharged on forfeiture by payment by either the principal or surety. In no case can an amount in excess of the amount secured by the bond be demanded or recovered from the person bound over or his sureties individually or collectively, 8 Lah. 448; 4 Lah. 462.

Permit the deposit of a sum of money, etc.—The deposit of money allowed under this section is in substitution only of the bond which the principal himself would otherwise execute and not in substitution of any bond which his surety executes, 32 B. 449 at 453.

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first-class, or, when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid.

Procedure on forfeiture of bond.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate, if he be dead.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall authorise the attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

(4) If such penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable, by order of the Court which issued the warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months.

(5) The Court may, at its discretion, remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only.

(6) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited, his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond.

(7) When any person who has furnished security under section 106 or section 118 or section 562 is convicted of an offence the commission of which constitutes a breach of the conditions of his bond, or of a bond executed in lieu of his bond under section 514B, a certified copy of the judgment of the Court by which he was convicted of such offence may be used as evidence in proceedings under this section against his surety or sureties, and, if such certified copy is so used, the Court shall presume that such offence was committed by him unless the contrary is proved.

Extent of Amendment.—The word "distress" in sub-section (3) is omitted and the word "attachment" is substituted. In sub-section (6) the words "but the party who gave the bond may be required to find a new surety" are omitted; a new sub-section (7) has been added, which provides that proof of a conviction should be conclusive as to the breach except where such conviction 'has proceeded solely on the plea of guilty in which case the surety should be allowed an opportunity to disprove the guilt of the principal. The decision in 1917 M.W.N. 195=18 Cr. L.J. 1=36 Ind. Cas. 833, to the effect that moveable property did not include debts and choses in action is no longer law by the new amendment substituting 'attachment' for 'distress'.

Scope and Object of the section.—This section provides that whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the First-class, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court may call upon the person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof or to show cause why it should not be paid. It would be observed that the qualifying words of the section are "a bond under this Code", 30 Cr. L.J. 527=115 Ind. Cas. 763. The object of these surety bonds is as far as possible to ensure that the accused person shall not evade justice in the ordinary course, say, by flying from the country or from the jurisdiction of the Court. But if he elects to die sooner than face his trial, that can hardly be a sufficient reason for forfeiting the surety bond since that was an event which the sureties could not have had in contemplation, and which is not of the kind which would impose upon them any moral obligation or responsibility to the Court, 18 Bom. L.R. 683 at 685. The principle of forfeiture of rights in consequence of default in procedure by a party to a cause is a principle of punishment in respect of such default, but the punishment of the dead or the ranking of death under the category of default does not seem to be very stateable, 35 A. 331 (P.C.) referred to in 47 M. 171 at 173. The provisions of this section apply to all bonds whether executed by principals, sureties or witnesses for appearance in Court, 2 M. 169. A bond containing a provision that the person executing the bond shall be liable for any breach of peace by his servants and dependants is illegal, 1831 A.W.N. 152. A bail bond must come under the second part of sub-section (1) of this section and therefore it is necessary that the forfeiture should be established to the satisfaction of the Court before which the accused was bound by the bond to appear, and that is the Court to exercise the power. A bail bond cannot be forfeited on failure of the accused to appear in a Court to which the case is transferred when the obligation to appear in such Court is not specifically mentioned in the bond. A bail bond is to be construed strictly, 2 Ran. 581. When a person who stands bail to an accused person and undertakes to produce him before the Court when called upon and in default to forfeit a sum of money to Government is not discharged from his liability by the fact that the accused person had paid the amount of his bail bond. The person who stood bail is not a security to the accused's bond but the undertaking is to produce the accused in Court or in default to forfeit a sum of money, 10 Cr. L.J. 254=3 Ind. Cas. 470. The proper Court to direct the forfeiture of a bail bond is the Court before which the accused was bound by the bond to do a specific act and the forfeiture must be established to the satisfaction of the Court. The bond should be strictly construed and where the obligation is not specifically mentioned in the bond, the bond cannot be forfeited for failure to fulfil the obligation, 2 Ran. 581. It has been held that a security bond taken in accordance with form XLII, Sch. V, is wide enough to include the successor of a Court in which the case originally was; any other view of the law would produce most inconvenient results since if an accused were on bail when a case was transferred it would in every case be necessary before transferring the case to order his arrest or to require him to give fresh sureties 27 Cr. L.J. 377=52 Ind. Cas. 889. The section first deals with bonds generally and then with bonds for appearance and the procedure prescribed herein is an exception to the general rule that a person charged can be convicted only on evidence taken in his presence. If the person called upon to show cause why the penalty should not be paid then he should be afforded an opportunity of cross-examining the witness on whose evidence the rule to show cause is issued. If the accused had an opportunity already before the Magistrate to show cause in a proceeding for a breach of the peace or for any other offence then there is no necessity for giving him any further opportunity, § C. 865 (F.B.). Bonds taken under the City Police Act for appearance before the police are not bonds under this Code or for appearance before a Court and such bonds cannot be forfeited by a Presidency

Magistrate purporting to act under this section, 42 B 400; see 11 C. 77. Bond to secure attendance of an accused person before a Magistrate is not invalid for the reason that it was taken by a Magistrate other than the one before whom the accused is to appear, 2 Bom. L.R. 589. Where a person stood surety for the appearance of an accused person before a particular Magistrate before whom the case was being tried and the accused failed to appear before a Magistrate to whom the case was transferred subsequently, it was held that the surety did not commit a breach of the bond, 6 C.W.N. 835.

Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court.—These words are of the widest character and there is no time limit for exacting the penalty. When the principal and his sureties contract that the principal will not commit an offence within a fixed period mentioned in the bond and if he does commit an offence or cease to be of good behaviour then there is nothing in the Code to prevent the penalty being executable at any time. It would be preposterous to suppose that the principal and his surety should go free because the principal commits some grave offence with such skill that he is not detected till after the period of the bond had expired; yet that is the conclusion which necessarily follows if the plea of limitation ruled is accepted. It may be a hardship to exact state claims against the subject but if that becomes the general practice, no doubt, the Legislature will interfere, 27 Cr. L.J. 326=92 Ind. Cas. 742. See also 26 A. 232. Breach of condition mentioned in the bond must be strictly proved before the bond is forfeited, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 52; 11 B.H.C.R. 170. An inquiry should be held before declaring a bond forfeited and the party must have an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses upon whose evidence he was called upon to show cause why the bond should not be forfeited, 4 C. 855 (F.B.). Before forfeiting a bond for good behaviour an inquiry after notice to the sureties should be held to prove that the person under security has committed an offence and not merely a reasonable suspicion entertained by the Police of his complicity with an offence. Evidence recorded before issue of notice to surety to show cause cannot be looked into and an order of forfeiture cannot be passed on such evidence on surety's non-appearance, 51 C. 134. In the case of a bond for appearance before a particular Court under this section proceedings to have the bond forfeited can be initiated only by that Court. This section in its opening clause deals first of all with bonds generally and then with a bond for appearance before a Court. So far as bonds generally are concerned there is a provision that action may be taken by the Court by which bonds have been taken or by the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first-class but in the case of a bond for appearance before a Court, the tribunal indicated is that Court and no other, 14 C.W.N. 259; 15 Bom. L.R. 83. Failure to appear before a Magistrate other than the one named in the bond cannot work a forfeiture, 30 C. 107. An attempt to poison another is not an offence which would probably occasion a breach of the peace working a forfeiture of the bond for keeping the peace, 15 Cr. L.J. 605=25 Ind. Cas. 517. When a person under a bond to keep the peace under S. 107, supra, instituted a civil suit to enforce his right in respect of the subject-matter of the dispute, the act of instituting the suit does not involve a forfeiture of the security bond taken. In instituting the civil suit the party is not guilty of any wrongful act as he was acting within his rights. It is clearly not the intention of the Legislature to prevent persons bound over from seeking to enforce their rights both in civil and criminal Courts. Otherwise the result will be that no one bound over will be able to enforce his rights in Courts without endangering a forfeiture of his bond, 1 Lah. 310.

That a bond taken under this Code has been forfeited.—It is not necessary that there should be first of all a conviction of the person bound over for a forfeiture of the bond and then to call upon the surety why he should not be proceeded against under the bond. If, in the proceedings taken against a surety, it is proved that the person bound over had committed an offence that would be sufficient to lead to a forfeiture of the bond, 80 A. 686 at 693. The record of conviction of the principal is sufficient evidence against the surety and it is not necessary for Government to prove over again the factum of conviction to render the sureties liable, 12 Cr. L.J. 494=11 Ind. Cas. 533. The use of the word 'probably' in Form, X Bch. V of the Code, limits forfeiture to cases in which a breach of the peace is a probable result of the act of the person bound over to keep the peace and there is no reason for holding that a breach of the peace was the probable result, if the person bound over commits the offence of abduction of the wife of one who had nothing to do with the security proceedings against the executant of the bond, 1905 P.R. (Cr. J.) 7=4 Cr. L.J. 278. When during the investigation of a reported case of burglary the police seized four bullocks and handed them over to S on his executing a bond to produce them before a Court or the police, fixing a penalty in default and when the case was ultimately sent up for trial before a Magistrate and when called upon by him to produce the bullocks, on his failure to produce them the Magistrate directed another bond to be executed for the production of the bullocks on a particular date, and on his failure to produce them on that date, the bond was forfeited, it cannot be contended that the bond so taken is not a bond under this Code. S. 516A, infra, shows that when any property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed is produced before the Court during any inquiry or trial the Court may make such order for its proper custody pending the inquiry or trial. Even though the bullocks were not actually produced in Court, it seems clear that S having already received the custody of the bullocks by giving an undertaking to produce them did by executing a fresh bond to the Court waive the necessity of their production in Court and admitted that he received their custody from the Court on the date he executed the bond and such a bond is covered by 516A. infra 30 Cr. L.J. 827=115 Ind. Cas. 763.

To show cause why the amount should not be paid—Where a Magistrate recorded some evidence and came to a conclusion that a person under security had committed an offence within the period during which security was taken and then issued notice to the sureties to show cause why the bond executed should not be forfeited and on their failure to appear on the date fixed forfeited the bond acting solely on the evidence previously recorded, it was held, that the order for forfeiture was bad (1) because no evidence was recorded after notice to the sureties, (2) because the evidence recorded before notice was not such as would ground a finding of fact against the sureties or even against the person bound over that he had in fact been guilty of an offence, 44 C.L.J. 170. The mere fact that no immediate action was taken under this section against a person under recognizance to keep the peace or against his surety on conviction of the former for an offence involving a breach of the peace is no bar to the taking of such proceedings at subsequent time, e.g., after the time for appealing had expired or after the appeal by the principal has been dismissed, 26 A. 202, dissenting from 1 C.L.R. 134 and 3 C.L.R. 406. The view taken in 26 A. 202 was followed in 27 Cr. L.J. 326=92 Ind. Cas. 742. See also the new sub-section (7) which supports this view. If a criminal Court knowing that a person charged before it is under security to be of good behaviour, in sentencing him takes no step to confiscate the security, it is not competent to that Court or any other Court in a subsequent or separate proceeding to take such steps, 25 Cr. L.J. 4=75 Ind. Cas. 693; 14 Cr. L.J. 67=18 Ind. Cas. 403. After a conviction under S. 323, I.P.C., a bond for good behaviour can be forfeited and the amount of the bond can be recovered from the principal or surety, but not from both, 4 Lah. 462. The bond taken under S. 118, supra, is one bond for one amount and is discharged on forfeiture, by payment of the amount due either by the principal or surety. In no case can an amount in excess of the amount secured by the bond, be demanded or received from the person bound over or his sureties individually or collectively, 5 Lah. 443, following 1894 P.R. (Cr. J.) 2; 12 Cr. L.J. 404=11 Ind. Cas. 588 and disapproving 36 C. 562. If there is nothing in the section to deprive a Magistrate from taking a particular line of action, it does not lie with the superior Court to reverse that decision, 27 Cr. L.J. 238=92 Ind. Cas. 742. A Magistrate when forfeiting a bond for security for good behaviour cannot forthwith commit the person under security for the unexpired portion of the term for which security has been taken and there is no provision in the Code for such a procedure and the remedy may be to start fresh proceedings against the person under Chapter VIII of the Code, 1906 A.W.N. 442=3 Cr. L.J. 556.

Or his estate, if he be dead—These words were newly added in the 1893 Code to meet certain rulings which held that the representative of a deceased surety is not liable to be proceeded against in a summary proceeding under this Chapter.

Sub-section (4).—When the penalty of the bond is not paid, the first step which the Court should take is to recover the sum by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to the person liable under the bond, or his estate if he be dead. It is only when a penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered by attachment and sale that the person bound is liable to imprisonment under this sub-section, 30 Cr. L.J. 346 at 348=114 Ind. Cas. 682.

Sub section (5).—Where a person who has been let out on bail commits suicide the sureties are discharged from their obligation to produce him and no legal order forfeiting the bonds of the sureties could be passed, as in such a case, there is no neglect or default on their part to make them liable on the bond, 37 M. 156; 16 C.W.N. 550. Where a surety is unable to produce a person for whom he has given bail owing to some circumstance which was not really under his control, e.g., the imprisonment of the person bailed into the King's service or his arrest on a charge of felony or the like, the surety will not be compelled to discharge his bail in the ordinary circumstances. What constitutes discharge of the surety is discussed in 37 M. 156 and 16 C.W.N. 550. (1) act of God, (2) act of law, (3) act of parties. Since the person for whom the surety stood bail had been arrested on a charge of dacoity in another Province the case falls under "act of law" which includes also cases where a person is sent abroad under an Alien Deportation Act, becoming a Peer, being sentenced to transportation or being impressed by the Press Gang, 4 Pat. 259; see also 18 Bom. L.R. 683=17 Cr. L.J. 393=35 Ind. Cas. 825. It is the duty of the surety to see that the accused does not run away. Where the surety has failed to produce the accused by reason of an illegal order passed by the Magistrate which the surety was not bound to carry out and where there is no connivance or negligence on his part, it cannot be said that the surety acted irresponsibly and should be penalised, 49 A. 825. Where a person stands surety for the production of an accused person in Court when called upon and in default to forfeit a sum of money, the surety is not discharged from his obligation by the mere fact that the accused for whom he stood surety has paid the amount of his bail bond, 17 Cr. L.J. 294=3 Ind. Cas. 470. When a surety bound himself to produce the accused at the trial was unable to do so he cannot successfully plead that the accused is absent on account of an engagement between the accused and the complainant which agreement was within his knowledge but in such a case full amount of the bond should not be exacted, 8 Lah. L.J. 402=27 Cr. L.J. 1152=97 Ind. Cas. 676.

Sub-section (6).—Where a surety dies before the bond is forfeited his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond. But the bond taken for the principal's appearance from a surety was held enforceable when the principal failed to appear before the Magistrate even in a case in which the arrest under a warrant of the principal, was found to be illegal and unauthorised. The nature of the obligation of the principal has no reference to the obligation of the surety, 2 Lah. 204.

Sub-section (7).—If the bond is broken by the commission of an offence by the person so bound, this sub-section provides that the commission of that offence may be proved by production of a certified copy of the Judgment of conviction. If as held in various decisions that it was the duty of the Court convicting him to enforce the bond and if no other Court could do so, the sub-section would be meaningless. To meet those decisions that the convicting Court should immediately take action and cannot do so afterwards by appeal, proceeding this sub section has been enacted, 27 Cr. L.J. 328=92 Ind. Cas. 752.

fresh security in accordance with the directions of the original order, and if such security is not furnished, such Court or Magistrate may proceed as if there had been a default in complying with such original order.

This section has been newly added to meet cases where a surety to a bond becomes insolvent or dies. The person from whom security was demanded may be called upon to furnish fresh security in accordance with the directions of the original order and in case of default the Magistrate may proceed against him for breach of the condition of the original order. If a person bound over happens to be convicted before proceedings are taken against a surety, reference should be made in the notice and a certified copy of the Judgment may be used as evidence in proceedings under this section. It is nowhere laid down that the person giving the bond should actually be convicted before proceedings are taken against the surety, 50 A. 666 at 668.

514B. When the person required by any Court or officer to execute a bond is a minor, such Court or officer may accept, in lieu thereof, a bond executed by a surety or sureties only.

Bond required from a minor.

This section is new. It deals with a bond required from a minor. In such a case a bond executed by a surety or sureties only may be accepted. See S. 29 (4) Mad. Children Act IV of 1920 which enacts that if the bond is not executed, the minor may be ordered to be sent to a certified school, like the Borstal Institute in Tanjore.

515. All orders passed under section 514 by any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, shall be appealable to the District Magistrate, or, if not so appealed, may be revised by him.

Appeal from, and revision of, orders under section 514.

This section provides an appeal from orders passed under S. 514, supra, by any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or a District Magistrate. The District Magistrate is also given the power of revision, but the general power of the High Court to exercise revision under S. 439, supra, is not thereby taken away. The jurisdiction of a superior Court cannot be taken away except by express words or necessary implication. The general power of revision vested in the High Court, cannot be taken away because a power of revision is expressly given to the District Magistrate under this section. When a District Magistrate exercised his powers of revision under this section, the High Court has still power to revise such orders passed by the District Magistrate, 13 Cr. L.J. 31=13 Ind. Cas. 223 relying on 4 B. 523, where it was held that the jurisdiction of a superior Court cannot be taken away except by express words or necessary implication. A District Magistrate cannot divest himself of his powers as an appellate Court under this section and make a reference to the High Court under S. 438, supra, doubting the correctness of certain rulings of the High Court, 1914 F.W.R. (Cr.) 14. A bond taken for keeping the peace is not given to any particular person, but to the Court and a private person therefore is not entitled to appeal under this section against an order refusing to forfeit a bond. But it is open to the District Magistrate to exercise his judicial discretion in the matter, 23 Cr. L.J. 435=77 Ind. Cas. 733.

516. The High Court or Court of Session may direct any Magistrate to levy the amount due on a bond to appear and attend at such High Court or Court of Session.

Power to direct levy of amount due on certain recognizances.

Scope of the section.—This section does not authorise the delegation of power to initiate forfeiture proceedings, but deals with the power of the High Court and Court of Session to direct the levy of the amount on a forfeited bond on failure to appear and attend the High Court or Court of Session. This section is only concerned with the power to direct the levy of the amount due and not forfeiture which is a condition precedent to the levy. The procedure on forfeiture is defined in S. 514, supra, 14 C.W.N. 259=10 Cr. L.J. 243=3 Ind. Cas. 113.

CHAPTER XLIII.

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.

516A. When any property regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which appears to have been used for the commission of any offence, is produced before any Criminal Court during any inquiry or trial, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the proper custody of such property pending the conclusion of the inquiry or trial, and, if the property is subject to speedy or natural decay, may, after recording such evidence as it thinks necessary, order it to be sold or otherwise disposed of.

Order for custody and disposal of property pending trial in certain cases.

This section has been newly added, empowering the Court to make orders as to the proper custody of property produced before it pending inquiry or trial and in cases where the property is subject to speedy or natural decay to sell or otherwise dispose of it. When during the investigation of a reported case of burglary, S was entrusted with four bullocks seized by the Police on his undertaking to produce them on demand before the Court or the Police with a penalty for default, and when the case was sent up for trial before a Magistrate on S's failure to produce the bullocks on an appointed date, the Magistrate directed him to execute another bond to produce the bullocks, and on his failure so to do, the bond was forfeited under S. 514; it cannot be contended successfully that this section did not apply on the ground that the bullocks were not produced before the Court during the inquiry or trial within the meaning of the section. Even though the bullocks were not actually produced in Court it seems clear that S having already received their custody on giving an undertaking to produce them did by executing a fresh bond to the Court waive the necessity for their production in Court and returned to him, in other words he admitted that he received the custody of the bullocks from the Court on the date he executed the bond to the Court and such a bond is covered by the provisions of this section, 30 Cr. L.J. 527=115 Ind. Cas. 765.

Proceedings under this section by a person from whose custody property was seized pending an inquiry into an offence for restoration of the property to him after the termination of the inquiry are of a quasi Civil nature and when a party against whom an application for restoration has been made fails to appear after notice the Court is not bound to wait for him and may hold the inquiry as to restoration of the property during his absence and pass an order against him ex parte, 30 Cr. L.J. 346=115 Ind. Cas. 632.

517. (1) When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal by destruction, confiscation or delivery to any person claiming to be entitled to the possession thereof or otherwise of any property or document produced before it or in its custody or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of any offence.

(2) When a High Court or a Court of Session makes such order and cannot through its own officers conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, such Court may direct that the order be carried into effect by the District Magistrate.

(3) When an order is made under this section, such order shall not, except where the property is live-stock or subject to speedy and natural decay, and save as provided by sub-section (4), be carried out for one month, or, when an appeal is presented, until such appeal has been disposed of.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit any Court from delivering any property under the provisions of sub-section (1) to any person claiming to be entitled to the possession thereof, on his executing a bond with or without sureties, to the satisfaction of the Court engaging to restore such property to the Court if the order made under this section is modified or set aside on appeal.

Explanation.—In this section the term “property” includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise.

Extent of Amendment.—In sub-section (1) the mode of disposal is indicated by addition of the words “by destruction, confiscation, delivery to claimant or otherwise,” Sub-section (3) is re-drafted, sub-section (4) is new.

Scope and Object of the section—An order under this section does not decide the question of ownership but only the right to possession till a Civil Court decides the question of ownership, 20 Cr. L.J. 332=50 Ind. Cas 668. As a general rule the Magistrate acting under this section should pass orders according to his discretion without making further inquiry and it is only in very exceptional cases further inquiry should be made, 24 Cr. L.J. 238=71 Ind. Cas. 702. To enable a Court to act under this section the property or document in question (1) must be produced before it, (2) must be in its custody, (3) it must appear that an offence has been committed regarding it, or (4) it must have been used for the commission of an offence, and at least one of these conditions must exist in an inquiry or trial in such Courts. It is not necessary that an offence should have been committed in respect of the property, 34 C 347. After a trial and conviction for felony, property found in the possession of the felon when he was apprehended but which has not been shown to be part of or connected with the stolen property or the proceeds of it cannot be disposed of in any particular manner, 27 L.J. (M.C.) 231. Property in respect of which criminal breach of trust has been committed is as much stolen property as property the possession of which is transferred by theft according to S. 410, I.P.C. Such property should be handed over by the criminal Court back to the possession of the real owner unconditionally, 3 Luck 494 at 505. The essential of this section is that the property or document must be proved to have been used in the commission of the offence or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed. So cash found on a person convicted of illegally importing opium cannot legally be confiscated, 25 Cr. L.J. 615=81 Ind. Cas. 103. So also cash which cannot strictly be said to be property except in so far as it is capable of being possessed and identified in specie. If actual coins found on thieves or receivers, are the actual coins which have been the subject of theft, then it is advisable to treat such cash as stolen property, 26 Cr. L.J. 1315=89 Ind. Cas. 239. Where a Magistrate in proceedings under S. 145, supra, cancels the preliminary order on the ground that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace, he has no jurisdiction to order one of the parties to reap the crop on the disputed land and such order is liable to be set aside as illegal, 3 C.L.J. 573=3 Cr. L.J. 466. Where pending inquiry under S. 145, supra, crops on the disputed lands were ordered to be cut and deposited with a third party and the Magistrate on inquiry found he had no jurisdiction, as the parties were in joint possession, and dropped the proceeding he had a discretion to pass orders as to the disposal of the crops with the third party and the High Court declined to interfere with the order directing the crops to be divided equally between the parties, 18 Cr. L.J. 616=39 Ind. Cas. 984 (2). The object of the section is to enable the Magistrate to direct it to be given to some person to whom it appears to belong or allow it to continue in the possession of the person in whose possession it was found, 9 C.W.N. 597. The section does not limit the power of a Court which has omitted to pass an order for disposal of exhibits as part of its judgment convicting the accused, so as to deprive it of all power subsequently to pass orders for the disposal of property. The Court of Appeal or Revision is not so limited and S. 620, infra, expressly authorises the separate consideration where necessary, of matters referred to in this section, 26 Cr. L.J. 518=85 Ind. Cas. 338 where 35 B. 253 is referred to. The Magistrate is invested with a discretionary power and it is a rule of law that such power should be exercised judicially, i.e., according to sound principles of law and not arbitrarily. If there are materials, the Magistrate's discretion comes into operation, otherwise he should return the property to the person from whom it was produced, 11 Bom. L.R. 16=9 Cr. L.J. 162=1 Ind. Cas. 103; 2 Bom. L.R. 748. This section is limited to the offences actually under investigation. Property used for the commission of an offence not under investigation, or property regarding which no offence appears to have been committed, cannot be dealt with under this section, Ratanlal 500. This section applies only to the property in respect of which an offence has been committed and not to which the stolen property is exchanged or converted, 20 Bom. L.R. 604. The Magistrate is not entitled to proceed under this section when question of title is involved, 19 Cr. L.J. 758. Where property the subject of the offence has passed into the hands of third parties and a question of bona fides and title by purchase or otherwise arises, the duty of the Criminal Court is to leave the complainant to his remedy in the Civil Court if he thinks he has one, 24 Cr. L.J. 803=74 Ind. Cas. 703. This section applies only to moveable property and does not extend to immoveable property, 12 L.W. 227=21 Cr. L.J. 110=59 Ind. Cas. 414; 35 C. 44; 18 C.W.N. 1156; 1900 A.W.N. 81. This section cannot apply where the property has already passed out of the custody of the Court, [1921] Pat. 128. An order directing delivery of property to a person on his application into the absence of any criminal proceeding or inquiry before the Magistrate or any other Magistrate, is without jurisdiction, 6 C.L.J. 707. There is no time limit within which an application under this section or S. 620, infra, is to be made to a Court, 4 Lah. 49. Where in the course of an investigation by the police in a case of dacoity certain persons produced cash, jewelry etc. before them and also made certain statements concerning the discovery and production of the articles and they were charged with dacoity and convicted but acquitted on appeal on the ground that the articles produced were not proved to be part of the property lost in the dacoity, it was held that the trial Court cannot make an order subsequently under this section relying on the statements made by the accused before the police at the investigation making over the properties to the complainant. Although the statements could be relied on if they are proved as required by law it was not open to the trial Court to hand over the same to the complainant, as the appellate Court found them not to form part of the property dacoited, but the articles should have been returned to the accused, complainant being left to his remedy in the Civil Court, 26 Cr. L.J. 737=86 Ind. Cas. 273.

Inquiry or Trial is concluded.—Proceedings under the preventive sections of Chapter VIII of the Code come within the expression 'inquiry or trial' within this section and therefore the Magistrate has jurisdiction for sufficient cause to confiscate property produced before it or in its custody even in the absence of proof that an offence has been committed in respect of it or it was used in the commission of an offence, 42 M. 9. An order can only be made at the conclusion of the inquiry and any order made after conclusion of the inquiry on the application of a party is without jurisdiction, 4 Lah 460. An order cannot be made under this section before the conclusion of the trial, Ratanlal 257; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 3. Under this section, the jurisdiction of the Court is confined to an order at the conclusion of the trial for the disposal of property. It need not be in the possession of the Court but it must be still capable of being earmarked and such an order can only be made at the conclusion of the trial and in the presence of the parties who have a right to be heard. An order made not at the conclusion of the trial but several months after it, is bad, 24 Cr. L.J. 804=74 Ind. Cas. 708. When the person charged dies before trial no order can be made, 24 M. 375; 23 B. 844; 17 B. 748; 6 C.L.J. 707; 5 C.L.J. 229; but see 26 B. 552. A Magistrate is bound to hold an inquiry of some sort before he makes an order for the disposal of property seized and produced before him, 25 Cr. L.J. 666=81 Ind. Cas. 153.

May make such order as it thinks fit.—Wide discretion is given to the Court and the discretion is a judicial discretion, 2 Bom. L.R. 768; 11 Bom. L.R. 16=9 Cr. L.J. 162=1 Ind. Cas. 103. Property should generally be restored to the person from whom it was taken, 1 B. 630; 9 M. 448; 24 C. 499; 10 B. 197; 17 B. 748; 22 B. 814; Weir II, 663, 668 and 667; 28 Cr. L.J. 548=102 Ind. Cas. 432. Where title to the property seized is doubtful, it should be returned to the person from whom it was seized unless there are special circumstances which would render such a course unjustifiable, 50 M. 916; where a person is charged with abetment of theft of an elephant found in his house and acquitted, the elephant which had been compulsorily taken away from him by the Police should be restored to him and a wrong order passed by the lower Court as to the handing over of the elephant was set aside by the High Court in revision and it was ordered to be restored to the accused, petitioner, 34 C. 223. There is no authority for the proposition that an order under this section can only be passed in favour of a person from whose possession the property was recovered. Such orders, would, in the majority of cases be confined to orders restoring stolen property to thieves or receivers. No order can be passed under this section until the case is concluded and after that and within a reasonable time, the Magistrate who heard the case is empowered to pass an order as to disposal of property. He may do so at the time of pronouncing his order or later on within a reasonable time. The words "at the time of passing such judgment" which occurred in the Code of 1869 have been deliberately omitted in the later Acts, 26 Cr. L.J. 1433=89 Ind. Cas. 973 where 4 Lah. 460 is not followed. Where conflicting claims to property before the Court were put forward, the proper order for the Court to make was one to keep it in Court subject to any order that might be made by a competent Court of Civil jurisdiction, 28 C.W.N. 1094. When an accused is acquitted, the property seized from him should be restored to him, 1 C.W.N. 561; 3 M.L.T. 334; Weir II, 538, 668 and 669; 2 A. 276, but the Magistrate in special cases can order delivery of the subject-matter of the alleged theft to some party other than the party from whom it was taken, 34 M. 94; 11 Bom. L.R. 16. When property was used by the complainant for concocting a false case of theft against the accused, the Magistrate is not bound to restore it to the complainant to whom it undoubtedly belongs but he may confiscate the same, 24 M.L.J. 1=1913 M.W.N. 851=14 Cr. L.J. 27=18 Ind. Cas. 171. The objects found in the complainant's premises when complainant was convicted of preferring a false charge of theft under S. 132, I.P.C., can be confiscated, 9 C.W.N. 887. When a mother prosecuted a daughter of theft of jewels some of which were joint family property and others self-acquisition of the daughter and the Magistrate discharged the daughter of theft and restored the jewels to the mother and daughter on their joint receipt, it was held that the order was good and the daughter, because of her discharge was not entitled as of right for the return of the jewels to her, 34 M. 94. When an accused person is acquitted of cheating, the Court has no power to restore property found in possession of the accused to the complainant. The proper order to be made in such a case will be that the property should remain in the possession of the person in whose custody they were, 27 Cr. L.J. 853=95 Ind. Cas. 933. A Magistrate cannot by his order direct a party to whom property is delivered to produce it when called upon to do so, 19 M.L.J. 516=11 Cr. L. J. 65=5 Ind. Cas. 875.

For the disposal by destruction, etc.—The different modes of disposal are now specified, viz., destruction, confiscation delivery to claimant. See 34 C. 936, which held that disposal does not include forfeiture, is no longer law. The power of confiscation has been given to the Magistrate by the amended Code and any order of confiscation made before the amendment was without authority, 28 C.W.N. 1093. It would be unsafe to direct the confiscation of all monies found on the person arrested in a common gaming house, 27 Cr. L.J. 951=96 Ind. Cas. 503; where 41 A. 366; 26 B. 641; 44 B. 686, are followed, no order of confiscation of property, the subject of an offence can be passed under this section without giving notice to the complainant and hearing his objection, 17 Cr. L.J. 207=34 Ind. Cas. 319, when a party does not after notice choose to appear before the lower Court in the main proceedings and an order was made as to disposal of property, he cannot be heard to say that he had no notice from the proceedings in the appellate Court against the order of the trial Court, 51 M. 606. It would be straining the language to hold that a cart, pony and harness used in the commission of rash driving an offence punishable under S. 279, I.P.O., come within the meaning of this section and then order them to be sold and the sale proceeds to be paid over to the complainant when convicting the driver of rash driving in a public way, 1904 P.L.R. (Cr. J.) 4 p. 9. Whenever counter-felt coins have to be disposed of, they shall be forwarded together with any dies, mould, etc. to the nearest treasury or sub-treasury with a request to remit the same to the mint for examination. In the case of forged currency, notes, the disposal moulds, dies etc. confiscated by Court, they should be handed over to the Police-officer for destruction and not to be sent to the Currency Office for destruction, Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. Rule 185.

Of any property or document produced, etc.—The word "property" means moveable property, 35 C. 44; 18 C.W.N. 147; 12 L.W. 227=22 Cr.L.J. 410; 1900 A.W.N. 81. It is no longer necessary that the property should have been used for the commission of an offence or the subject-matter of an offence. The Court can now make an order for the disposal of property produced before it or in its custody, 21 Cr.L.J. 414=56 Ind. Cas. 62. Property produced in the course of an inquiry under S. 109 or S. 110 supra can be dealt with under this section, 42 M. 9; 34 C. 347; 21 Cr. L.J. 414=56 Ind. Cas. 62; so also property produced by a witness, 12 B.H.C.R. 217; 21 Cr. L.J. 414; a printing press in which seditious matters have been published cannot be dealt with under this section, 34 C. 936; a boat used for committing theft is not an instrument for committing theft and therefore cannot be dealt with under this section, 8 C.W.N. 837; but property produced under search-warrant can be so dealt with, 25 M. 525; money tied to a gambler's cloth but not actually staked cannot be confiscated, 41 M. 644; 26 B. 641; 26 A. 270; 27 Cr.L.J. 951=96 Ind. Cas. 503; 41 A. 366; 43 B. 686.

Any property regarding which an offence has been committed.—These words may include moveable property regarding the possession of which a quarrel is started or a riot takes place, whatever may be the offence which might ultimately be committed in the course of that quarrel or riot, 51 M. 606.

Used in the commission of offence.—These words must refer to cases of the nature of instruments like guns, swords, etc. produced in Court, a printing press being a remote instrument, 34 C. 936. Money used in bribing a public servant, Weir I, 534; Weir II, 568. But cash is not strictly speaking property except in so far as it is capable of being identified in specie. 26 Cr.L.J. 1313=89 Ind. Cas. 259; property used in concocting a false charge against a person is within the section, 24 M.L.J. 1=1913 M.W.N. 851=14 Cr. L.J. 27=13 Ind. Cas. 171; 9 M. 443; 9 C.W.N. 527; Ratanlal 689. In 19 M.L.J. 254 it was held that a bottle of brandy smuggled by an accused person who was convicted under the Madras Abkari Act could not be forfeited, see also 8 C.W.N. 837 with regard to a boat used for committing theft. While acquitting the accused of criminal trespass and mischief with regard to the cutting and removal of bamboos by the accused from complainant's bamboo clump, the Court cannot validly pass an order to avoid a breach of the peace, that the complainant should retain the bamboo clump until the matter is settled by a Civil Court, 20 C.W.N. 1302=18 Cr. L.J. 442=38 Ind. Cas. 1002.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section provides that when the High Court or Court of Session cannot conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto the District Magistrate may be directed to carry out the order.

Sub-section (3).—One month's time is specially mentioned now irrespective of the filing or the pendency of an appeal. An appeal from a sub-Magistrate's order lies to the District Magistrate and not to a Sub divisional Magistrate, 42 M.L.J. 491=20 M.L.T. 251=1922 M.W.N. 191=15 L.W. 534=23 Cr. L.J. 387=67 Ind. Cas. 339

Sub-section (4).—This sub-section is new and provides for delivery to any person entitled on his executing a security bond for restitution, by producing it in Court when called upon. There was no express authority for restitution before the amendment; 18 M.L.J. 516, which held that under this section a Magistrate cannot direct a party to whom property is delivered to produce it when called upon, is no longer law.

Explanation—Where a prisoner was convicted of stealing money and he was at the time of conviction, the owner of a horse which was on the evidence purchased with the stolen money, an order for delivery of the horse to the prosecutor was held legal, 7 C. & P. 640. The words "conversion" and "exchange" must be taken in their ordinary meaning. They apply to acts such as melting down of gold and silver jewels and exchange of currency-notes into cash, 12 Cr. L.J. 473=12 Ind. Cas. 81. Current coins, property in which pass by mere delivery, cannot be the subject of an order under this section, 7 M.H.C.R. 233; 3 C. 379 but when the coin is not a current coin of the realm it can be dealt with under this section, 25 B. 702; see also 12 Cr. L.J. 397=11 Ind. Cas. 581. A Jubilee £5 piece, if not part of the currency may be restored, 19 Cox 324.

Revision—The words "any proceedings in S. 425" are wide enough to empower the High Court to revise orders under this section, Weir II, 669 and 538. This section gives a discretion to the Magistrate to pass such orders as he thinks fit. That discretion is to be used judicially and unless the High Court is satisfied that it has not been so used it ought not to interfere in revision with the order, 24 Cr. L.J. 238=71 Ind. Cas. 702. The discretion exercised by the Magistrate under this section is open to correction by the High Court when it has been exercised in violation of the accepted judicial principles, 17 Bom. L.R. 922; 15 Cr. L.J. 553=24 Ind. Cas. 863. When at the time of acquitting an accused of theft the Magistrate makes an order restoring property to the accused the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to set aside such an order, 46 A. 623. Where the trial Court acquits the accused and passes also an order as to the disposal of property, the Sessions Court as a Court of revision under S. 435, supra, cannot set aside the order under this section but the only course open to it is to report to the High Court under S. 498, supra. 6 Ran. 259 following 42 B. 664; 46 A. 623, 34 C. 347. Where a Magistrate directed delivery of certain property to the complainant merely upon complaint made to him, that an accused person is unlawfully detaining them the High Court in revision set aside the order passed, as illegal, but refused restoration on the ground that it will be illegal to do so, 8 C.L.J. 229. It is clearly just that when the lower Court has made over property to a person not entitled to its possession the High Court should remedy the error by restoring it to the person properly entitled to the same, 5 Ran. 553, following 21 Cr. L.J. 581=57 Ind. Cas. 81 and 6 Cr. L.J. 125, is dissented from.

The Court before reversing an order under this section should not act without giving notice to the person in whose favour the order is made. It should not act on the mere representation of one of the parties, 35 B. 253 and 44 M.L.J. 56 at 59; 5 Ran. 553.

518. In lieu of itself passing an order under section 517, the Court may direct the property to be delivered to the District Magistrate or to a Sub-divisional Magistrate, who shall in such cases deal with it as if it had been seized by the police and the seizure had been reported to him in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

An order under this section can be made only in respect of property (1) regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, or (2) which has been used for the commission of an offence, or (3) which has been produced before a superior Court, or (4) which has been in the custody of the superior Court, Ratanlal 496. The words "in the manner hereinafter mentioned" refer to S. 523, infra. When a Court makes no inquiry under S. 517, supra, it is competent to make a reference under this section, 14 C.W.N. cxxv.

519. When any person is convicted of any offence which includes, or amounts to, theft or receiving stolen property, and it is proved that any other person has bought the stolen property from him without knowing, or having reason to believe, that the same was stolen, and that any money has on his arrest been taken out of the possession of the convicted person, the Court may, on the application of such purchaser and on the restitution of the stolen property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, order that out of such money a sum not exceeding the price paid by such purchaser be delivered to him.

Scope of the section.—Compensation under this section can be given only from the money found on the person of the accused and it is not competent to award the same out of the fine imposed on a convicted person, 3 Bom. L.R. 764; Weir II, 671. A person who was convicted of stealing a pony and selling it to a third person was convicted and sentenced to a term of imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 20 and the pony was ordered to be returned to its owner on his receiving out of the fine Rs. 9 as compensation under this section. Held that the order is unsustainable and also no such conditional order can be passed, 3 Bom. L.R. 449 see also Ratanlal 631; Weir II, 672. Compare the provisions of S. 545, infra, where unlike this section compensation can be given, to be recoverable out of the fine imposed on the accused person.

520. Any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision may direct any order under section 517, section 518 or section 519, passed by a Court subordinate there to to be stayed pending consideration by the former Court, and may modify, alter or annul such order and make any further order that may be just.

Scope of the section.—It is only when an order is passed under S. 517, supra, by the subordinate Court, the appellate Court is empowered to modify, alter or annul such order. In an appeal from a conviction, the appellate Court has no jurisdiction to pass an order as to disposal of property when no order under S. 517, supra, had been passed by the trial Court and to such a case this section has no application, Weir II, 676 but it is submitted that S. 423(1) (d) supra empowers the appellate Court to pass any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper, see 24 Cr. L.J. 833—74 Ind. Cas. 1050. Where a Sessions Judge on appeal set aside a conviction of the appellant under S. 411, I.P.C., and no order is passed by the trial Court or by the Court of session under S. 517, supra, with regard to the disposal of the property seized from the accused by the police in the course of their investigation, an application can be made under this section to the Sessions Court on which an order for the restoration of the property seized from the petitioner can be passed, 3 Lah. 49. Such an application to the Court of appeal mentioned herein is in no sense an application by way of appeal against any order of disposal of property but an independent application with a view to take action under S. 517, supra, or this section. No period of limitation is prescribed for such an application which should be made within a reasonable time from the date of the original acquittal or conviction, Ibid at p. 51. See also the observations in 50 M. 916, where the trial Court had acquitted the accused and passed an order under S. 517 supra, the Sessions Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with the order in its revisional jurisdiction under S. 435, supra, and the only course left open to it is to report the case for the orders of the High Court under S. 438, supra, but he cannot himself set aside the order, 6 Ran. 259, following 42 B. 664; 46 A. 623 and 34 C 347. This section being thus applicable only to orders passed under Ss. 517, 518 or 519, supra, cannot apply to an order made by a Magistrate when acquitting or discharging the accused in a case under S. 363 I.P.C., to the effect that a child alleged to have been kidnapped by the accused should be returned to her parents and a Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from such an order under this section and set aside the order restoring the child. 27 Cr. L.J. 574 (2) = 94 Ind. Cas. 142 (2). The jurisdiction under this section is distinct from the appellate jurisdiction of a Court of appeal.

Court of Appeal or Revision.—It was held in 3 C. 379 that the words "Court of Appeal" are not necessarily limited to Courts before which an appeal is pending. It may very often happen that the question of the propriety of the order under S. 517 may, in no way, concern a convicted person, and it is unreasonable to construe this section in a way as shall make the power of the Judge to modify, alter or annul the order affecting one person contingent on the accident whether another person has or has not chosen to appeal. The same view was taken in, 9 M. 448; 2 A. 276; Weir II, 673. But in 42 B. 664 a different view was taken. It was held there, that when acquitting an accused person of theft, the Magistrate ordered the cattle, the subject of theft, to be returned to him. The Sessions Judge modified this order. The accused then applied to the High Court in revision, and it was decided that the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction under this section as he was never a Court of appeal or revision, 35 B. 253 was followed and 9 M. 448 was disapproved. The words 'Court of Appeal' refer only to Courts hearing appeals ordinarily and not to Court like a Sub-divisional Magistrate who hears appeals from Sub-Magistrates being invested with appellate powers by virtue of delegation by District Magistrate. If there is an appeal, whether it be against the conviction, or against an acquittal, an order under S. 517 can be revised only by the Court seized of the appeal. If the case comes up for confirmation or on reference the Court empowered to deal with those matters is competent to revise such an order. If an application is made for revision, the revising Court is similarly competent. The difficulty arises where an order under S. 517, supra, is brought before a Court independently of any appeal, reference or revision or submission for confirmation. In such a case the only remedy is by way of revision as the Code provides no appeal against orders under S. 517, supra, but S. 524 (2) not merely gives right of appeal but also indicates the Court to which such appeal lies. Authorities are by no means uniform but the procedure followed by Courts in this Presidency is that the District Magistrate is to hear such applications and not drive the party to the High Court for revision. That practice is more convenient, 1928 M.W.N. 557 (F.B.) The Court of appeal within this section is the Court to which an appeal lies in the particular case and not the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie from the Court deciding the particular case, 42 B. 664 at 666, followed in 46 A. 623 but see 12 Cr. L.J. 400 = 11 Ind. Cas. 594. The words 'Court of Appeal etc.' seem to designate Courts which can modify alter or annul the order passed under the preceding sections and not to specify the nature of the application which has to be made to them, compare Ss. 125 and 195 supra, as to the analogous powers of superior Courts. In all these cases the Court designated has been given special jurisdiction to pass what order, it thinks fit, and that it is not necessary to read into the section provisions regarding appeals. So an application to the Court of appeal under this section cannot be dismissed on the ground that it was time-barred and no satisfactory explanation for the delay in filing the appeal is forthcoming. 50 M. 816, see also 4 Lah. 49 at 51 which holds that there is no limitation for applications under this section but they should be made within a reasonable time from the date of original acquittal or conviction. The Court of revision in such a case will be the High Court and not the Court of Session, 32 B. 637; see also 45 M. 162 following 35 B. 253. Under this section the Sessions Court cannot be a Court of appeal reference or revision entitled to vary an order of a Sub-divisional Magistrate declining to direct the restoration of property to the accused on his acquittal in appeal from a conviction had by a Second-class Magistrate, 47 M.L.J. 491=20 L.W. 521. A District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to set aside an order made under this section directing property to be restored to an accused person who was acquitted. He cannot be held to be a Court of appeal because no appeal lay to him against the acquittal. Nor is he a Court of confirmation, reference or revision as the only Court which could pass orders on reference or revision is the High Court, 46 A. 623.

Court of Reference.—A Court of reference means a Court to which references are made and which on such references is entitled to go into the matters and dispose of them. The High Court is a Court of reference in Jury cases where the Judge differs from the Jury, 47 M.L.J. 491=20 L.W. 521=(1923) M.W.N. 806=25 Cr. L.J. 1247=82 Ind. Cas. 173.

Make any further order that may be just.—These words did not exist in the 1882 Code and were introduced in the 1893 Code for the first time and must have been done with an object. It must be presumed that the Legislature was aware of the ruling in, 33 A. 374 while amending the Code in 1923. If the wide and liberal interpretation put on the words of the section in 33 A. 374 was not justified undoubtedly the amending Act of 1923 would have omitted the words or would have at any rate introduced some restrictive phraseology and this omission clearly indicates that the Legislature accepted the interpretation in 33 A. 374 as correct. The policy of law seems to be that in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary, the appellate Court should dispose of once and for all every outstanding matter in controversy. S. 423 (1) (d) supra, authorises the appellate Court to pass incidental orders and omission by trial Court to pass an order for disposal of property can be set right by the appellate Court 10 Lah. 187. These words are obviously intended to cover cases where property is erroneously disposed of by the trial Court and the superior Court is empowered to intervene and pass such order as may be just, 4 Lah. 49. The intention of the Legislature in adding to the section "and may make any further order that may be just" was obviously to enable a superior Court to give effect to an order setting aside the order of the Court of first instance if that order has been carried out by directing a restitution of the property. 13 Cr. L.J. 21=13 Ind. Cas. 213. This will enable a superior Court to give effect to an order setting aside the order passed by the Court of first instance if that order is carried out by ordering restitution. When a remedy is allowed by law, it must be assumed that the Legislature intends the tribunal invested with jurisdiction shall enforce the order in the manner it considers most suitable, even though there is no express provision for doing the same, 19 Cr.L.J. 595=48 Ind. Cas. 175, 44 M.L.J. 56 at 59; 18 C.W.N. 959=15 Cr. L.J. 184=22 Ind. Cas. 760. Though this section does not say that the issue of notice to any person is necessary before making an order under this section, yet on general principles no order to the prejudice of a party should be made by any authority without that party being heard, 20 Cr. L.J. 823=53 Ind. Cas. 823; 33 B. 253; 46 M. 162. An accidental omission to make an order restoring property under this section can be subsequently corrected under S. 369, supra, 23 Cr. L.J. 159=71 Ind. Cas. 511. Where a subordinate Court has made over possession of property to a person not entitled to possession it is clearly just that the High Court should remedy the error by restoring it to the person properly entitled to the same, 3 Ran. 533 where 21 Cr. L. J. 551=57 Ind. Cas. 81 is followed and 6 Cr. L.J. 126 is not followed. The High Court has power to order restitution of property, say, an elephant, wrongly ordered to be delivered to a person other than the one from whom the police had compulsorily taken the same, when acquitting that person of abetment of theft with regard to the elephant, 54 C. 284; when the question as to the right to property is not between the complainant and the accused but between the complainant and a third party, no order of restitution can be passed in favour of the complainant without due notice to such third party and hearing him, 5 Ran. 553.

Revision.—Application to lower Court must precede the application to High Court in revision, 2 A. 278; High Court has ample powers to revise an order passed by the Appellate Court, 4 Lah. 49; 18 C.W.N. 959; 19 Cr. L.J. 995=43 Ind. Cas. 175

521. (1) On a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 292, section 293, section 501 or section 502, the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which the conviction was had, and which are in the custody of the Court or remain in the possession or power of the person convicted.

(2) The Court may, in like manner, on a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 272, section 273, section 274 or section 275, order the food, drink, drug or medical preparation in respect of which the conviction was had, to be destroyed.

This section relates to destruction of libellous matter, etc., on conviction. So also destruction of any noxious food, drink, drug, etc. When the conviction is set aside, the order passed also falls to the ground and the Court is entitled to act under S. 423 (1) (d), supra.

522. (1) Whenever a person is convicted of an offence attended by criminal force, or show of force or by criminal intimidation, and it appears to the Court that by such force or show of force or criminal intimidation, any person has been dispossessed of any immoveable property, the Court may, if it thinks fit, when convicting such person or at any time within one month from the date of conviction, order the person dispossessed to be restored to the possession of the same.

(2) No such order shall prejudice any right or interest to or in such immoveable property which any person may be able to establish in a civil suit.

(3) An order under this section may be made by any Court of appeal, confirmation reference or revision.

Amendment.—In sub-section (1) after the word force, the words "or show of force or criminal intimidation" have been added, and "when convicting such person or at any time within one month, from the date of conviction" have been newly added to give wider powers to the Court to restore possession. Sub-section (3) is newly added to give power to any Court of appeal confirmation, reference or revision to pass orders restoring possession.

Object of the section.—The object is to enable a Court by a summary order to restore the state of things which existed at the time of dispossession by a convicted person. It cannot go behind the state of affairs at the time of forcible ejection leading to the criminal prosecution. Sub-section (2) provides that the right of third parties cannot be affected and such third party in case of eviction under an order passed under this section must seek his remedy in a Civil Court, 5 C.W.N. 374, where 23 B. 494 is referred to; when neither party is in actual possession this section cannot apply, Weir II, 675. An order under this section is not passed against any person but is passed in favour of the party dispossessed provided the conditions necessary to give the Court jurisdiction to pass the order are present, 22 Cr. L.J. 573=62 Ind. Cas. 591. This section is the only provision which enables a Magistrate to restore a dispossessed party and the power can be exercised only in cases in which there has been a conviction of an offence attended by criminal force or show of force or criminal intimidation, Weir II, 98; 26 M. 49; 31 C. 691; 36 C. 41; 25 A. 341; 27 C. 173; 20 Cr. L.J. 488=51 Ind. Cas. 472; 28 Cr. L.J. 819=104 Ind. Cas. 433. It is an essential ingredient of this section that the offence of which the person concerned is convicted must have been attended by criminal force or at the very least attended by show of force, and when there was no finding that the offence was attended by criminal force but only an offence of criminal trespass, the order under this section was set aside, 21 A.L.J. 593=25 Cr. L.J. 42=75 Ind. Cas. 730. Where there is no finding as to the use of criminal force or show of criminal force whereby a party was dispossessed an order under this section is bad in law, 18 Cr. L.J. 898=42 Ind. Cas. 130; 9 Lah. 322; 28 Cr. L.J. 327=100 Ind. Cas. 544, following 20 Cr. L.J. 488=51 Ind. Cas. 472. See also 28 Cr. L.J. 964=105 Ind. Cas. 676; 26 M. 49; 27 C. 173; 25 A. 341; 1919 P.R. (Cr.) 16. In S. 349, I.P.O., the term "force" is defined as being an application of force when used in connection with human body and under this section delivery may be made to the person who has been dispossessed, when accused is convicted of an offence attended by criminal force. Rioting need not necessarily be use of criminal force, but may be causing violence in prosecution of the common object, vis., violence to a fencing and uprooting the same, and not to any person, and in such a case no order under this section could legally be made, 18 C.W.N. 1150=7 Cr. L. Rev. 14=15 Cr. L.J. 720=26 Ind. Cas. 168; 22 Cr. L.J. 329=61 Ind. Cas. 57. But an order directing restoration of possession to the complainant can validly be made where it is found that the accused were putting a fence round the land where the complainant reached the spot and prevented the accused by show of force from taking possession, 27 Cr. L.J. 495=93 Ind. Cas. 895. By the new amendment the words "or show of criminal force or by criminal intimidation" have been added; when a party takes possession of complainant's house and threatens to use force against him and is convicted under Ss. 448 and 143, I.P.C., the Court was competent to pass an order under this section restoring possession of the house to the complainant, 4 Pat. 438. While acquitting certain accused charged with criminal trespass and mischief in regard to the cutting and removal of certain bamboos from complainant's bamboo clump, the Magistrate is not entitled to order that the complainant was to retain the bamboo clump until the matter was settled by a Civil Court, 20 C.W.N. 1332=18 Cr. L.J. 442=38 Ind. Cas. 1002.

Show of Criminal Force.—It was held in 5 C.W.N. 230; 2 C.W.N. 303; 4 C.W.N. 307; 25 C. 434 that the term criminal force must be understood as defined in S. 350, I.P.C., and to justify an order actual force must be used and not mere show of force. To meet these decisions, the amendment is now made and 'show of criminal force' is sufficient to give jurisdiction to order restoration of possession of immovable property under this section.

When a person is convicted—To act under this section there must be a conviction, 12 C.W.N. 269. The discretion to pass an order or not is vested in the trial Court by the section which says that the Court may pass such order if it thinks fit. There is no case in which a Court of appeal or revision has compelled a Court to pass such an order in a case in which, in the exercise of its discretion it has declined to do so. In 30 C. 699 it was held that a Court of appeal or revision has no power to do so. The High Court in revision will pass an order only in very exceptional circumstances, 45 A. 553 at 554. When the lower Court has failed to pass the necessary order, the appellate Court had no jurisdiction, but the High Court in revision can pass the order where the case is a gross one and in the absence of such an order the complainant will be forced to institute fresh proceedings in a Civil Court soon after a successful litigation, 45 A. 92. Conviction for show of criminal force is newly added in accordance with the decision in 11 C.W.N. 467; 16 A.L.J. 439. There was conflict of authority about the validity of the order passed not simultaneously with the order of conviction. See 16 A.L.J. 439; 4 C.W.N. 303; 23 B. 494; 14 Cr. L.J. 172. This conflict is set at rest now

To the person entitled to the possession thereof.—The Magistrate does not decide the question of title but merely decides the question of possession. The fact that the accused had been in possession when the charge was made is not conclusive. The question will be, who is entitled to possession of the property, 12 Bom. L.R. 232=11 Cr. L.J. 339=5 Ind. Cas. 972; 17 B. 749. When a third party appears and alleges that the things seized by the police under a search-warrant are his, the Magistrate is bound to hear him and if necessary to restore the property to him. There is a power inherent, apart from this section, in every Court to satisfy itself that the things produced before it under a search-warrant are the things which it is necessary or desirable should be kept in custody, 26 B. 552. When certain property was recovered from the house of a person charged with theft, but the complainant did not claim it as his, a Magistrate acts illegally in entering upon an inquiry as to how such person came to be in possession of the property. His duty is simply to restore the property to the custody of the person from whom it came. The fact that the account given by such person as to how he came by the property did not satisfy the Magistrate will not justify him to inquire and pass an order under this or S. 524 infra, 17 Bom. L.R. 79=18 Cr. L.J. 207=27 Ind. Cas. 767.

Disposal or delivery of property.—The word "disposal" is something different from delivery, 12 Bom. L.R. 232=11 Cr. L.J. 339=5 Ind. Cas. 972. Disposal is more wider and delivery is one of the modes of disposal. The words "Disposal of such property or" were added to give wider discretion to the Court.

Revision.—The High Court has power to set aside the order of a Magistrate under this section especially when the order is based on no materials on record and even order restitution, 21 Cr. L.J. 561=37 Ind. Cas. 81=10 L.B.R. 151; see also 6 Cr. L.J. 125=5 L.B.R. 14; 1 B. 630; 14 C. 834; 1893 P.R. (Cr.J.) 5 (F.B.); 13 C.W.N. 1147=15 Cr. L.J. 222(1)=22 Ind. Cas. 1003 (1).

524. (1) If no person within such period establishes his claim to such property, and if the person in whose possession such property was found is unable to show that it was legally acquired by him, such property shall be at the disposal of the Government, and may be sold under the orders of the Presidency Magistrate District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, or of a Magistrate of the first class empowered by the Local Government in this behalf.

(2) In the case of every order passed under this section, an appeal shall lie to the Court to which appeals against sentences of the Court passing such order would lie.

This section deals with the procedure to be adopted by the Court when no claimant appears within six months. It is only when those six months have expired that the provisions of the section come in and the person in whose possession it was found can come forward and show that it was his own, 22 J. 756. The property is confiscated only when the person in possession is unable to show that it was legally acquired by him. The words "at the disposal of Government" mean that Government shall be free to sell the property to hold it as a trustee for the true owner, 5 Pat. L.J. 311=1923 Pat. 253=21 Cr. L.J. 475=55 Ind. Cas. 597; 9 B. 131; 43 B. 202; Wele II, 838. It is only when action is to be taken under this section that orders of the special class of Magistrates mentioned herein are to be obtained while acting under S. 523, supra, the Magistrate to whom a report is sent is competent to act on his own responsibility, 28 Cr. L.J. 1043=87 Ind. Cas. 989. See S. 523 (4), infra, which enacts that if a Magistrate not empowered sells property in good faith, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely because of his not being empowered to do so.

Sub-section (2).—The appeal allowed by this section comes under Chapter XXXI of the Code and its provisions govern the appeal. It is a regular appeal on the merits and cannot be disposed of by the appellate Court in a summary way, 1881 A.W.N 150: As this sub-section allows an appeal from the order passed under sub-section (1) it is doubtful whether the law allows a remedy by way of suit, 19 B. 668.

525. If the person entitled to the possession of such property is unknown or absent and the property is subject to speedy and natural decay, or if the Magistrate to whom its seizure is reported is of opinion that its sale would be for the benefit of the owner, or that the value of such property is less than ten rupees, the Magistrate may, at any time, direct it to be sold; and the provisions of sections 523 and 524 shall, as nearly as may be practicable, apply to the nett proceeds of such sale.

Power to sell perishable property.

By the new amendment the Magistrate is given power to sell property when its value is less than ten rupees. Property of trifling value is put on the same category as property subject to speedy and natural decay. See S. 529, cl. (b) which validates sale by Magistrates in good faith when not empowered to do so.

CHAPTER XLIV.

OF THE TRANSFER OF CRIMINAL CASES.

526. (1) Whenever it is made to appear to the High Court;—

(a) that a fair and impartial inquiry or trial cannot be had in any criminal Court subordinate thereto, or

(b) that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise, or

(c) that a view of the place in or near which any offence has been committed may be required for the satisfactory inquiry into or trial of the same, or

(d) that an order under this section will tend to the general convenience of the parties or witnesses, or

(e) that such an order is expedient for the ends of justice, or is required by any provision of this Code; it may order—

(i) that any offence be inquired into or tried by any Court not empowered under sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), but in other respects competent to inquire into or try such offence;

(ii) that any particular case or appeal, or class of cases or appeals, be transferred from a Criminal Court subordinate to its authority to any other such Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction;

(iii) that any particular case or appeal be transferred to and tried before itself; or

(iv) that an accused person be committed for trial to itself or to a Court of Session.

(2) When the High Court withdraws for trial before itself any case from any Court other than the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, it shall, except as provided in section 267, observe in such trial the same procedure which that Court would have observed if the Case had not been so withdrawn.

(3) The High Court may act either on the report of the lower Court, or on the application of a party interested, or on its own initiative.

(4) Every application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section shall be made by motion, which shall, except when the applicant is the Advocate General, be supported by affidavit or affirmation.

(5) When an accused person makes an application under this section, the High Court may direct him to execute a bond, with or without sureties, conditioned that he will, (if so ordered), pay any amount which the High Court has power under this section to award by way of costs to the person opposing the application.

(6) Every accused person making any such application shall give to the Public Prosecutor notice in writing of the application, together with a copy of the grounds on which it is made; and no order shall be made on the merits of the application unless at least twenty-four hours have elapsed between the giving of such notice and the hearing of the application.

(6A) Where any application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section is dismissed, the High Court may, if it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious, order the applicant to pay by way of costs to any person who has opposed the application any expenses reasonably incurred by such person in consequence of the application.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect any order made under section 197.

(8) If, in the course of any inquiry or trial, or before the commencement of the hearing of any appeal, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending his intention to make an application under this section in respect of such case or appeal, the Court shall without sureties, of an amount not exceeding two hundred rupees, that he will make such application within a reasonable time to be fixed by the Court, adjourn the case for such a period as will afford sufficient time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon :

Provided that nothing herein contained shall require the Court to adjourn the case upon a second or subsequent intimation from the same party, or, where an adjournment under this sub-section has already been obtained by one of several accused, upon a subsequent intimation by any other accused ”;

(d) to sub-section (9) the following Explanation shall be added, namely :—

“ Explanation.—Nothing contained in sub-section (8) or sub-section (9) restricts the powers of a Court under section 344 ”; and

(e) after sub-section (9) as so amended the following sub-section shall be added, namely :—

“ (10) If, before the argument (if any) for the admission of an appeal begins, or, in the case of an appeal admitted, before the argument for the appellant begins, any party interested intimates to the Court that he intends to make an application under this section, the Court shall, upon such party executing, if so required, a bond without sureties of an amount not exceeding two hundred rupees that he will make such application within a reasonable time to be fixed by the Court, postpone the appeal for such a period as will afford sufficient time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon.”

ACT No. XXI OF 1932.

[AS PASSED BY THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.]

(Received the assent of the Governor General on the 1st October, 1932.)

An Act further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1893, for a certain purpose.

V of 1898.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the purpose hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

V of 1898

1. This Act may be called the Code of Criminal Procedure ^{Amend} (Amendment) Act, 1932.

2. In section 526 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, ^{Amend} 1898,— ^{section} ^{Act V}

(a) in sub-section (5), for the words “has power under this section to award by way of costs” the words “may under this section award by way of compensation” shall be substituted;

(b) in sub-section (6A), for the word “costs” the word “compensation” shall be substituted, and for the words “any expenses reasonably incurred by such person in consequence of the application” the words “such sum not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees as it may consider proper in the circumstances of the case” shall be substituted;

(c) for sub-section (8) the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:—

“(8) If in any inquiry under Chapter VIII or Chapter XVIII or in any trial, any party interested intimates to the Court at any stage before the defence closes its case that he intends to make an application under this section, the Court shall, upon his executing, if so required, a bond without adjourn the case or postpone the appeal for such a period as will afford a reasonable time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon.

(9) Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, a Judge presiding in a Court of Session shall not be required to adjourn a trial under sub-section (8) if he is of opinion that the person notifying his intention of making an application under this section has had a reasonable opportunity of making such an application and has failed without sufficient cause to take advantage of it.

Amendment.—The closing words of sub-section (5) are new which empowers the High Court to direct a bond to be executed for the costs of the person opposing the application, and sub-section (6A) has been newly added empowering the High Court when dismissing the application to award costs incurred by any person opposing the application and such costs shall be recovered as if they are fines. By the amendment in sub-section (8) it is made clear that, if in the course of any inquiry or trial or before the commencement of the hearing of the appeal, it is notified to the Court of the intention to apply for transfer, the Court shall exercise the power of postponement of the hearing. A Sessions Judge shall not be required to adjourn a trial, if in his opinion the complainant or the accused has had a reasonable opportunity of making such an application and has failed to do so without sufficient cause but such a power is not conferred on Magistrates.

Scope of the section.—The scope of the section has been considerably enlarged now and every case tried by a criminal Court comes within the purview of the amended section. The omission of the word criminal in sub-section (1) is very significant. Under the old Code there was a conflict whether proceedings under Chapter VIII or B. 145 of the Code could be called a criminal case. But all doubt on the subject has now been set at rest by deleting the word criminal. An inquiry therefore under S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act conducted by a Magistrate is within this section, 27 Cr. L.J. 476=93 Ind. Cas. 700.

Object of the section.—The position of an accused person is at all times one of grave anxiety and Courts trying criminal cases should be specially on their guard not to do anything which may have the effect of increasing their anxiety, 20 Cr. L.J. 539=51 Ind. Cas. 817. The policy of the law as enacted in this section is to inspire confidence in the mind of the accused person in the administration of justice and in the integrity of the Magistracy. The superior Courts are expected to have due regard to the susceptibilities of accused persons and if they are satisfied that there are reasonable grounds, i.e., grounds which a reasonable person placed in the position of the accused considers to be sufficient for entertaining the apprehension that he will not have a fair and impartial trial an order for the transfer of the case should be made, 29 Cr. L.J. 295=107 Ind. Cas. 783. It is incontrovertible that one of the most important duties of a Court of law is to create and maintain confidence in the administration of justice and to conduct itself in such a manner as to produce in the minds of the parties an impression that nothing but absolute justice would be done to them, 29 Cr. L.J. 212 at 219=107 Ind. Cas. 100. This section being thus enacted to maintain full confidence in the administration of justice, this can only be done by giving every citizen an assurance so far as practicable that no one will be forced to undergo a trial before a Judge or Magistrate whom he has reasonable ground for suspecting to be prejudiced against him. The well known case of Sergeant v. Dale, laid down the rule that if a Magistrate has any legal interest in the decision of a case he is disqualified in trying it, no matter how small that matter may be. The law does not measure the amount of interest which a Judge possesses. If he has any legal interest in the decision of the question one way, he is disqualified, no matter how small the interest may be. The law in laying down this strict rule had regard not so much perhaps to the motive which might be supposed to bias the Judge as to the susceptibilities of the litigant parties. One important object at all events is to clear away everything which might engender suspicion and distrust of the tribunal, and to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security, 20 C. 857 at 866; see also 23 C. 495; 8 C.W.N. 75; 10 C.W.N. 441 at 443; 26 Cr. L.J. 163=83 Ind. Cas. 723; 27 Cr. L.J. 1333=98 Ind. Cas. 405. No hard and fast rule can be laid down for transfer of criminal cases. The circumstances of one case would differ from those of another but the general principle is, if there are circumstances in a case which raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of an accused person that he will not have a fair trial, the case ought to be transferred to a calmer atmosphere, 25 Cr. L.J. 590=81 Ind. Cas. 78; 27 Cr. L.J. 802=95 Ind. Cas. 456. It is of paramount importance that persons arraigned before criminal Courts should have full confidence in the impartiality of those Courts and if a person has a reasonable apprehension that the Court before which he is to be tried is not completely free from bias, a transfer should be directed. What is reasonable apprehension, must depend on the degree of intelligence of the accused, 3 Lah. 443. One of the considerations for the transfer of a case will be the convenience of the parties concerned, 8 C.L.J. 59; 6 Lah. 396. Application for transfer cannot be granted lightly on fanciful and sentimental grounds and as a rule it is not the practice to grant such applications when they are supported by false affidavits, 29 Cr. L.J. 220 at 221=107 Ind. Cas. 108. A case cannot be transferred on the ground that the trying Magistrate would not give effect to a certain legal objection which might be taken at the trial, 29 Cr. L.J. 289=107 Ind. Cas. 773.

Whenever it is made to appear to the High Court.—One of the most important duties of the High Court is to create and maintain confidence in the mind of the litigant public in the administration of justice; this can be done only by giving to every citizen an assurance as far as possible that, so far as practicable he will never be forced, to undergo a trial before a Judge or Magistrate when he has reasonable apprehension of the judicial officer being adjudged incapable of properly performing his duty. Magistrates should not fail to remember that it is their duty no less to preserve an outward appearance of impartiality than to maintain the internal freedom of bias which is incumbent on all judicial officers and if they allow the executive zeal to appear to outrun their judicial discretion, their action is certain to attract the delay consequent on an application for transfer to the High Court. The High Court has no desire whatever to impose restrictions on the proper functions of the executive. But the public sense of security is as much dependent on confidence in the judicial administration as on the efficiency of the police and it is in times of public excitement that it is most necessary for the confidence to be kept alive. A general belief that the High Court has relaxed its control over the executive would cause nearly as much alarm in a District as the failure of the executive to suppress a crime. The high prestige which executive officers enjoy in India is largely due to the knowledge that so long as the Courts do their duty the strong protector can never become an oppressor, 1 Sind. L. R. 8. Power is therefore given to the High Court to transfer cases on any one of the grounds mentioned in the section. The party applying to the High Court for transfer must have moved the local authorities. The High Court as a rule of practice does not interfere unless all the other remedies provided by law have been previously exhausted. When an order for transfer can be made by the District Magistrate under S. 528, infra, it is the duty of the person who considers himself prejudiced to go first to the District Magistrate before approaching the High Court for transfer under this section, 1 Cr. L. Rev. 475; see 18 L.W. 651; 43 A. 397; 36 C. 643 see also 26 Cr. L.J. 960=87 Ind. Cas. 112 where 11 A.L.J. 751 is followed, see 4 Bom. L.R. 490, but where notices have been issued and the explanation of the Magistrate on the allegation made has been obtained by the High Court and the matter argued on the merits, the case may be dealt with by the High Court in spite of the objection raised to avoid further delay in the disposal of the case.

Inquiry or Trial in any Subordinate Criminal Court.—The High Court is empowered to transfer proceedings under S. 145, supra, 26 M. 128, where 25 B. 179, which took a different view is disented from; the Calcutta High Court in 2 C.L.J. 614, took the same view as the Madras High Court and explained the doubt raised in 28 C. 709. The omission of the word "Criminal" in sub-clause (ii) and (iii) has practically overruled the view taken by the Bombay High Court, proceedings under S. 110, supra, have been held by the later rulings of the Allahabad High Court to be transferable under this section, 12 A L.J. 736; 32 A 642, although the earlier rulings in 16 A. 9; 19 A. 291 and 30 A. 47 took a different view. The Madras High Court in 34 M. 186 applied the principle of the decision in 16 A. 9 and 30 A. 47 to applications for transfer of proceedings under S. 195, supra, and held that such proceedings could not be transferred, as any transfer so made would be ineffective and futile unless the Court to which it was transferred was subordinate to such Court. An inquiry under the provisions of Act XIII of 1951 (Breach of Contract) is not outside the purview of this section and can be transferred by the High Court. The inquiry under the said Act is an inquiry by the Magistrate or Criminal Court within the Code, 45 A. 700 at 701.

Fair and Impartial Inquiry cannot be had.—In dealing with applications for transfer the High Court has to consider not merely whether there has been any real bias in the mind of the Presiding Judge against the accused, but also whether incidents may not have happened, which though they may be susceptible of explanation, and may have happened, without any real bias in the mind of the Judge, are nevertheless such as are calculated to create in the mind of the accused a reasonable apprehension that he may not have a fair and impartial trial, 8 C.W.N. 75 and 589; 30 Cr. L.J. 728 at 730=117 Ind. Cas. 213; 15 Cr. L.J. 196; 27 Cr. L.J. 835=95 Ind. Cas. 755; 19 A. 64; 10 C.W.N. 441. "It is not merely of some importance but of fundamental importance that justice should, not only be done but should manifestly and undoubtedly be seen to be done"—per Hewart, C.J. in [1924] 1 K.B. 256; see also [1927] 2 K.B. 475, actual bias need not be proved, 3 Lah. 433; 6 Lah. 396, followed in 9 Lah. 537; 29 Cr. L.J. 887=111 Ind. Cas. 431; 10 Lah. 223. Bias is one thing the mere possibility of bias, however remote is another. Bias cannot be inferred from the mere refusal on the part of the Magistrate to grant adjournments or other exercise of discretion, Ratanlal 590, but a Magistrate telling the pleader for the accused that unless the accused effected a compromise with the complainant the accused will be convicted and also the fact that the trying Magistrate issued bailable warrant to arrest the accused in a summons-case are sufficient to raise a reasonable apprehension of bias in the mind of the Magistrate, 28 Cr. L.J. 933=103 Ind. Cas. 812. Where the clerk of the Justices was a member of a firm of Solicitors who were professionally prosecuting a claim for damages before the Justices, the Court quashed the proceedings holding that the clerk could not serve two masters and it was improper for him to be present with the Justices where they were considering the case although there was not the slightest suggestion that he influenced the Justices. Of course it is not every apprehension of this sort that should be taken into consideration, but where the apprehension is of a reasonable character, then notwithstanding there may be no real bias in the matter, the fact of the incident having taken place being calculated to raise such reasonable apprehension ought to be a ground for allowing a transfer 23 C. 435; 19 A. 64; 3 Lah. 433; 25 C. 727 at 733; 33 C. 1183 at 1185; 18 Cr. L.J. 641=40 Ind. Cas. 252; 18 Cr. L.J. 719=43 Ind. Cas. 719; 9 C.W.N. 613; 8 C.W.N. 77. The law requires that it should be made to appear to the High Court that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had, before it can act under this section and the High Court should not be doing its duty if it pretended to accept as reasonable grounds which it knew to be insufficient and unreasonable, simply because the litigants were foolish enough to entertain them. To extend the rule further will be to encourage a distrust in the integrity and independence of the Magisterial Courts in this country which would amount to a serious evil. It is the duty of the High Court to apply the rule unless it is satisfied that there is a reasonable apprehension that the accused will not have a fair and impartial trial in the Court before which their case is at present, 10 C.W.N. 441 at 441=3 Cr. L.J. 379, followed in 30 Cr. L.J. 728 at 730=117 Ind. Cas. 213. It has been pointed out over and over again that what the High Court has to consider is not whether any real bias exists in the mind of the Presiding Judge against an accused but the question is whether circumstances do not exist which though they may be susceptible of explanation are nevertheless calculated to create in the mind of the accused a reasonable apprehension that he would not have a fair and impartial trial. In determining whether it is reasonable or not we have not to come to a conclusion on abstract principles but have to bear in mind the degree of intelligence of the accused. As observed in Sergeant

v. Dale, in such matters the law has regard not so much to the motives which might be supposed to bias the Judge as to the susceptibilities of the litigating parties. One important object is to clear everything which might engender suspicion and distrust of the tribunal and so to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of Justice so essential to the social order and security, 6 Lah. 396, followed in 30 Cr. L.J. 129=113 Ind. Cas. 321; 28 Cr. L.J. 787=104 Ind. Cas. 227; 21 Cr. L.J. 504=56 Ind. Cas. 664; 22 Cr. L.J. 726=64 Ind. Cas. 28; 26 A.L.J. 1250=29 Cr. L.J. 750=110 Ind. Cas. 686. The question is not whether the belief is reasonable or unreasonable but whether it exists or not, though the only way of deciding whether it exists or not is to see whether it might reasonably be expected to exist in a person of the standard of intelligence and honesty common in the class to which the accused belongs, 27 Cr. L.J. 835=95 Ind. Cas. 755, followed in 28 Cr. L.J. 188 (2)=99 Ind. Cas. 860 (2); See also 29 Cr. L.J. 620 (1)=109 Ind. Cas. 812 (2). Next in importance of deciding a case fairly and impartially is the importance of conducting oneself in such a manner as to inspire in the minds of the parties a confidence that nothing but absolute justice would be done to them. And if by reason of the words or conduct of a Magistrate or Judge before whom a case is pending, any party reasonably apprehends that there is a bias against him in the mind of the officer concerned, it would be expedient in the ends of justice to transfer the case from his file although there may not be actual bias, 23 C. 709; 25 C. 727; 20 Cr. L.J. 566=52 Ind. Cas. 54; 35 A. 5. Although the facts alleged do not show bias, or prejudice in the mind of the Magistrate yet if they are such as is likely to raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that he is not likely to have a fair and impartial trial, it is advisable to order a transfer, 12 A.L.J. 736; 19 A. 64; 35 A. 5; 28 C. 297; 25 B. 179; Weir II. 678; 21 Cr. L.J. 504=56 Ind. Cas. 664; 25 Cr. L.J. 590=81 Ind. Cas. 78; 25 Cr. L.J. 638=81 Ind. Cas. 126; 29 Cr. L.J. 750=110 Ind. Cas. 686. To decide what is reasonable, regard must be had to the degree of intelligence possessed by the accused, 3 Lah. 443. It is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rule under which a transfer should be made, for the circumstances of one case might differ from those of another. The principle underlying the decisions of the various cases goes to establish that if there are circumstances in a case which raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused person that he would not receive fair dealing at his trial, the case should be transferred to a calmer atmosphere, 5 Pat L.T. 63=25 Cr. L.J. 590=81 Ind. Cas. 78; 15 Cr. L.J. 543=24 Ind. Cas. 951; 33 A. 5. It is one of the elementary principles of administration of justice that a judicial Officer who is called upon to decide a matter of controversy must exercise his own independent judgment after hearing the parties concerned. It is the privilege as well as the duty of the Presiding Officer of a Court of justice to form his own opinion on the question for decision before him and to act accordingly. He ought not if it were, to mortgage his mind to another officer and to seek instructions from the latter whenever he is called upon to decide a difficult or important question. A magistrate who does so abdicates his proper functions and discloses a lamentable lack of sense of responsibility. Both the Subordinate Magistrate who consults his superior and the superior Magistrate in advising him in connection with judicial matters in which orders have to be passed by the trying Magistrate himself, though acting with the best of intention cannot be deemed to have acted properly and such conduct was certainly calculated to raise in the mind of the accused a reasonable apprehension to bring the case within the rule laid down in Seargent v. Dale which is regarded by the Courts in England and India as the leading authority on the subject of transfer of cases, 9 Lah. 537 at 542. The use of strong language by a Court is never calculated to satisfy the litigant public before it. An officer is sometimes bound to feel strongly on particular occasions but as soon as he expresses himself strongly he gives himself away and if he raises by his language an apprehension in the mind of a party that an officer is prejudiced he has only himself to thank. Besides, a calm state of mind is absolutely essential for the disposal of all cases, 47 A. 233. Transfers ought, in principle to be very difficult to obtain because nothing so undermines the feeling of responsibility of Magistrates and their own self-respect in the adjudication of cases as ordering transfers from their files when they are once in possession of a case. But on the other hand, when it is found that there is a degree of association between the Magistrate and one or other of the parties to a case and one of the parties may have some financial hold over the Magistrate, it is undesirable to have the case adjudicated by that Magistrate, 21 Cr. L.J. 543=58 Ind. Cas. 923. The High Court while making an order in a transfer application cannot take into consideration the effect its order would have on the authority and reputation of the officer concerned. The High Court will not transfer the case merely in deference to the susceptibilities of the accused. The application for transfer must be based on the ground that the applicant will not have a fair and impartial trial, and the apprehension must be shown to be reasonable, 10 C.W.N. 431; Weir II, 578; 36 A. 239; 10 Cr. L.J. 244=3 Ind. Cas. 88. The mere fact that a case against a Hindu of desecrating the tomb of a Mahomedan saint is tried by an Honorary Mahomedan Magistrate will not give a reasonable cause for apprehension that he will not have a fair trial. An intolerable position would arise if it were open to any accused person in a case of communal or quasi communal nature to object to a Hindu Magistrate trying the case merely because the accused happens to be a Mahomedan or vice versa, 28 Cr. L.J. 893=105 Ind. Cas. 226. It is not sufficient that the accused apprehends that he will not have a fair trial but he must satisfy the Court by clear and unimpeachable evidence that the trying Magistrate has by sure personal conduct rendered himself unfit or is unlikely to give the accused a fair trial, 28 Cr. L.J. 73=89 Ind. Cas. 105; see also 28 Cr. L.J. 902 (1)=105 Ind. Cas. 230 (1); 28 Cr. L.J. 898=105 Ind. Cas. 626; 27 Cr. L.J. 335=95 Ind. Cas. 755. Decided cases seem to suggest that the right of transfer is to be governed by what the accused thinks are his prospects of securing a fair and impartial trial and not as to whether prejudice exists or not in the mind of the trial Magistrate. 29 Cr. L.J. 750=110 Ind. Cas. 686. It is difficult to follow this reasoning. It is for the High Court to satisfy itself that on the facts disclosed there is a reasonable apprehension of the accused not having a fair trial. The law laid down in, 36 A. 239, after a full and exhaustive review of all the authorities is certainly in consonance with the general principles of law and the meaning and spirit of this section, otherwise the discretion of the High Court would be fettered and controlled by the opinion of the accused, 18 Cr. L.J. 670 at 671-72=40 Ind. Cas. 318. See 29 A.L.J. 1250=29 Cr. L.J. 229=107 Ind. Cas. 160; 10 Lah. 223. What would amount to reasonable apprehension would depend on circumstances of each case and should be decided with reference to the incidents of the case and the surrounding circumstances. In determining whether the application is reasonable, it is the duty of the Court to place itself in the position of the accused and consider the facts and circumstances attending his position. Abstract reasonableness ought not to be the standard, 33 C. 1183. Confidence in the administration of justice is an essential element in good Government, and a reasonable apprehension of a failure of justice in the mind of the accused should be taken into consideration on an application for transfer, 36 C 904. The Court in considering whether the apprehension of the accused is reasonable, will have to try and place itself in the position of an accused person and look at the matter from that point of view. The matter does not depend on the way in which the Judge would regard it himself, 39 C.L.J. 330=25 Cr. L.J. 934=81 Ind. Cas. 560. Where a Magistrate commenced the trial of a case on a gazetted holiday at the request of the Police Officer and examined all the witnesses for the prosecution on the same day, it was held that that fact was sufficient to create a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not have a fair and impartial trial, 29 Cr. L.J. 291=107 Ind. Cas. 779. So also where a magistrate receives private communication from parties or their Counsel in pending cases, 30 Cr. L.J. 1043 at 1049. There is no rule of law against a pleader appearing in the Court of his father, the Presiding Officer, and the mere fact that the son of the Magistrate appears as a pleader in a case before him cannot be urged as a valid ground for transfer of the case 28 Cr. L.J. 440=85 Ind. Cas. 56. If a case was to be transferred on every occasion on which a Magistrate several years before had rubbed shoulders with somebody who was either a complainant or a respondent or an Advocate in the case, the whole of the judicial work in this country would come to an end, 30 Cr. L.J. 522=115 Ind. Cas. 541. But the Calcutta High Court in 26 Cr. L.J. 1183=83 Ind. Cas. 607, held that it was undesirable that a member of the legal profession should practice in a Court presided over by a near relation and where one of the practitioner's engaged is a near relation of the presiding Magistrate, the case ought to be transferred to some other Magistrate. The position of an accused person must always be one of anxiety and suspense and it is not right that the painfulness of such a position should be enhanced by anything that could suggest to him that his guilt is a foregone conclusion in the mind of the Magistrate who is to try him. The accused or his Counsel should not be put to the necessity of removing any impression from the Court which is not based on any evidence in the trial. It is important that all parties should have confidence in the tribunal before which they appear. It is also important that nothing should be done to encourage any want of confidence when there is no sufficient foundation for that want of confidence 6 Bom L.R. 856. There is a tendency on the part of accused persons to come up to the High Court for a transfer whenever there is an order passed by the trying Court adverse to them but such an order passed bona fide even though mistaken or erroneous in the exercise of his jurisdiction can be no ground for a transfer but it will be otherwise if the Magistrate had acted upon information outside the record or acted otherwise irregularly which would naturally raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused, 30 Cr. L.J. 728 at 731=117 Ind. Cas. 213. It is inadvisable for a Magistrate to offer a seat on the dais while he is trying a case, to a private person more especially if he is interested in the case. It is unfortunate for Judges and Magistrates to invite their friends to come to Court while the Court is sitting and give them seats on the dais. The practice is one that should be discouraged for a Court of Law is not a place of amusement. A Magistrate will be ill-advised in receiving visits from the parties before him, as by so doing, he lays himself open to an imputation which no doubt may not contain a grain of truth. Judicial officers should be careful to avoid the opportunity of having such imputations made against them. Where a Magistrate trying a case has been acting indiscriminately in the manner stated above, it will certainly give rise to a reasonable apprehension of not having a fair trial and it is desirable that the case should be transferred to some other Magistrate, 27 Cr. L.J. 498=93 Ind. Cas. 862. The trying Magistrate accepting in ignorance the hospitality of the complainant's son in a case before him will raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not have a fair and impartial trial before the Magistrate, 27 Cr. L.J. 565=94 Ind. Cas. 133. The apprehension that a Subordinate Magistrate will be influenced by the ill-will which his superior Magistrate bore towards an accused is no ground for transferring a case outside a sub-division. To allow such transfers would, as observed in 10 C.W.N. 441=3 Cr. L.J. 379, be to encourage a distrust in the integrity and independence of the Magisterial Courts in this country which would amount to a serious evil, 27 Cr. L.J. 802=95 Ind. Cas. 466. See also 9 Cr. L.J. 251. Unless some cause is shown for believing that a Magistrate is likely to be prejudiced or influenced by any improper motive in the decision of the case, the High Court will support the Magistrate trying the case. It is highly improper by a transfer of the case by the High Court to throw a gratuitous insult on the Magistrate, Ratanlal 323. Granting bail in a non-bailable offence is a matter of discretion with the Court and failure to grant bail is no ground for transferring the case to another Court, 27 Cr. L.J. 859=95 Ind. Cas. 939. The mere fact in another case on other evidence the Court may have come to a particular conclusion is not by itself sufficient ground for a transfer, 10 Cr. L.J. 244=3 Ind. Cas. 88 where 1 C.W.N. 426 is followed. Opinion expressed in a cross case on the evidence judicially recorded is not ipso facto a sufficient ground for transfer 29 Cr. L.J. 589 (1)=109 Ind. Cas. 605; 28 Cr. L.J. 769=110 Ind. Cas. 861; 33 A. 583; 36 C. 904. A case should not be transferred where the apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not have a fair and impartial trial is created by the accused himself in casting grave aspersions on the character of the trying Magistrate in the transfer application itself, 27 Cr. L.J. 939=96 Ind. Cas. 395. Granting of unnecessary adjournments on several occasions for enabling the complainant to appear is no ground for transferring a case, 27 Cr. L.J. 1022=96 Ind. Cas. 878; while prompt disposal of a criminal case is a matter of importance it is equally even of greater importance to pay proper attention to the procedure prescribed by law so as to ensure on the one hand a fair trial to the accused and at the same time to leave no loophole for any failure of justice resulting from the defects of procedure, 29 Cr. L.J. 769=110 Ind. Cas. 801. When personal allegations are made against a trying Magistrate for a transfer of a case pending before him such allegations are to be clearly established before the case is transferred, Ratanlal 590. Where a Magistrate had interested himself in a case pending before him in the way of obtaining a settlement by the parties, it was to the interest of both parties and also fair to the Magistrate himself that he should not hear the case, 47 A. 411 where 18 C. L. J. 150=14 Cr. L.J. 602=21 Ind. Cas. 474 is followed;

26 Cr. L.J. 1317=89 Ind. Cas. 261. The fact that the Magistrate of the District may be cited as a witness for the prosecution in a case tried before another Magistrate in the same District will not afford a valid ground for transfer of the case as it will not prejudice the accused in any way, 27 Cr. L.J. 344=92 Ind. Cas. 836. There is no clear law as regards the procedure in counter-cases, a defect which the Legislature ought to remedy. It is a generally recognized rule that counter-cases should be tried in quick succession by the same Judge who should not pronounce judgment until the hearing of both cases is finished. This precludes the danger of an accused being convicted before his whole case is before the Court and also prevents there being conflicting judgments upon similar facts. But at the same time the rule involves obvious difficulty. It seems to infringe the fundamental principle that the Court must not import any facts into a case which are not to be found on the record.....The only way in which such a procedure can be justified is by setting up a fiction that the case and counter-case are really one and this fiction should be made a reality by statute.....But whether there be a statutory enactment or not the point remains, that for practical purposes a case and its counter are one, 1929 M.W.N. 883 at 884. Counter-cases should be tried simultaneously and contemporaneously. Cross-complaints should ordinarily be disposed of by the same Magistrate, 29 Cr. L.J. 934=111 Ind. Cas. 854. But they should be dealt with wholly separately from each other, each on its merits and upon facts and circumstances appearing therein; judgment in both cases should be pronounced, if possible, after both the trials are completed at one and the same time, 23 C.W.N. 437=26 Cr. L.J. 65=83 Ind. Cas. 625; 29 Cr. L.J. 1059=112 Ind. Cas. 563. The Court ought to keep the evidence in each case separate and deliver separate judgments, 28 Cr. L.J. 254=99 Ind. Cas. 126. But see the observations in 1929 M.W.N. 883 at 884 given above. In the absence of any relevant procedure to be followed in the Code, no definite law could be laid down as to procedure when there are two counter-cases between the same parties. Each case has to be decided according to its requirements. Whether the accused in one case should be allowed to go on with the counter-case in which he is the complainant or should not be compelled to go with his case before the case against him is finished are considerations which should be decided by the Court in the circumstances of each particular case, 49 C.L.J. 383 following 42 C.L.J. 83. A case and counter-case arising out of the same affair should always, if practicable be tried by the same magistrate as no Court can grasp the real facts unless it tries both cases; when the charge against one of the contending parties is triable by the Magistrate but the one against the other party is triable by the Court of Session the proper procedure is to commit both the cases to the Court of Session, 1929 M.W.N. 881. The Code is silent with regard to the procedure to be adopted in the trial of counter-cases and it should not be laid down as a rigid rule of law that a particular course should be adopted, 26 Cr. L.J. 1615=90 Ind. Cas. 719; and if a Magistrate in trying counter cases makes an emphatic pronouncement in one case so as to prejudice the defence in the counter-case on the merits, it will afford a good ground for the transfer of the case left undisposed of to some other Magistrate, 30 M. 233; 9 M.L.T. 162=1910 M.W.N. 735=11 Cr. L.J. 702=8 Ind. Cas. 721; 13 Cr. L.J. 532=15 Ind. Cas. 804 but see 1 C.W.N. 425; 6 Bom. L.R. 1092 and also 33 A. 593 where it was held that the fact that a Court before which two cross cases of rioting were tried, expressed opinions to some extent unfavourable to the accused in the second case is no ground for holding that the court was incompetent to try the second case. The fact that in a similar case the Magistrate came to a particular conclusion on the evidence in that case is no ground for a transfer, 36 C. 934. The principle maintained is that the accused has no reasonable ground for apprehension that he will not have a fair trial merely because the Judge in the former proceeding arising out of a counter-case to the present case has expressed certain views upon the evidence in that case as to which of the two versions is correct. The basis of the ruling is that Judges are presumed to be up-right men who will approach each case from the point-of-view of that case alone and not permit their minds to be affected in any way by anything that has gone before that case. It cannot be believed that Judges are so easily prejudiced that because one incidental part of the case before them has been decided in a previous case they will shut their eyes entirely to anything that may be alleged in favour of the accused in a subsequent trial, 1917 Pat. 37=1 Pat. L.J. 377=13 Cr.L.J. 53 at 95=37 Ind.

Cas. 159. The fact that the trying Magistrate in his executive capacity is subordinate to the District Magistrate who has taken a strong view of the case is by itself no ground for a transfer of the case, 22 Cr. L.J. 257=60 Ind. Cas. 657. The fact that the District Magistrate took action against the accused, being satisfied that a prima facie case was made out which ought to be inquired into by the Criminal Court and even sent a note to the trying Magistrate asking him to inform him whether the accused was charged or discharged, is no ground for a transfer of the case outside the District unless it was proved that the District Magistrate was influencing the result of the case directly or indirectly, 28 Cr. L.J. 190=89 Ind. Cas. 862. Where a Hindu Mahomedan dispute is involved in a criminal case, it is desirable that the District Magistrate himself should inquire into it, 26 Cr. L.J. 1056=87 Ind. Cas. 976; 16 Cr. L.J. 213=27 Ind. Cas. 837. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 1391=98 Ind. Cas. 607 and in such a dispute an European Magistrate, if possible, should try the case, 28 Cr. L.J. 599=102 Ind. Cas. 556.

Some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise.—In 7 Bom. L.R. 637, the Bombay High Court transferred a case on the file of a Magistrate on the sole ground that it was quite possible that some questions or several questions of law of unusual difficulty may arise, and directed the commitment of the case to the Court of Session remarking that the trying Magistrate is as competent as any other Magistrate in India to try the case. If a Bench of Magistrate, before whom a case is pending is of opinion that the case involves difficult questions of law which cannot be properly tried by the Bench, it should move the matter officially and not leave it to a private party to move for a transfer of the case, 29 Cr. L.J. 124=106 Ind. Cas. 716.

View of the place is necessary: Sub-section (1) (c).—Ss. 539B and 556, infra permit a Magistrate to view the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed and such inspection should be made for the purpose of enabling the Magistrate to understand better the evidence which is laid before him and it must be strictly confined to that and he should then invariably be accompanied by both parties or their representatives, 19M. 253 at 266; 45 M.L.J. 279=18 L.W. 113; 37 C. 340; 19 A. 302.

Tend to the general convenience of parties or witnesses: Sub-section (1) (d).—When a complainant chose to go to a particular District and as the accused also wished to be tried there only, it was held that the High Court could under this section direct that the trial might be proceeded with before the Sessions Judge of that District although the offence was alleged to have been committed in another District, 2 Bom. L.R. 394, and in 8 C.W.N. 75, when a transfer was made at the instance of the accused the complainant pleaded poverty and alleged that the transfer would subject him to unnecessary expense which he could not afford to incur, the Court directed that the expense of the witnesses should be borne by the Crown; convenience of the parties is one of the chief considerations for a transfer, 8 C.L.J. 59. For purposes of transfer under this section it is the convenience of the accused rather than that of the complainant that ought to be taken into consideration, 27 Cr. L.J. 563=94 Ind. Cas. 131.

Order expedient for the ends of justice or required by some provision of law: Sub-section (1) (e).—This clause refers to the expediency for the ends of justice and not to expediency from any political point-of-view. It is the duty of the High Court to have due regard for the importance of securing the confidence of the public generally, and of every section of the community interested in the result, in particular in the fairness and impartiality of the trial that is going to be held; but it is equally its duty to see that no undue regard is shown to abnormal susceptibilities of any section of the public from an apprehension of ulterior consequences. If that were done it would result in the obvious injustice of showing greater consideration to the less peaceful than to the more peaceful, 25 C. 727 at 731. The importance of having a fair and impartial trial ranks very much higher than the convenience of parties and witnesses and the convenience of the Court in having a local inspection, ibid at 735. See also 23 C. 493.

"Courts are established for the due administration of justice and they must be prepared to make every sacrifice to bring it about. Delay, expense, inconvenience or public policy are nothing before it. Everything must be done subject to the one object of rendering justice". The fact that an accused person finds it unable to secure the attendance of a competent practitioner of the locality for his defence on account of the influence wielded by the complainant was held to be a good ground for transfer, 26 Cr. L.J. 1272=88 Ind. Cas. 1049. The fact that the complaint is the out-come of communal feeling at the locality and the inability of one party to produce their witnesses before the Court and give evidence without a certain amount of fear as regards the safety of the witnesses at the hands of the opposite party, was held to be a sufficient ground for a transfer of the case from the Magistrate of the particular locality trying the case, 27 Cr. L.J. 1391=98 Ind. Cas. 607 (2). Counter cases should be tried simultaneously and contemporaneously. But they should be dealt with wholly separately from each other, each upon its own merits and upon facts and circumstances appearing therein; the judgment in both cases, should if possible be pronounced at the same time after both the trials are over, 28 C.W.N. 437=26 Cr.L.J. 65=83 Ind. Cas. 625. The Code is silent with regard to the procedure to be adopted in such circumstances and it should not be laid down as a rigid rule of law that a particular course must be adopted in all cases, 26 Cr.L.J. 1615=90 Ind. Cas. 719. See the observations in 1929 M.W.N. 883 at 884 in this connection. If a Magistrate in trying counter-cases makes an emphatic pronouncement in one case on the merits so as to prejudice the defence of the accused in the other case it will afford a good ground for the transfer of the case left undisposed of to some other Magistrate for the ends of justice, 30 M. 233; 13 Cr. L.J. 532=15 Ind. Cas. 804; 4 C.W.N. 824. In the absence of any relevant procedure in the code no definite law could be laid down as to the procedure to be followed when there are two counter-cases between the same parties. Each case has to be decided according to its requirements, whether the accused in one case should be allowed to go on with the counter-case in which he is the complainant or should not be compelled to go on with his case before the case against him is finished are considerations which should be decided by the Court in the circumstances of each particular case, 49 C.L.J. 338 following 42 C.L.J. 83. Where a Magistrate was present at a search made during police investigation and in all probability he came to know of some facts in connection with the case it is expedient that the case should be tried by some other Magistrate, 5 C.W.N. 864 see also 27 Cr. L.J. 844=95 Ind. Cas. 764. The fact that a Sessions Judge has heard and disposed of the appeals of several convicted persons accused of a particular dacoity, will not necessarily debar him from hearing the appeals of other persons jointly accused of the same dacoity but were arrested and convicted subsequently, 22 Cr. L.J. 416=61 Ind. Cas. 656.

See the provisions of Ss. 191, 487 and 556 infra where a transfer is necessitated by the provisions of the Code.

Sub-section (1), (11); Any particular case or appeal.—This section which clothes the High Court with power to transfer any case from one Court to another controls Ss. 195 (3), 476A and 476B, supra, 26 Cr. L.J. 736=85 Ind. Cas. 423. The High Court can transfer only appeals actually existing. It cannot direct that appeals in future shall when filed not be heard by the authority to which they are presented, Ratanlal 973. A case which has not been validly instituted before an inferior Court cannot be transferred by the High Court to another Court so as to confer jurisdiction on the latter Court to try the case, 17 L.W. 69, following 9 A. 191 (P.C.); 3 Bom. L.R. 121. The High Court can transfer under this section an appeal from one district to another district. The grounds stated for transferring an appeal to the High Court in 6 M. 32 at 35 were as follows: "The public mind has for several months been in a state of abnormal excitement about the convicted person. The most conflicting views have been entertained as to his conduct and character by various officials as is apparent from the reports published from time to time in the public journals. He is an old servant of Government who had been holding a very important post. And it seems desirable on all these accounts that the case should be transferred to the High Court, where it will have the advantage of being heard before two Judges of the highest tribunal, instead of by the single Judge of the subordinate tribunal, whose decision as a Judge of an Appellate Court could not be expected to have the same weight as that of the High Court. The transfer is likely to tend to the quieting of the public mind and to be conducive to the interests of justice in that and other ways". The High Court can transfer a case on the file of a Village Panchayat Court under this section read with S. 5, supra, 49 A. 189, following 48 A. 167; 48 A. 23.

Sub-section (I), (III). May be transferred to and tried before itself.—The High Court can transfer an appeal filed in the Sessions Court to itself for hearing, 6 M. 32; Katanial 110.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section deals with transfer to itself from Courts other than the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, and prescribes the procedure to be followed in the trial of such cases by the High Court, which is to be the same as that which would have been followed by the lower Court. The exception is that continued in S. 267, supra, which lays down that the trial before the High Court is to be by Jury.

Sub-section (3).—This sub-section enables the High Court to pass an order for the transfer of a case on a reference made to it by an inferior Court, or on the application of a party or it may act suo motu. The Crown, the accused, and the complainant are the only persons entitled to apply under this section. A person who merely lodges information and who is not a complainant in the case has no locus standi to apply under this section, 4 Pat. L.J. 656=20 Cr. L.J. 649=52 Ind. Cas. 424 5 Bom. L.R. 869. A person at whose instance a case is instituted, say, by the police, is a party interested within the meaning of this section. But he is not a complainant within the meaning of sub-section (8) of this section. If the Legislature intended that the words "party interested" should have the same meaning as the word "complainant" occurring in sub-section (8) there is no reason why different words are introduced in the two sub-sections. Therefore the right of a person interested to apply for a transfer is subordinate to that of the Crown, i.e., if the Public Prosecutor or other person conducting the prosecution on behalf of the Crown is unwilling to have the case transferred, the person at whose instance the case was launched, has no right to get the case transferred, 26 Cr. L.J. 1249=88 Ind. Cas. 993 where 4 Pat. L.J. 656=20 Cr. L.J. 649=52 Ind. Cas. 424, is followed. The expression 'party interested' occurring herein does not necessarily mean only a complainant i.e., a person presenting a complaint as defined in S. 4 (1) (h) supra, but may include a police informant. But where the conduct of a case is in the hands of a Public Prosecutor and where there is a conflict between the Public Prosecutor and the party interested the right of the former must prevail as the Public Prosecutor and not the informant who is primarily responsible for the conduct of the case, 57 M L J 547=30 L W, 640 following 26 Cr. L J. 1249=88 Ind. Cas. 993 and 6 Lah. 541; see also 21 Cr L.J. 641=57 Ind. Cas. 657.

Sub-section (4)—This sub-section lays down the manner in which an application under this section is to be made by a private party, and is in accordance with the decision in 1 C 219 (F.B.). Every application is to be by motion supported by an affidavit or affirmation. The Legislature undoubtedly intended to protect an accused person from the ordeal of examination as a witness and to render him incapable of making false statements on oath or otherwise as long as his case is sub judice, 19 A. 200 at 201. It is an unusual practice for Courts to receive affidavits or statements on oath of the accused persons for the purpose of applications for transfer and the practice even if it be legal is not altogether a convenient one, and it would be a better practice certainly, if such affidavits setting forth the grounds of transfer are made by persons other than the accused, 28 A. 331 at 332 where 19 A 200 is followed. The affidavit of an accused person cannot be accepted as a proper one, as no oath could be administered to him, and no prosecution for perjury will lie with regard to the allegations in his affidavit, Weir II, 686. It had been an invariable practice of the Madras High Court not to accept the accused's affidavit in support of application for transfer, but having regard to the provisions contained in the new s. 539A, infra, a practice has now sprung up of allowing the accused to swear to his own affidavit in support of his application for transfer and such affidavits are now received by the High Court without any objection being raised. It was held in 3 Lah. 46 that the prohibition contained in S. 342, supra, evidently referred to the statement made by the accused in answer to questions put to him by the Court and did not preclude the accused from making an affidavit in support of an application under this section. An application for transfer is not a part of the defence of an accused person and statements made by an accused in an affidavit in support of a transfer application do not enjoy the immunity conferred by S. 342, supra upon answers to questions put to accused by the Court trying the case. This view taken in 3 Lah. 46 where the Allahabad view was considered and disented from and was approved in 6 Lah. 34; see also 28 Cr. L.J. 168=99 Ind. Cas. 600; but in 29 Cr. L.J. 336 at 339=103 Ind. Cas. 124 it was held that there can be no doubt whatever according to the practice of the Allahabad High Court an accused person can legally tender his own affidavit in support of an application for transfer whether the affidavit is tendered and application made in a subordinate Court or on the High Court and he can be prosecuted in regard to any false statements made in the affidavit. According to the well recognised practice which prevails wherever the members of the English Bar practise, Counsel should never file an affidavit in a case in which he appears professionally. The reason is obvious. To begin with it hampers with his freedom of action as an Advocate. Besides he gives up his dignified position of detachment as an Advocate and lowers himself to the level of a witness who has to support the case of a particular party by giving evidence on his behalf. A Counsel when giving an affidavit does not exercise proper judgment as a Counsel and he is ill-advised in adopting the course, 29 Cr. L.J. 220=107 Ind. Cas. 103. No affidavit is necessary when an application for transfer is made by the Advocate General.

Sub-section (5)—Before the amendment, the High Court's power to direct the accused to execute a bond for payment of costs to the person opposing the application was conditioned on the conviction of the accused. By the new amendment an order can be made without any reference to the accused being convicted in the case.

Sub-section (6)—This sub-section enacts that 'twenty-four hours' notice in writing to the Public Prosecutor is necessary before hearing the application made by an accused person; such notice may not be necessary when the application is made by a complainant.

Sub-section (6A) is new and empowers the High Court to award reasonable costs in favour of the person opposing the application when dismissing the same as frivolous or vexatious. This sub-section enables the Public Prosecutor to claim costs in the High Court.

Sub-section (7).—S. 197, supra, refers to prosecution of Judges and Public Servants, and, under that section, the Government is empowered to determine the Court in which the trial is to be held.

Sub-section (8).—This sub-section has been redrafted and considerably modified to benefit the accused, and to enable him to move the High Court for a transfer of the case when he reasonably apprehends he will not have a fair and impartial trial. The intention of the Legislature however is not that the provision may be abused, and trial wantonly protracted, 29 Cr. L.J. 935=111 Ind. Cas. 853. An application for the adjournment of a case can now be made at any stage in the course of an inquiry or trial; 57 M.L.J. 763 at 765=30 L.W. 883, no discretion is allowed to the Magistrate and he is bound to adjourn without imposing any conditions, 30 Cr. L.J. 1043=119 Ind. Cas. 327. Before the amendment, the accused person was to notify his intention to apply for transfer before the commencement of the hearing, and the Court was bound to adjourn the case only before the accused was called to enter on his defence; before the amendment a Magistrate may record the whole of the prosecution evidence before adjourning the case, but he has no such power now. The reference in this sub-section to 'inquiry or trial' is clearly intended to apply to those inquiries or trials which are specially referred to in the earlier portion of the Code and it cannot apply to such things as the recording of a complaint which is not the intention of the law. It may be that S. 526 applies also to certain cases of quasi-civil nature such as inquiries into disputes about immoveable property but that does not in any way touch the question, 5 Pat. 223. 'Inquiry or trial' cannot therefore refer to the hearing of a transfer application under S. 523, supra, by a District Magistrate and this obviously cannot have been the intention of the Legislature. A District Magistrate hearing an application for transfer of a case pending before a Subordinate Magistrate is not holding any inquiry into the guilt or innocence or into the rights and liabilities of a party. The present law even at the risk of having its solicitude abused provides parties with ample opportunities of staying proceedings and unless it would not be right to add to those opportunities by accepting an interpretation of this sub-section by insisting a stay of the hearing of the transfer application by the District Magistrate to move the High Court to restrain the hearing of the transfer application by the District Magistrate 5 Pat. 229; see also 6 Pat. 553, which took the same view. In 6 Pat. 553 at 555, it was held that this sub-section applies only to cases arising out of an offence under the criminal law and not to proceedings of a civil nature under S. 145, supra, where we have neither the Public Prosecutor nor complainant or the accused to apply for a transfer and so such proceedings do not require the exercise of the very summary power of which this sub-section confers. See also 50 C.L.J. 331, to the same effect. Similarly when an application is made under this sub-section to postpone the hearing of security proceedings under S. 107, supra, the Court is not divested of all jurisdiction to pass emergent orders under S. 117 (3), supra. If the intention of the Legislature was to oust all jurisdiction it would be of no use to legislate that when immediate measures are necessary the Court could without deciding the case pass an urgent order until the final disposal of the case under S. 117 (3) supra. Therefore it is unnecessary for the Court to stay all further proceedings completely, 26 A.L.J. 398 = 28 Cr. L.J. 173 = 99 Ind. Cas. 605. When an application is made for postponement of the inquiry or trial, its jurisdiction does not entirely cease and it can pass any emergent order which the law authorises it to pass, 29 Cr. L.J. 448 = 108 Ind. Cas. 563. In this sub-section the expression "before the accused is called on for his defence" which occurred before the amendment is now omitted. Therefore it is the duty of the Court when the accused notifies his intention to apply for a transfer to postpone the hearing at once. The adjournment cannot be refused on the ground that it was made after the trial had begun as such application can be made in the course of the trial and must be granted. To refuse an adjournment for the purpose of moving the High Court for a transfer is contrary to the terms of the section and to deny the accused the absolute right conferred on him by the statute and such refusal vitiates the whole proceedings, 57 M.L.J. 763 = 30 L.W. 883. But the pronouncing of the judgment is not part of the trial which is over before the judgment is pronounced. When an intention to apply for a transfer was expressed after the arguments were closed but before the pronouncement of the judgment, the Magistrate's refusal to adjourn was not a violation of the imperative provision contained in this sub-section as the trial had been closed before the application was made, 52 M 335. The Magistrate is not entitled to record any evidence after an application is made for an adjournment to move for a transfer, but should at once adjourn the case, 22 A.L.J. 430 = 26 Cr. L.J. 139 = 83 Ind. Cas. 699, where it was held that it was the duty of the Court under the amended Code to postpone the case at once. The language of the sub-section is imperative. See also 9 Lah. 539; 29 Cr. L.J. 536 = 107 Ind. Cas. 360, but the restriction as to the application being made before the hearing of an appeal still exists. Subsequent proceedings after the application for adjournment will certainly be void, 8 C.W.N. 77; 23 C. 211; 31 C 715; 33 C. 1183; 9 Lah. 537; 22 Cr. L.J. 717 = 63 Ind. Cas. 877; 10 Cr. L.J. 570 = 4 Ind. Cas. 379. See 33 M 701, as to the meaning of the words "commencement of hearing" which now applies to appeal only. There seems to be some misapprehension at the Bar as regards the provisions of this sub-section as to the granting of the adjournment contemplated. It seems to be thought that the postponement could be had in two instalments, one in order to apply to the local authorities, District Magistrate etc. for transfer, and another time to apply to the High Court for transfer. It is overlooked, however, that the sub-section in making it imperative to adjourn the proceedings is confined to this section only and not to S. 528, infra. To obtain an adjournment the accused has to notify his intention to apply 'under this section' and there is no compulsion to adjourn for every intention to apply for a transfer to any Court other than the High Court. A District Magistrate when moved under S. 528, infra, has power to withdraw any case or recall any case he has made over to any Subordinate Magistrate and this power he may exercise even at his own motion. S. 528, infra, does not impose any duty to adjourn the hearing on the trial Court. The reason is that the District Magistrate is on the spot and not at a distance like the High Court and therefore there would be no necessity to adjourn the hearing to move the District Magistrate who is on the spot. It is only when the intention is to apply to the High Court which is at a distance, there is a necessity to adjourn the hearing to enable the accused to cover the distance and apply to the High Court. If an application is made, for an adjournment, it will be presumed that the application is to be made to the High Court and not to the District Magistrate and once a case has been adjourned and the accused has not taken advantage of it to move the High Court, he would not be entitled to a second adjournment. The intention of the Legislature is not that the provisions of this sub-section may be abused and the applicant be entitled wantonly to protract the trial in the first Court, 29 Cr. L. J. 935—111 Ind. Cas. 855. Application for transfer ought to be filed at the earliest opportunity after the occurrence of whatever facts and circumstances which are alleged as affording reasonable basis for such application. If an accused person notifies his intention to apply for a transfer of the case it is the duty of the Magistrate to adjourn the case so as to give the accused reasonable time to make the application for transfer. If after applying unsuccessfully to the High Court once, he again notifies his intention to apply a second time the Magistrate cannot refuse to adjourn the case and it is again bound to afford him a reasonable time, 1929 M.W.N. 503. Following this decision it has been held in several cases recently that the Magistrate is bound to adjourn a case even when the accused notifies his intention to apply for a transfer a second or even a third time as the language of this sub-section makes no such restriction and in some of the applications for transfer to the High Court the cases were transferred solely on the ground of the Magistrate's refusal to adjourn the case as required by law. If an accused person with materials in his hand for a transfer elects to sit quiet and allows the trial to proceed, and a charge is framed against him he has only himself to thank, 15 Cr. L. J. 536—24 Ind. Cas. 848; see also 17 C.W.N. 536; 14 Cr. L.J. 382—20 Ind. Cas. 142; 8 C.W.N. 910, 31 C. 715; 19 M. 375. When a party applies to a Magistrate under this sub section for the postponement of the hearing to enable him to make an application for transfer to another Court, it is highly improper for the Magistrate to hold an inquiry into the grounds of transfer himself, as such a course would naturally cause, apprehension in the mind of the party that he is not likely to have a fair and impartial trial, 27 Cr. L. J. 382—92 Ind. Cas. 884. Refusal by the Magistrate to adjourn the hearing is a sufficient ground for transfer from his file unless there was no intention whatever to move for a transfer, 20 Sind. L.R. 12, see also 26 A.L.J. 1321—29 Cr. L. J. 671—110 Ind. Cas. 223.

Sub-section (9).—This sub-section is new and it is enacted that a trial before the Sessions Court need not be adjourned if the Presiding Judge is of opinion that the applicant having had a reasonable opportunity of moving the High Court had failed to do so. As matter of practice Sessions cases are posted for trial for definite dates and adjournments are rarely granted or never granted.

ed of any offence such as is referred to in proviso (a) to section 41 of the Army Act, the Advocate General shall, if so instructed by the competent authority, apply to the High Court for the committal or transfer of the case to that High Court and thereupon the High Court shall order that the case be committed for trial to or be transferred to itself and shall thereafter proceed to try the case by jury.

(2) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare any officer to be the competent authority for the purpose of issuing instructions under sub-section (1) in regard to any class of cases specified in the notification.

This section has been newly added by Act XII of 1923 empowering the High Court to transfer to itself certain cases on the application of the Advocate General. See in this connection, 29 & 30 Vict. C. 109; 44 & 45 Vict. C. 58; 7 & 8 Geo. 5 C. 51.

official or demi-official letter from the District Magistrate as representing the Crown but by the Public Prosecutor moving in open Court for transfer under this section, 22 A.L.J. 1102 = 25 Cr. L.J. 367 = 84 Ind. Cas. 719.

Sub-section (2).—For purposes of this section all Presidency Magistrates are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. Rule 12. A Magistrate who is subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate is also subordinate to the District Magistrate for purposes of this section, 14 M. 399. A District Magistrate and a Sub-divisional Magistrate have co-ordinate authority over Magistrates subordinate to the latter; and therefore where Sub-divisional Magistrate refused to transfer a case, District Magistrate can entertain an application for transfer and also transfer the case; but in so doing he cannot examine the reasons given by a co-ordinate authority and find that authority to be wrong and has transferred or refused to transfer on insufficient grounds, 26 M 13; 130 Cr. L.J. 782 = 17 Ind. Cas. 414; 5 L.W. 372; 40 M. 791; 14 M. 399; see also 30 Cr. L.J. 654 = 116 Ind. Cas. 751. Under this section a Sub-divisional Magistrate has power to withdraw any case pending before a Subordinate Magistrate. But the section cannot be so read as to imply that after a District Magistrate has transferred a case from one file to the file of another Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate who is subordinate to the District Magistrate, has jurisdiction to nullify that order by ordering a fresh transfer of the case to his own file. There is a clash of jurisdiction and authority in a case like this and the order of transfer by the Sub-divisional Magistrate was ultra vires 47 A. 288. Where a competent Magistrate had transferred a case after hearing both the parties a superior Magistrate will not be acting properly in transferring the case to the Magistrate on whose file the case was at first without hearing the complainant, 1920 M.W.N. 767 = 12 L.W. 633 = 22 Cr. L.J. 199 = 60 Ind. Cas. 55. An Additional District Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate for purposes of this section, 34 C. 918. An additional Chief Presidency Magistrate is subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate who has power under this section to make an order withdrawing a case made over by the former to another Presidency Magistrate for disposal, 51 C. 820 where 40 M. 791 and 14 M. 399 are relied on and 26 M. 130 not followed. It is only after withdrawing a case pending before a Subordinate Magistrate, that a District Magistrate can pass orders in the case, 30 C. 449. The transfer of a case means the whole case. After the transfer of the case a Magistrate ceased to exercise any jurisdiction and had no power to issue warrants, 22 C. 893; 27 C. 979; 30 C. 449; 4 C.W.N. 242; 3 C.W.N. 490; 3 C.L.J. 87, but see 39 C. 119 which took a different view. Before a case is transferred the question has been often raised whether notice should be given to the parties concerned. There is nothing in the section as to the giving of notice but on the general principle, no order to the prejudice of a party should be made without hearing him; all the High Courts are agreed that notice should be given and an order passed without notice is liable to be set aside, 39 M.L.J. 714; 6 M.L.T. 14; 8 M.L.T. 222; 22 Cr. L.J. 199; Weir II, 691, 692; 22 B. 549; 21 Bom. L.R. 276 = 20 Cr. L.J. 320 = 50 Ind. Cas. 496; 6 Bom. L. R. 856; Ratanlal 590, 460, 655; 2 Pat. 233; 8 C. 393; 7 C.W.N. 114; 8 C.L.J. 241; 28 A. 421; 3 A. 749; 13 Cr. L.J. 32 = 13 Ind. Cas. 224; where such notice is not given before the transfer is made the order is liable to be set aside by the High Court on that ground, 51 M. 610; followed in 30 L.W. 401 = 1929 M.W.N. 255 = 30 Cr. L.J. 1043 = 119 Ind. Cas. 335; see 28 Cr. L.J. 517 = 102 Ind. Cas. 213 where it was held that though notice is not provided for by the section, it is generally given to the parties affected thereby so as to enable them to come forward and show cause why such transfer should not be made. Omission to issue a notice to the accused before ordering transfer is irregular, but not illegal, 23 Cr. L.J. 33 = 99 Ind. Cas. 70. The section is general and although as a rule of practice it is desirable that notice should be given, it cannot be said that the law is mandatory on the point and omission to do so is in itself no reason for setting aside the order of transfer, 2 Pat. 333; 6 Lah. 541. When a transfer is made suo motu by the Magistrate for administrative purposes no notice is necessary, 24 M. 317, 52 B. 151, following 24 M. 317 and 21 Bom. L.R. 276. An order of transfer made without giving notice to the parties cannot be said to be a final order and on sufficient grounds being shown against such transfer the case can be retransferred or transferred to some other Magistrate, 51 M. 610. Although sub-section (2) does not say that notice shall be given to the accused when an application for transfer that concerns him is made, the practice of the Court seems to be to hold that it is advisable in the interests of justice that such notice should be given and a transfer made without notice is liable to be set aside. 30 L.W. 401=1929 M.W.N. 265=30 Cr. L.J. 1043=119 Ind. Cas. 235, following 6 M.L.T. 14; 8 M.L.T. 222; 51 M. 610; 28 M. 41.

Sub-section (4).—This sub-section is newly added and gives wider powers by way of recalling a case made over by him under S. 192 (2) and inquire into it himself.

High Courts' Power to interfere with transfer orders.—It is not the usual practice of the High Court to interfere with an order made under this section by a subordinate Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction under this section. Nevertheless it has power to interfere and will interfere when there are good reasons for interference with the order of transfer. The convenience of the Court must be regarded in considering the question whether a fair and impartial trial is likely to be had and when it is clearly made out that the accused will be prejudiced in the conduct of his defence by the order of transfer made by the lower Court, the High Court will interfere with such order of transfer, 29 Cr.L. J. 373=108 Ind. Cas. 329. It is imperative under sub-section (5) to record reasons for making the order of transfer and when an order is made without giving notice and without giving reasons it is liable to be set aside by the High Court, see 6 M.L.T. 14=1 Ind. Cas. 839; Weir II, 686; 16 Cr. L.J. 626=30 Ind. Cas. 450; 26 Cr. L.J. 221=83 Ind. Cas. 1005; 20 L.W. 394; 26 Cr. L.J. 221=83 Ind. Cas. 1005; but it was held in 34 C. 918 that the omission to state reasons is only an irregularity and is not a material ground for setting aside the order, see also 9 Cr. L.J. 310; 23 A. 421; 12 Cr. L.J. 437=11 Ind. Cas. 621; 11 Cr. L.J. 150=4 Ind. Cas. 1025; 5 Pat. 225.

Sub-section (6).—The power of transfer was limited before to the case of petty thefts which a Village headman was empowered to try under Regulation IV of 1821, 26 M. 394; 15 M. 84, but Regulation XI of 1816 is also included now. Trivial cases relating to abusive language and inconsiderate assaults or affrays before Village-headman can be transferred under this section and the hardship of parties moving the High Court for the transfer of such petty cases is removed now.

CHAPTER XLIV-A.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS RELATING TO EUROPEAN AND INDIAN BRITISH SUBJECTS AND OTHERS.

This Chapter is new, and was added by Act XII of 1923 (Racial Distinctions). It contains provisions relating to European and Indian British subjects in cases in which Chapter XXXIII of the Code does not apply. Under this Chapter the accused might claim the status of European British subject with a view to a limited sentence, or with a view to the right conferred by S. 276, supra, of claiming a European Majority on the jury. Under this chapter it is for the accused to claim the status of European British subject, but if he fails to do so, his failure will not debar him from urging that the conditions mentioned in clauses (a) or (b) of S. 443 (1), supra exist. Those clauses refer not only to the status of the accused person, but to the status of the two persons; one of them cannot be the accused person, and the second clause neither, need be. It seems unreasonable that the omission of the accused person to avail himself of the right to claim the benefit of S. 528A concludes the matter. The right of appeal given to Local Government under S. 449 (1) supra, supports this view. What is therefore required is proof of conditions mentioned in S. 443, supra, and not evidence that any person concerned has preferred and substantiated a claim to particular status, 52 C. 347. The Chapter deals with cases not falling under Chapter XXXIII supra, and it makes it a condition precedent to the determination of the status of an accused person that he must assert his right to be tried as a person belonging to a particular nationality before the Magistrate to whom he is sent up for trial. It is the assertion of that claim which gives jurisdiction to the Magistrate to inquire into the matter and to give a finding thereon which, if adverse to the accused, may be challenged in the subsequent proceedings. If he fails to claim the privilege before the committing Magistrate, and consequently no inquiry and no finding is recorded, the claim cannot be put forward subsequently at the Sessions trial.

and S. 528B expressly debars him from asserting the claim at a later stage, 29 Cr. L.J. 721 = 110 Ind. Cas. 577. A Magistrate is not bound to ask an accused person who is apparently a European British subject whether he claims to be tried as such, so far as cases falling under this new chapter are concerned, 54 C. 1041.

From a consideration of S. 275, supra, and this chapter the following propositions may be deduced. (1) An Indian British subject claiming to be dealt with as such must put forward his claim before the Magistrate and this applies to all Magistrates including Presidency Magistrates. (2) If the Magistrate rejects the claim and tries the accused, from the sentence or order an appeal lies. This applies to the Presidency Magistrates also. (3) If the Magistrate rejects the claim and commits the accused, such claim may be repeated at the Court of Session, but not in the High Court exercising Ordinary Original Criminal Jurisdiction, the High Court not being a Court of Session within the Code. (4) If the Court of Session rejects the claim, and tries the accused, the decision, shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed. (5) If the claim is made before a Presidency Magistrate and rejected, and the accused committed to the High Court, there is no provision of law for putting forward the claim again and under S. 275, supra, he cannot claim for being tried by a Jury the majority of whom should be Indians or Europeans as the case may be. (6) When no such claim was put forward before the Magistrate the claim cannot be made before the High Court and S. 528B is a bar to the assertion of the claim in any subsequent stage, 51 C. 930 at 939.

528A. (1) Where, in any case to which the provisions of Chapter XXXIII do not apply, any person claims to be dealt with as an European or Indian British subject, or where any person claims to be dealt with as an European (other than an European British subject) or an American, he shall state the grounds of such claim to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purpose of the inquiry or trial; and such Magistrate shall inquire into the truth of such statement and allow the person making it a reasonable time within which to prove that it is true, and shall then decide whether he is or is not an European British subject or an Indian British subject, or an European, or an American, as the case may be, and shall deal with him accordingly.

(2) When any such claim is rejected by the Magistrate and the person by whom it was made is committed by the Magistrate for trial before the Court of Session, and such person repeats the claim before such Court, such Court shall, after such further inquiry, if any, as it thinks fit, decide the claim, and shall deal with such person accordingly.

(3) When any Court before which any person is tried rejects any such claim as aforesaid, the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial.

This and S. 528B are new and hitherto have not formed the subject-matter of judicial interpretation. 529A enacts that no Magistrate of the second or third class shall inquire into or try an offence which is punishable otherwise than with a fine not exceeding rupees fifty where the accused is a European British subject who claims to be tried as such. The question is when that claim is to be made. Reading the sections together it is clear that the Legislature intended that the claim to be tried as a European British subject should be made before the inquiry or trial actually commences. Therefore in a case where the accused did not put forward such a claim when he was produced before the Magistrate for inquiry or trial, it is not open to him to put forward such a claim at any subsequent stage, 54 C. 1031.

This section is expressly limited in its operation to a case to which the provisions of Chapter XXXIII do not apply, and the next S. 528B relates only to such cases as are contemplated by this section and S. 449, supra, under which the right of appeal is claimed, in Chapter XXXIII; consequently this and the next section can have no application to S. 449, supra, 52 C. 347.

Sub-section (3).—Unlike in S. 443 (2), supra, the rejection of the claim to be dealt with as a European or Indian British subject is not open to appeal immediately but is subject to a ground of appeal from the conviction.

528B. If in any such case an European or Indian British subject or an European (other than an European British subject) or an American does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried or by whom he is committed, or if, when such claim has been made before and rejected by the committing Magistrate, it is not repeated before the Court to which such person is committed, he shall be held to have relinquished his right to be dealt with as an European British subject or an Indian British subject, or an European or an American, as the case may be, and shall not assert it in any subsequent stage of the case.

Failure to plead status a waiver.

An European British subject who waived his right to be dealt with as such may re-consider and cancel the waiver before he is called on to enter upon his defence. There is no provision to the effect that a right once waived cannot be re-asserted, 50 C. 689; see also 52 C. 347. When an accused person failed to assert the claim to be tried as an Indian British subject before the committing Magistrate, the Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to determine his status and the accused is expressly debarred by the provisions of the section from asserting the claim. This section in express terms prevents him from asserting it at any subsequent stage of the case, 29 Cr. L J. 721—110 Ind. Cas. 577. The effect of a waiver is that the trial is to be held under the ordinary law.

528C. Where a person, not being an European British subject, is dealt with as an European British subject or, not being an Indian British subject, is dealt with as an Indian British subject or, not being an European (other than an European British subject) or American, is dealt with as an European or American, and such person does not object, the inquiry, commitment, trial, or sentence, as the case may be, shall not, by reason of such dealing, be invalid.

Trial of person as belonging to class to which he does not belong.

This is old section 455 re-enacted with certain modifications.

C.L.J. 432; 21 A.L.J. 86; 46 M. 117; 28 M.L.J. 329; 4 Lah. 376; 5 Ran. 53 (P.C.); 50 A. 457 at 462. The remedying of irregularities is familiar to most systems of jurisprudence but it would be an extraordinary evasion of such a branch of administering criminal law to say that when the Code enacts a certain thing shall not be permitted, that such a contravention comes within the description of error, omission or irregularity, 25 M. 61 (P.C.).

Irregularities which do not vitiate proceedings. 529. If any Magistrate not empowered by law to do any of the following things, namely:—

(a) to issue a search-warrant under section 98;

(b) to order, under section 155, the police to investigate an offence;

(c) to hold an inquest under section 176;

(d) to issue process, under section 186, for the apprehension of a person within the local limits of his jurisdiction who has committed an offence outside such limits;

(e) to take cognizance of an offence under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b);

(f) to transfer a case under section 192;

(g) to tender a pardon under section 337 or section 338;

(h) to sell property under section 524 or section 525; or

(i) to withdraw a case and try it himself under section 528;

erroneously in good faith does that thing; his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered.

Scope of the Section.—This section deals with irregularities which do not vitiate proceedings. The remedying of irregularities is familiar to most systems of jurisprudence, 25 M. 61 (P.C.). An irregularity may be a non-compliance in a minor matter or it may be a non-compliance in a substantial matter. In the former case the defect in the proceedings will generally be cured, but in the latter they cannot be cured. This section deals with acts done by a Magistrate in no way empowered by law to do those acts. It has no reference to a Magistrate empowered otherwise under the Code to do things but not possessing jurisdiction over the particular offence, 20 A. 40.

Clause (a).—Section 98, supra, deals with search of house suspected to contain stolen property, forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin or instruments for counterfeiting coins, stamps or for forgery.

Clause (b).—Section 155 (3) refers to investigation in non-cognizable cases by a police-officer receiving an order to do so from a Magistrate. When a police-officer receives information of the commission of a non-cognizable offence he may report the case to the Magistrate for orders and the Magistrate may without taking cognizance order an investigation S 155 (3) read with this clause leaves no doubt in the matter, 6 M L T. 239.

Clause (c).—This sub-section saves only proceedings before a Magistrate taken on a complaint of which cognizance is taken without authority, 29 Cr. L.J. 124=106 Ind. Cas. 716 where 19 A L J. 77=22 Cr. L.J. 122=59 Ind. Cas. 554 is distinguished. But this will not have the effect of making the complainant liable for prosecution for a false complaint by reason of the Magistrate's having taken cognizance of it without power to do so, 5 Pat. 447.

Clause (f).—If a Magistrate not empowered to transfer a case from the file of one Magistrate to another does so this clause will cure such an irregularity, 38 C. 869; 4 C.W.N. 321; 16 C.W.N. 835; Welr II, 152 and 699; where a first-class Magistrate not empowered by law to transfer cases, makes an order of transfer to a third-class Magistrate of a case erroneously and in good faith, in the absence of anything to the contrary, bona fides will be assumed, and the transfer should not be treated as invalid to prevent the third-class Magistrate taking cognizance on such transfer and trying the case, 30 Bom. L.R. 653. Transfer of security proceedings by a Magistrate not empowered to do so was held to be cured by this clause, 35 C. 243. So also proceedings under S. 145, supra, 36 C. 370; 2 C.L.J. 614; 5 C.W.N. 866.

Clause (g).—When a pardon was tendered and accepted in good faith, the fact that the Magistrate had no power to tender such a pardon is a defect which could be cured under this clause. Where a Magistrate had no jurisdiction to tender a pardon in respect of offences inquired into in a different District, it was held that his action in that respect was not cured by this clause, 20 A. 40.

Good faith.—Section 3 (20) of the General Clauses Act, X of 1897 defines good faith thus "A thing shall be deemed to be in good faith when it is in fact done honestly whether it is done negligently or not." S. 52, I.P.C., defines good faith, thus: "Nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith which is done or believed without due care and attention" and S. 4 (2), supra, enacts that all words and expressions used herein and defined in the I.P.C., and not hereinbefore defined shall be deemed to have the same meanings respectively, attributed to them by that Code.

530. If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law in this behalf, does any of the following things, namely:—

Irregularities which vitiate proceedings.

- (a) attaches and sells property under section 88;
- (b) issues a search-warrant for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post Office, or a telegram in the Telegraph Department;
- (c) demands security to keep the peace;
- (d) demands security for good behaviour;
- (e) discharges a person lawfully bound to be of good behaviour;
- (f) cancels a bond to keep the peace;
- (g) makes an order under section 133 as to a local nuisance;
- (h) prohibits, under section 143, the repetition or continuance of a public nuisance;
- (i) issues an order under section 144;
- (j) makes an order under Chapter XII;
- (k) takes cognizance, under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (c), of an offence;
- (l) passes a sentence under section 349, on proceedings recorded by another Magistrate;
- (m) calls, under section 435, for proceedings;
- (n) makes an order for maintenance;
- (o) revises, under section 515, an order passed under section 514;
- (p) tries an offender;
- (q) tries an offender summarily; or
- (r) decides an appeal;

his proceedings shall be void.

Scope of the section.—This section deals with irregularities which vitiate proceedings unlike the last section. It applies only to cases of Magistrate having no legal power to try accused for offences but where they have the power, the trial cannot be vitiated by any irregularity in the trial, 30 Bom. L.R. 653. It is important to notice that in inferior Courts and to proceedings before Magistrate the maxim "omnia prosequuntur cito esse acta" does not apply to give jurisdiction but where it appears that the inferior Court has jurisdiction it will be intended that the proceedings are regular but unless it so appears or if it be left to doubt, whether it has jurisdiction or not such intendment will be made, 7 B. & C. 785 at 790 quoted and followed in 28 Cr. L.J. 913 at 924 = 105 Ind. Cas. 433. If any of the acts mentioned in this section is done by a Magistrate not empowered by law so to do, his proceedings are void and the opening words of S. 537, infra, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, refer to the provisions of this section; see 1 Bom. L.R. 27. It refers only to Magistrates mentioned in the last four classes of Criminal Courts mentioned in S. 6, supra and makes no reference to the first class of Criminal Courts, namely, Court of Session. If a Sessions Judge tries an offender or decides an appeal not empowered in this behalf, his proceedings may come under this section, even though this section in terms does not apply to him.

Clause (d).—A defect in the issue of a preliminary notice is not one of mere irregularity but falls under this section being a question of jurisdiction, 41 M. 246; (1913) M.W.N. 751; 31 C. 350; 24 A. 151.

Clause (e).—This clause deals with discharge of a person lawfully bound to be of good behaviour. It is not clear why no similar provision is made dealing with the discharge of a person bound over to keep the peace. Clauses (c) and (d) deal with demands to keep the peace and demands to be of good behaviour. But in the case of a discharge of a person, bound over to keep the peace there is no corresponding provision.

Clause (f).—In S. 125, supra, the words "or of good behaviour" were added in the 1898 Code. But perhaps through some over-sight these words were not added in this clause after the words "to keep the peace". Thus we find no provision made in cases where a Magistrate not being empowered by law caucels a bond to be of good behaviour.

Clause (j).—The clause refers only to cases where a Magistrate is not competent by virtue of the position he holds or powers vested in him to try a case of the character referred to in S. 145, supra, 5 C.W.N. 695.

Clause (k).—Taking cognizance of an offence suo motu would render the proceedings void if the Magistrate is not empowered to do so, 1 C.W.N. 103. See 23 C.W.N. 518; 39 C. 119; 23 C. 412.

Clause (l).—The Magistrate to whom the records are sent up must deal with the case himself. He cannot transfer the case to another Magistrate and if he does so, the proceedings of the latter are void, 2 Cr. L.J. 464.

Clause (n).—Once a Magistrate is empowered to deal with applications for maintenance under S. 488, supra, this clause will not apply to vitiate his proceedings even though he had no territorial jurisdiction. Such a case falls under S. 531, infra, and not under this section, 49 C.L.J. 205 = 30 Cr. L.J. 525 = 115 Ind. Cas. 652.

Clause (o).—An order for forfeiture of a bond made by a Court other than the Court which took the bond is void under this clause, 16 Bom. L.R. 84.

Clause (p).—Trial by a Court not duly empowered is a nullity, 8 B. 317; a commitment made without jurisdiction is void and need not be set aside, 11 C.L.R. 55; conviction by a Bench of Magistrates, all the members of which did not hear the evidence is void, 39 M. 304. Where the facts disclosed an offence within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate it is a complete fallacy to say he is not empowered by law to try the person charged for the offence which is within his jurisdiction, because the facts disclosed a more serious offence which is beyond his jurisdiction. He is expressly so empowered; whether in doing so he adopts a proper course, is another question. No doubt it is improper on the part of the Magistrate to intentionally ignore circumstances of aggravation which show that an offence beyond his jurisdiction was in fact committed as well as an offence within his jurisdiction. But in such a case the proceedings would not be void, 2 Ran. 455 at 458 where 13 B. 502; 24 M. 675 are followed and 23 C.W.N. 818 is distinguished. It cannot be contended that an accused has no

Clause (g).—Where a Magistrate deliberately disregards the offence actually complained of and tries the case summarily there is no question of irregularity but his proceedings are void, 5 C.W.N. 252; 24 M. 675; 26 Cr. L.J. 1539=80 Ind. Cas. 439; 46 A. 446. No tribunal can properly clutch at jurisdiction by intentionally ignoring facts of aggravation which make the offence really cognizable only by a higher tribunal, Weir II 21; 20 L.W. 919=25 Cr. L.J. 1193=82 Ind. Cas. 57; 25 L.W. 86=28 Cr. L.J. 165 (2)=99 Ind. Cas. 596 (2). A summary trial on a charge under S. 147, I.P.C., is illegal and comes within this clause even though the accused is convicted under S. 323, I.P.C., and the provisions of S. 637, infra cannot cure such an illegality and the proceedings of the Magistrate must be held to be void 52 B 254 where 27 C.W.N. 143 is followed.

Clause (r).—An accused was sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment by a Magistrate specially empowered under S. 80, supra, and his petition of appeal was sent from jail, to the Sessions Judge instead of the High Court under S. 403 (b) supra and was summarily rejected by the Sessions Judge under S. 421, supra. It was held that under the provisions of this clause the proceedings of the Sessions Judge were void and he acted without jurisdiction and the accused had a right of appeal to the High Court, 2 Ran. 386.

trial or other proceedings in the course of which it was arrived at or passed, took place in a wrong sessions division, district, sub-division or other local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

Scope of the section.—This section applies solely to cases in which there is no jurisdiction by reason of the inquiry, trial or other proceeding being held in wrong local area, 16 B. 200, and refers to districts, divisions, sub-divisions and other local areas, 16 C. 667. The policy of the Code is to uphold in most cases the orders passed by Criminal Court which were lacking in local jurisdiction or which had committed illegalities or irregularities unless a failure of justice has been occasioned or is likely to be occasioned through such want of jurisdiction or such illegalities or irregularities, 52 M. 791 at 792, 793. This section applies to a case where a Magistrate has authority to commit but has no territorial jurisdiction in the place where the offence is alleged to have been committed, 26 M. 640 at 643. The manifest intention of the section is to provide against the contingency of a finding, sentence or order regularly passed by a Court in the case of an offence committed outside its local area, being set aside when no failure of justice has taken place. There is nothing in the language of the section to confine its operation to cases where the offences committed within the jurisdiction of a Court are tried by such Court outside the limits of the local area of its jurisdiction, 30 M. 95. A point of jurisdiction can be raised at any stage, 3 Pat 417 at 421. This section only applies to defects as to local jurisdiction when no failure of justice has been occasioned, 35 C.L.J. 200=22 Cr. L.J. 865=83 Ind. Cas. 458, and does not apply to cases where the order, is passed by a Court not empowered to make such orders unless covered by

S. 529, supra, 16 Bom. L.R. 84=15 Cr. L.J. 295=23 Ind. Cas. 503. It is this section and not S. 530 (n) supra, that applies to an order passed under S. 489, supra, by a Magistrate in a wrong district. Once the Magistrate is empowered to deal with such an application for maintenance S. 530 (n) cannot apply to such a case, 49 C.L.J. 295=30 Cr. L.J. 525=115 Ind. Cas. 602.

Trial in a wrong sessions division, etc.—The policy of the Criminal Procedure Code as shown by Ss. 531—538 is to uphold in most cases the orders passed by the Criminal Court which was lacking in local jurisdiction or which has committed illegalities or irregularities unless failure of justice has been occasioned through such want of jurisdiction. In 36 M. 397 it was held that if a Sessions Court to which a commitment has been made has no local jurisdiction over a place where the offence took place, such commitment should be quashed (though of course after the trial had taken place to its termination), S. 531 might cure the defect, 42 M. 791 at 792-793. The Madras High Court in this case upheld a commitment to the High Court Sessions by the Chief Presidency Magistrate with regard to an offence which took place in the Chingleput District within the cognizance of the Sessions Court of Chingleput. See also 26 M. 640; 17 M. 402; 8 B. 312; 16 B. 200; 10 B. 274 and 18 A. 359. An order of commitment to the Sessions Court is an order under this section and when the Sessions Court had no jurisdiction to try the offence the High Court in revision can set aside such commitment, 3 Pat. 417.

Sessions Division District, etc.—See Ss. 7 and 8, supra, at p. 25-27.

Local area—See section 188, supra. The expression "other local area" in this section was added in consequence of the decision in 13 B.L.R. Appx. 4=21 W.R. (Cr.) 63.

Trial or other proceeding.—It is a general and well-known rule that all judicial acts exercised by persons whose judicial authority is limited to a particular locality should be done within the locality to which such authority is limited. Where a criminal appeal was presented to a Sessions Judge at the place within his division but was heard and disposed of by him within the limits of his civil but outside the local limits of his criminal jurisdiction, it was held that this section was applicable; as no failure of justice has been occasioned by such irregularity, 17 A. 36 (F.B.). An order passed under S. 107, supra, against a person is not invalid merely on the ground that there was no evidence on record to show that the person informed against was residing within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction when proceedings were initiated. No objection having been raised in the trial Court, irregularity, if any, is cured by this section, 49 A. 228.

Unless the error has occasioned a failure of Justice.—If it appears that the constitution and procedure of the Court in which the trial ought to have taken place are different from the constitution and procedure of the wrong Court in which the trial was held the accused would necessarily be prejudiced, 13 B.L.R. Appx. 4=21 W.R. (Cr.) 65, where no objection as to the jurisdiction of the Court was taken and the accused failed to show that he had been prejudiced in any way the High Court declined to interfere, 21 W.R. (Cr.) 83; 18 M.L.J. 330. The fact that objection was taken as to jurisdiction at a comparatively early stage of the proceeding was not conclusive proof that the accused was prejudiced by the irregularity, 34 C.L.J. 200=22 Cr. L.J. 666=63 Ind. Cas. 438. See the explanation to S. 537, infra, on this point.

532. (1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment, if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless, during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority.

(2) If such Court considers that the accused was injured, or if such objection was so made, it shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry by a competent Magistrate.

Scope of the Section.—This section applies to a case where a Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise the powers duly conferred, which are not so conferred, has committed an accused person for trial to a Court of Session and does not apply to a case where the Court of Session considers that a commitment made to it by a competent Magistrate is illegal, 43 B. 147 at 153. This section applies only to a commitment to a Court of Session. It cannot apply to the case of a want of certificate of the Political Agent to try an offence in British India when the trial begins, 12 Bom. L.R. 667=11 Cr. L.J. 543=7 Ind. Cas. 934. It does not deal with cases in which the defect in the committal arises from want of territorial jurisdiction, 20 Cr. L.J. 416=51 Ind. Cas. 176, this section refers to case where the Magistrate is competent to deal with the case within his local jurisdiction but has no power to commit for some reason other than that of local jurisdiction, 16 B. 200; 26 M. 630; 17 M. 402. Where a person has been put on his trial and pleaded to the charge, the commitment cannot be quashed on account of any irregularity in the commitment. The Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to try a case which has been committed to him for trial and if the trial is legally held any irregularity in the commitment would not vitiate the proceedings of the Sessions Judge, 26 Cr. L.J. 1560=90 Ind. Cas. 440 where 12 C.L.R. 120 is followed.

Purporting to exercise powers duly conferred.—These words occurring at the beginning of the section appear to have reference to S. 206 of the Code and to signify "power to commit for trial," 17 M. 402 at 404; the defect contemplated is one personal to the Magistrate, i.e., not being empowered to commit and not to a defect in his proceedings. When a Magistrate is duly empowered to commit, this section has no application whatever. Where a Second-class Magistrate not being empowered to commit the case referred to a superior Magistrate under S. 346, supra, and that Magistrate without examining the witnesses de novo committed the accused to the Court of Session it was held that the commitment was not illegal and this section had no application, 12 C.W.N. 136=6 Cr. L.J. 429.

Sub-section (2).—Where a trial has been held under an erroneous commitment and no actual failure of justice has been occasioned by such error the judgment will not be reversed, 7 C. 682. The law contemplates that in serious cases of which a Court of Session may take cognizance on commitment made on it, the accused person should have some information of the case he has to answer.

533. (1) If any Court before which a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded or purporting to be recorded under section 164 or section 364 is tendered or has been received in evidence, finds that any of the provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with by the Magistrate recording the statement, it shall take evidence that such person duly made the statement recorded; and, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 91, such statement shall be admitted, if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits.

Non compliance with provisions of section 164 or 364.

(2) The provisions of this section apply to Courts of Appeal, Reference and Revision.

Scope and object of the section.—This section occurs in the Chapter relating to irregular proceedings and their effect, and it is not intended to override the law of evidence. The object of the section is to prevent justice being defeated by the Magistrate's failure to comply with the provisions of S. 164 or S. 364, supra, and to prevent the exclusion of the recorded statement defective in form and to permit oral evidence to be adduced to remedy the defect. It is quite plain that this section can only be invoked when there is some written record but that record is defective through some error in not strictly complying with the provisions of S. 164 or 364. The object apparent from the words of the section is to take such records out of the excluding provisions of S. 91 of the Indian Evidence Act, 45 M. 230 at 235. This section is intended to apply to all cases in which the directions of law have not been fully complied with. It gives legal sanction to the maxim omnia præsuntur rite esse acta, 23 B. 221 at 223; 31 Bom. L.R. 565; 26 Cr. L.J. 1459=83 Ind. Cas 1026. This section is intended according to 23 B. 221 to apply to a case in which the directions of law have not been fully complied with, and would apply to omissions to comply with the law as well as to infractions of the law, 31 Bom. L.R. 565 at 568. A defect in form is curable, but a defect in substance is not. If the warning is given under sub-section (2) of S. 164, but the Magistrate failed to embody the fact in his memorandum such a defect is curable. But if the warning had not been in fact given, the defect cannot be cured under this section as such a statement could not be held to have been duly made, 6 Lah 415; 6 Lah. 58 at 64; see also 30 Cr. L.J. 49=113 Ind. Cas. 65 where it was held that a defect in the certificate or memorandum prepared by the Magistrate and attached to the confession is cured if the Magistrate who records the confession goes into the witness-box and states on oath he complied with the requirements of this section. It is more than doubtful whether an omission to prepare a record of the examination of an accused person under S. 361, supra, can be cured by this section, 5 Pat. 430 at 448. This section deals only with errors in the recording of a confession and does not apply to a case where no record whatever has been made of a confession, 35 A. 260.

Confession recorded or purporting to be recorded.—Under S. 165, supra, it is not obligatory on a Magistrate holding an investigation or preliminary inquiry to record, in writing a confession made to him by an accused person and such confession may be proved by oral testimony of the Magistrate, 45 M. 230; see also 30 Cr. L.J. 49=113 Ind. Cas 65.

Provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with.—Failure to warn an accused before recording a confession is a defect which can be cured by this section, 22 Cr. L.J. 203=60 Ind. Cas 56; 9 C.L.J. 55; 40 C. 873; failure of a Magistrate to append the memorandum at the foot of a confession as to its voluntary character can be cured, 22 M. 15, 8 C.W.N. 22, but where the Magistrate recording a confession certifies that the confession was not voluntary, this section cannot apply, 17 Bom. L.R. 898. Where the confession is recorded in a narrative form without recording every question put and every answer given in the exact language used, the defect can be cured by examining the Magistrate, 9 C.L.J. 55, following 14 C. 532. When the defect in the recording of the confession or other statement of an accused is one not of substance but of form only, this section applies, 2 C.W.N. 702. No distinction can be drawn between omissions to comply with the law and infractions of it. This section is intended to apply to all cases in which the directions of the law have not been fully complied with, 23 B. 221 at 225; 31 Bom. L.R. 563 at 568. This section is not limited to any particular kind of non-compliance with S. 364, supra, 21 B. 493; 3 Pat. L.J. 291. This section will not render a confession admissible when no attempt at all had been made to conform to the imperative provisions of S. 164, supra 9 M. 224; 23 B. 221; 15 C. 595; 17 C. 862.

Such statement shall be admitted.—The term 'such statement' occurring herein refers to the statement recorded regarding which the Magistrate gives evidence under this section to the effect that such person duly made it. The evidence of the written confession can be given by the Magistrate under this section if the record is proved to be an accurate and true statement made by the accused. It would follow that the statement recorded can be acted upon as a statement duly made by the accused to the Magistrate, 31 Bom. L.R. 565 at 575, following 21 B. 495; 23 B. 221; 9 M. 224; 3 Pat. 872; 45 A. 166.

If error has not injured the accused in his defence.—This section so far from affording a remedy for a defect expressly excludes from the operation of the section errors which have injured the accused in his defence on the merits. The question whether the accused has been injured has to be determined on the merits of each particular case, 23 B. 221.

534. An omission to inform under S. 447, any person of his rights under Chapter XXXIII shall not affect the validity of any proceeding.

Omission to give information under section 447.

The change in the language of the section was due to the Amending Act, XII of 1923. Chapter XXXIII deals with special rights of European and Indian British subjects and S. 447 makes it imperative to inform the accused of his special rights, see 3 Ran. 220.

535. (1) No finding or sentence pronounced or passed shall be deemed invalid merely on the ground that no charge was framed, unless, in the opinion of the Court of appeal or revision, a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby.

Effect of omission to prepare charge.

(2) If the Court of appeal or revision thinks that a failure of justice has been occasioned by an omission to frame a charge, it shall order that a charge be framed, and that the trial be recommenced from the point immediately after the framing of the charge.

This section and S. 232, supra, seem to cover the same ground. S. 232, supra, deals also with the absence of a charge and applies to Courts of confirmation. The procedure to be followed in cases where prejudice is shown by the accused is not clearly laid down in S. 232 supra, as in this section. This section is not limited to trials where no charge at all has been framed but is also applicable to cases in which no charge has been framed for the offence of which a person has been convicted, 41 C.L.J. 474=26 Cr. L.J. 1279=89 Ind. Cas. 1033. This section is intended to legalise convictions had without framing a charge, but a misjoinder of charges will not be cured by this section, 21 O.W.N. 756. When a Court of appeal has before it the question of confirming or setting aside a conviction, an omission to frame a charge or an error in the charge is no ground for interference unless a failure of justice has been occasioned thereby but when a Court of appeal is dealing with an appeal against an acquittal there is no similar provision under which a defect as to a charge can be condoned, 28 Cr. L.J. 170=99 Ind. Cas. 607; see also 55 C. 476. When an accused person did not object at the trial on the ground of omission to draw up a separate charge for each offence but clearly understood what he was being tried for, and was not in any way prejudiced, this section was held applicable, 41 C. 66. When no reasons are given for a conviction as required by S. 263 (h) supra, the defect goes to the root of the trial and cannot be regarded as an irregularity, 28 Cr. L.J. 435=101 Ind. Cas. 671, referring to 46 M. 253.

The words "merely on the ground that no charge has been framed" mean a case where the offence being a petty one and the evidence being fairly taken the Court framed no charge at all. But where the Court frames a charge however erroneous, then it cannot be said that the conviction is invalid merely on the ground that no charge was framed bringing the case under this section, 42 C. 188.

offence triable with Assessors.

536. (1) If an offence triable with the aid of assessors is tried by a jury, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid.

Trial with Assessors of offence triable
by Jury.

(2) If an offence triable by a jury is tried with the aid of assessors, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid, unless the objection is taken before the Court records its finding.

Scope of the section.—In enacting this section, the Legislature must be taken to have had in mind cases where the procedure had been wrong throughout. Literally read, sub-section (2) of this section covers only cases where objection is taken, but not to cases where there was no opportunity to take the objection, 45 B. 619.

Sub section (1).—Where an offence triable by Assessors is tried by a Jury the trial is not on that ground only invalid, but the Judge's charge to the Jury is to be treated as his judgment in the case, 24 W.R. (Cr). 30, and an appeal from the conviction will lie on facts, 26 M. 243—Per Benson, J., but the other learned Judge who heard the appeal, Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., took a different view, and held that no appeal lay on facts but only on a point of law under S. 418, supra. The two learned Judges however agreed as to the reduction of the sentence passed on the appellant while confirming the conviction, and the case did not go before a third Judge on the question on which the two learned Judges differed. In an earlier case in Weir II, 709 a Bench of the Madras high Court held that when a case triable with the aid of Assessors was wrongly tried by a Judge with a Jury, the proper course for the appellate Court was to treat the charge to the Jury as the opinion of Assessors or to order a re-trial if there was a possibility of the Jury having gone wrong on the facts. See S. 269 (3) where the Jurors are to sit as Assessors in a case in which the accused is charged in the same trial with several offences some of which are triable by Jury and some with the aid of Assessors. The law makes no difference as to the procedure at the trial, between a trial by a Jury and one with the aid of Assessors except as to summing up in the case of the former, and the manner in which the verdict in the former and the opinion of the Assessors in the latter are respectively taken. It is at this latter point there is a departure of ways and if the accused who is tried does not interfere at that crucial point and get the procedure applicable to trials with the aid of Assessors enforced, he cannot be heard to complain, 33 B. 423.

Sub-section (2).—The words used in the section are "offence triable by a Jury" while in S. 418, supra, the words used are "trial was by Jury." Trial by Jury is a privilege carrying with it certain liabilities. If an offence triable by a Jury is tried with the aid of Assessors then provided objection is taken before the Court records its finding, the trial will be invalid. The accused has been deprived of a valuable privilege which is open to him up to the last stage of the case to preserve. But the converse is different. If the accused obtains the privilege to which strictly speaking, he is not entitled, it is not presumed that he will take any objection. He has the chance of a verdict which can only be upset under certain special circumstances. If the verdict is against him he cannot turn round and claim an appeal on matters of fact, 23 B. 680 at 689, see 6 Pat. 208. Assessors can never act as a Jury although the Jurors can act as Assessors. See S. 269 (3), supra. So trial with Assessors of an offence triable by Jury will be a valid trial with the aid of Assessors. If a Judge tries a case in which the offence charged is triable by a Jury without a Jury, the defect in the trial can be cured by the sub-section, 28 Cr. L.J. 177=99 Ind. Cas. 849. Where certain accused persons were tried by a Jury of offences triable by a Jury and the Jury when returning a verdict of not guilty on the offences charged find the accused guilty of an offence triable with the aid of Assessors and the Judge did not take the individual opinion of the Jurors as Assessors, it was held that the procedure adopted was a mere irregularity cured by this section. But this section and S. 269, supra, will not apply to a case where the accused is not in the first instance charged with the commission of such offence and the conviction come guide, when a mandatory provision of law is disregarded by a Court, is the well known ruling of the Judicial Committee in 25 M. 61 (P.C.) to the effect that a disobedience of an express provision of law as to a mode of trial is not a mere irregularity cured by this section but an illegality, 51 M.L.J. 687—24 L.W. 649, dissenting from 6 Lah. 553. In 49 A. 316, 30 Cr. L.J. 891=118 Ind. Cas. 323, it was held that the decision of the Privy Council in 25 M. 61 (P.C.) applied only to cases of disobedience to an express provision as to the mode of trial and mere disobedience to an express provision of law cannot come within the ruling of the Privy Council and that the provisions of S.256, supra are not provisions relating to the mode of trial and it would be wrong to hold that failure to follow strictly the provisions of S. 256 supra, amounts to more than an irregularity; see also 1929 M.W.N. 898 and 508 and 57 M.L.J. 763 at 755=30 L.W. 883. This section cannot be availed of, in an appeal against acquittal so as to justify the Court in convicting the accused on the appeal, 39 M. 527 (F.B.) 5 Pat. L.J. 81=21 Cr. L.J. 621. The test to be applied in considering whether a particular infringement of the provisions of the Code is one which does or does not come within the purview of this section appear to be these.....Does the error go to the whole root of the trial? Does it in effect vitiate the proceedings? Has the Court assumed an authority which it does not possess? Has it broken the vital rules of procedure? If the error is of such a nature that the proceedings are vitiated in their very inception, this section has no application. But the mere fact that a certain provision of the Code is imperative does not in itself indicate that a breach of that provision vitiates the whole proceeding. In fact in order to create an error there must be some breach of an imperative rule, for, if the matter were discretionary it would appear that no opportunity for error could arise, 43 A. 124 at 127; 27 Cr. L.J. 669=94 Ind. Cas. 717; 3 Ran. 139 followed in 27 Cr. L.J. 1281=98 Ind. Cas. 177; 4 Pat. 488. This section applies only to mere errors of procedure arising out of mere inadvertence and not to substantive errors of law and does not apply to a case of disregard or disobedience of mandatory provision of the Code, 49 A. 475 following 25 M. 61 (P.C.); 8 Lah. 230 (P.C.); 49 A. 325. See also 28 Cr. L.J. 771=104 Ind. Cas. 99; 1929 M.W.N. 898 and 506. Breach of a statutory provision under Ss. 274 and 326 as to choosing a Jury cannot be cured by this section, 33 C.W.N. 1005. The test to be applied in deciding whether mandatory enactments shall be considered directory only, or obligatory with an implied nullification for disobedience, is this. In each case we must take to the subject-matter, consider the importance of the provision that has been disregarded, and the relation of that provision to the general object intended to be secured by the Act; and upon a review of the case in this aspect decide whether the matter is what is called imperative or only directory, 51 C. I. (F.B.) at 17-18, followed in 52 C. 159. This section was certainly not inserted in the Code for being invoked on any and every occasion as a shield against irregularities perpetrated by the subordinate criminal Courts. The only way to secure the proper observance of the law by the subordinate Courts is for the High Court to interfere whenever any departure from the established procedure, comes to its notice. For example, the observance of the provisions of S. 342 supra, is one of paramount importance and non-compliance with it cannot be passed over on the ground of technicality, 29 C.W.N. cxviii. It was held in 60 B. 680, following 53 C. 46 that there is no universal rule that a disobedience of a mandatory provision in a statute, has the consequence of nullification of all proceedings irrespective of any question of prejudice, and the provisions of this section cure the defect unless the omission has in fact occasioned a failure of Justice. In 1929 M.W.N. 505=30 Cr. L.J. 623=116 Ind. Cas. 368 the Madras High Court followed the decisions in 53 C. 46 and 50 B. 680 and held that failure to comply with a mandatory provision of the Code is not necessarily an illegality vitiating the proceedings but the question in each case is whether there has been prejudice to the accused. Again in 1929 M.W.N. 898, it was held that no doubt after 25 M. 61 (P.C.) an idea prevailed that this section did not apply to mandatory provisions of the Code but the ruling in 5 Ran. 53 (P.C.) has dispelled that idea and this section may be taken to cover any irregularity in the wide sense of that term provided that there has been no failure of justice. A failure to comply with a mandatory provision of the Code is not necessarily an illegality. An omission by some of the members of a Bench of Magistrates to sign the judgment is not necessarily illegal vitiating the trial when all the members constituting the Bench have signed the register in which the sentence was embodied, 57 M.L.J. 763=30 L.W. 883 not following 52 M. 237. See 6 Lab. 554; 27 Cr. L.J. 431=93 Ind. Cas. 159. But see 51 M.L.J. 687=24 L.W. 649 which takes a different view. Consent on the part of an accused will not cure an irregularity, for an accused person can consent to nothing in a criminal trial, 45 M. 117; 1 L.R. (P.C.) 520; 18 M.L.J. 330; 12 W.R. (Cr.) 59; 16 W.R. (Cr.) 69; 23 W.R. (Cr.) 59; 2 Q. 23; 6 C.W.N. 202; 28 M.L.J. 329=(1915) M.W.N. 229; 21 A.L.J. 89; 4 Lab. 376; no consent by Counsel whether for his own convenience or that of his client or for the convenience of the Court, can by itself create jurisdiction in the Court to commit irregularities; nor can the commission of irregularities of a serious nature substantially affecting the conduct of the trial and prejudicing the accused be waived, merely by consent on the part of the accused's representative. As the Privy Council puts it 'no serious defect in the mode of conducting a criminal trial can be justified or cured by the consent of Advocate for the accused,' 60 A. 437 at 462. An accused person's right to have his defence witnesses examined by the Court which disposes of his case, is a right which has been secured to him by the Code and where the action of the Court has deprived him of this right, it must be held that a failure of justice is the natural result of the irregularity. The fact that the accused finding that he could not have his way, and that the Court would not summon his witnesses, made the best of a bad job by putting interrogatories to examine witnesses on commission is immaterial, 18 L.W. 899 at 902.

Subject to the Provisions hereinbefore contained.—"What is the effect of the words "subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained in S. 537?" I do not think it can possibly be taken to be that the section is to have no application if there has been any departure from any of the previous sections of the Code. Such an interpretation would render the words "error, omission or irregularity" in other proceedings absolutely nugatory. The Code is exhaustive as to procedure. I think the opening words of the section must be read as having reference to Ss 529 to 536 supra. The Chapter in which these sections are included is headed "of irregular proceedings" and Ss. 529 to 536 deal directly with the effect of various irregularities including some cases of want of jurisdiction. In some cases, the irregularity is fatal, in others not. Then follows S. 537 a general saving section which is, however, limited by the foregoing sections in the same Chapter," 19 C.W.N. 972 at 979. See also 27 C. 839; 6 C.W.N. xlv1; 28 C. 217; 26 B. 50 at 51; 31 M. 80; 29 M. 149; 17 M.L.J. 533 but a contrary view was taken in 22 C. 176 and 23 C. 983. The repeal of sub-section (b) and the illustration supports strongly the view expressed in 19 C.W.N. 972 as the decisions to the contrary relied strongly on the repealed sub-section (b).

No finding sentence or order—This section does not purport to cure any sort of proceedings at any stage. It applies only to finding, sentence or order already arrived at and under consideration by a superior Court. The case should have been finally disposed of, 23 C. 983; this section and the ruling in 25 M. 61 (P.C.) in no way touches on the effect of an error of procedure antecedent to trial or the jurisdiction of the Court, 35 M. 275.

Court of competent jurisdiction.—These words must be taken to mean a Court of competent jurisdiction in respect of the particular offence charged, 10 B. 319. A Magistrate who is disqualified from trying a case though he may be authorised generally to try cases of the same class cannot be said to be a Court of competent jurisdiction, 23 C. 323 and 442. So also a Magistrate who takes cognizance under S 190 (1) (c) and tries the case, 13 A. 345; 28 A. 212; when a Jury is not properly empanelled as required by law but in disregard to Ss. 276, 277, 278, 279 and 326, supra, the trial cannot be said to be by a Court of competent jurisdiction, 7 C.W.N. 138; 26 A. 214; 33 C.W.N. 1005. Similarly when the Court is not properly constituted as regards the required number of Assessors, 25 B. 694; 15 B. 514; 21 A. 106; 14 A. 334; 24 M. 523.

Reversed or altered under Chapter XXVII.—Chapter XXVII deals with submission of sentences by lower Court to the High Court for confirmation and the powers of the High Court in dealing with such cases.

Distinction between Irregularity and Illegality.—Irregularity may be defined as a deviation from the established rule of law or procedure 'when a thing is directed to be done and the thing is in effect done but in the wrong way, the error amounts to an irregularity and not an illegality,' 19 C.W.N. 972. A disobedience to an express provision of law as to the mode of trial is not a mere irregularity but an illegality 25 M. 61 (P.C.) followed in 39 M. 527 (F.B.); 38 M. 1038; 30 M. 44 and 328; 29 M. 569; 28 M. 437; 26 M. 127; 25 M.L.J. 391; 29 B. 449; 26 B. 533; 17 Bom. L.R. 1073 and 892; 46 C. 741; 40 C. 46; 33 C. 1256; 29 C. 335; 17 C. W.N. 479; 11 C.W.N. 472; 10 C.W.N. 520; 6 C.L.J. 757; 1 C.L.J. 475; 26 A. 195; 1901 A.W. N. 520; 19 Cr. L.J. 161; 21 Cr. L.J. 29 and 626; 20 Cr. L.J. 103; 3 L.B.R. 75 (F.B.), etc.

Irregularity in the complaint—This section provides for an error omission or irregularity in the complaint and not to entire absence of complaint say, a complaint of Court under S. 476, supra, without which cognizance of the offence cannot be taken under the law and which is a statutory bar to the entertainment of the complaint, 49 C.L.J. 342=30 Cr. L.J. 658=116 Ind. Cas. 638. A complaint is not intended to give information to the accused and failure to set out the speeches or alleged seditious words, the subject-matter of a subsequent charge in a complaint is only an irregularity cured by this section, 32 M. 3 at 11. (1) Failure to examine the complaint on oath under S. 200, supra, 9 A. 666; 35 M. 606; 18 A. 221; 20 Bom. L.R. 1081; 46 C. 807; 23 C.W.N. 484; 20 Cr. L.J. 247=49 Ind. Cas. 919, 30 C. 923; 55 M.L.J. 715=23 L.W. 621=30 Cr. L.J. 433=115 Ind. Cas. 242 following the practice in Madras 11 M. 443 and 19 L.W. 461=25 Cr. L.J. 730=81 Ind. Cas. 218 (any irregularity in a complaint under S. 195 (1) which does not occasion a failure of justice will not furnish a ground for revision as it is only an irregularity cured under this section, 10 Lah 231); (2) failure to take the signature of the complainant, 6 C.W.N. 540; (3) failure to reduce a complaint to writing 7 M.H.C.R. Appx 25; (4) failure to record reasons for distrusting a complaint 25 M. 516; 14 C. 141, are curable under this section, but trial without a complaint is illegal and cannot be cured, 4 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca) 4; (1904) A.W.N. 266. Irregularity in a complaint of Court, under Ss. 195 and 476 supra, is not cured by this section, as it deals with irregularities in complaint and cannot cure the absence of a complaint of Court and proceedings initiated without such a complaint of Court are null and void 26 Cr. L.J. 731=86 Ind. Cas. 287; 1923 M.W.N. 229; 23 Cr. L.J. 840. 1 Luck 323; 28 Cr. L.J. 235=100 Ind. Cas. 1044=101 Ind. Cas. 458; 49 C.L.J. 312=30 Cr. L.J. 658=116 Ind. Cas. 638.

Irregularity in summons, warrant, charge, proclamation, etc.—Omission of particulars in summons or warrant, 8 C. 724; 31 B. 611, is curable. So also a defective search-warrant, 35 C. 1576. Failure to record reasons for issuing a warrant is curable, 33 C. 789, but in 33 M. 1038 it was held that it was a necessary preliminary for the exercise of the powers under S. 90, supra, that reasons should be given in writing, and failure to do so vitiates the warrant; omission to serve a preliminary order under S. 145, supra, is not fatal, 33 C. 68 (F.B.) and 33; 30 A. 41; and 9 C.W.N. 593; 25 Cr. L.J. 632=81 Ind. Cas. 170; when proceedings are started under S. 145, supra, but there was nothing in the police-report or other information upon which the case is started to justify them, this section has no application, 20 C. 520. An irregularity such as omission of actual words used in a charge is curable under this section, 32 M. 384. This section covers only an error or omission in the charge and has no application to a case where there is a total absence of a charge; omission to specify intention in a charge is not fatal, 10 B.H.C.R. 373; 22 C. 391 and 276; 30 Bom. L.R. 633; 15 B. 491; 6 A. 204; 4 C.W.N. 196; but see 39 C. 781; 33 C. 295. A Joinder of charges not permitted by Ss. 233 and 235 supra is fatal and cannot be cured 25 M. 61 (P.C.); 41 C. 722 and 662; 30 M. 329; 26 A. 193; 23 B. 449; 39 M. 527 (F.B.); 29 C. 335; 28 C. 7 and 10; 10 C.W.N. 520; 6 Bom. L.R. 725; 4 Bom. L.R. 537. A joint trial of several accused charged with offences not committed in the course of the same transaction is not an irregularity but an illegality and this section cannot cure the defect, 23 Cr. L.J. 357=100 Ind. Cas. 965, see Cr. A.No. 263 of 1927 (M.H.C.) where the conviction was set aside and retrial ordered. Misjoinder of charges and accused is not cured by this section. 23 M.L.J. 397; 33 M. 302; 42 A. 24; 27 B. 135; 29 Cr. L.J. 619=109 Ind. Cas. 811. 6 M.L.T. 266; 43 B. 147; 29 C. 335; 7 M.L.T. 367; 26 M. 434 and 125; 4 Bom. L.R. 449; 32 A. 57; 41 C. 68; 33 C. 161; 43 C. 741; 5 Ran. 53 (P.C.); 50 A. 457 at 462; 51 M.L.J. 672=21 L.W. 343; 27 Cr. L.J. 1351=58 Ind. Cas. 597. See notes under S. 233 at p. 458. A charge stating that the accused did a particular act to commit a certain offence, or "any other offence punishable with imprisonment", is improper as it does not give the accused knowledge of the specific offence with which he is charged. Where however he does not suffer a prejudice, the defect in the form is cured by this section, 23 Cr. L.J. 1186—82 Ind. Cas. 50; where a charge of criminal conspiracy did not specify who were the parties to it, it is only a defect which can be cured by this section, 28 Cr. L.J. 426—101 Ind. Cas. 458.

Irregularity in Judgments.—(1) Omission to state grounds of decision, 6 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 55; 6 G. 579; 13 C. 272; 20 C. 353; 27 Cr. L.J. 153—87 Ind. Cas. 737; (2) pronouncing judgment before writing it, 23 C. 802; 20 C. 333; 21 C. 121; 25 Cr.L.J. 705(1)—81 Ind. Cas. 193 (1) but see 27 M. 237; 14 A. 242; (3) omission to sign and date judgment, 47 A. 294. So also omission to sign a judgment written with his own hand is also cured by this section, 47 A. 284; 7 Ran. 370. Omission by some of the members of a Bench of Magistrates to sign the judgment convicting the accused is not necessarily illegal vitiating the whole trial especially when all the members of the Bench have signed the register embodying the sentence. The omission to sign the judgment is only an omission to comply with the technical requirement of law as to signing and should be treated as an irregularity which occasioning no failure of justice, 57 M.L.J. 763—30 L.W. 833 not following 52 M. 237. See omission to pronounce written judgment before sentencing the accused, 25 M.L.J. 445; Weir II, 711 are cured by this section, but a judgment not in accordance with the imperative provisions of Ss. 867 and 424, supra, cannot be cured, 17 Bom. L.R. 1035; 35 C. 138; 21 Cr. L.J. 52—54 Ind. Cas. 405. When in a faction fight, the two factions were tried separately on separate evidence recorded in each case but the appellate Court in appeals from conviction of both factions disposed of both appeals in one judgment, it was held it was only an irregularity as no injustice was done. It might have been better to keep the evidence entirely separate and deliver two judgments separately, 8 Lah. 193 (P.C.). Disposing of two matters by one judgment or recording evidence in two matters together is only an irregularity cured by this section 58 C. 400 at 408. Absence of a judgment cannot be said to be an irregularity cured by this section, 27 Cr. L.J. 1153—97 Ind. Cas. 737.

Irregularity in proceedings before or during trial.—A trial at the High Court sessions commenced before a Judge but continued and concluded by another Judge on account of illness of the first Judge is only an irregularity cured by this section, 29 Bom. L.R. 204. Omission to examine the accused before making an order of commitment under S. 209, supra is cured, 23 M. 636. See also 28 A. 421; but omission to call on the accused to enter on his defence occasions a failure of justice and cannot be cured, 23 C. 252; see 25 C. 863 as to significance of the word "trial." The decision of the Privy Council in 25 M. 61 does not compel the Court to hold that in no case a misjoinder of charges or failure to try charges separately can be an irregularity within this section. This section cannot be availed of in an appeal against acquittal so as to justify the conviction of the accused on the appeal, 39 M. 527 (F.B.). This section does not cure the defect in a trial where a case triable with a certain number of Assessors is tried with a less number of Assessors than the required number, the error is such as vitiates the whole trial and this section cannot cure such a defect, 25 Cr. L.J. 459—77 Ind. Cas. 811. Where a case which was made triable by a Court of Session under the new Code was tried by the Magistrate after the new Code came into force instead of committing the accused to the Court of Session which ended in a conviction, it was held the trial was illegal, and the illegality cannot be cured by this section, 26 Cr. L.J. 549—85 Ind. Cas. 643. The recording of evidence by the Magistrate himself when the remand order directed the evidence to be taken on commission is only an irregularity cured by this section, 30 Cr. L.J. 848—118 Ind. Cas. 643.

Irregularity in other Proceedings under the Code.—Failure to draw up a preliminary order under S. 145 (1) supra is not a mere irregularity in procedure but an irregularity affecting the jurisdiction of the Court and cannot be cured 49 A. 325. Failure to follow the strict provisions of S. 145, supra, when the parties had their case fully heard is curable, 30 A. 41, and omission to state grounds of being satisfied as to likelihood of a breach of the peace in the initial order is an irregularity, 33 C. 63; 36 M. 275; 33 C. 352 but trying together two rival parties in proceedings under S. 107 is illegal, 8 C.W.N. 480; 11 C.W.N.

472; 9 C.W.N. 895; 31 M. 276. Under the amended Code sanction under S. 195 has been abrogated; irregularities in proceedings under S. 476, supra are not cured by this section now. So any want of a complaint of a Court or public servant or any irregularity in making the same cannot be cured by this section, 26 Cr. L.J. 751=86 Ind. Cas. 297; 1 Luck. 253; 28 Cr. L.J. 388=100 Ind. Cas. 1044; 49 C.L.J. 342=30 Cr. L.J. 658=116 Ind. Cas. 833. Failure to give the accused an opportunity to adduce evidence to rebut the additional evidence and to hear arguments on such evidence is not cured, 26 Cr. L.J. 1033=87 Ind. Cas. 923; 4 Lah. 376.

Sub-section (b) relating to proceedings under Ss. 195 and 476 has now been omitted. Therefore want of a complaint of Court cannot be cured under this section and such an illegality will vitiate the entire proceedings, 1 Luck. 522. See also 28 Cr. L.J. 780=104 Ind. Cas. 108; 9 B. 27 and 282; 37 C. 457; 18 Cr. L.J. 767=31 Ind. Cas. 643; 49 C. L.J. 342=30 Cr. L.J. 638=116 Ind. Cas. 638.

Sub-section (c).—This sub-section means that the omission referred to herein must be treated as a mere irregularity, but when the provisions of the law as to empanelling of a Jury are violated such a contingency is not provided for in this sub-section. Such a breach of law must be treated as an illegality vitiating the whole trial which must be set aside for that reason alone, e.g., in 26 A 211, a Jury trial was set aside because seven Jurors were not empanelled instead of five as fixed by notification on the ground that the trial was not by a tribunal constituted according to law. Again, where the provisions of Ss. 275 to 279 and S. 283, supra, as regards selecting Jurors were not followed, it was held in, 7 C.W.N. 189 that this sub-section did not apply to such an irregularity, 33 C.W.N. 1005, see also 33 A. 385 and 36 A. 481 and 4 Lah. 382. In all the above cases the trial was set aside on account of illegalities committed therein without reference to any misdirection obviously on the ground that there was no valid trial in which a verdict of the jury had been returned. This is how the law must be interpreted, 27 Cr. L.J. 793=95 Ind. Cas. 393.

Sub-section (d).—The provisions of this section require that before a verdict of a jury can be reversed on the ground of misdirection, the High Court must be satisfied that the verdict is erroneous and a failure of justice has been occasioned, 25 C. 230; 21 C.W.N. 33; 12 A.L.J. 149=14 Cr. L.J. 805=21 Ind. Cas. 686. If improper questions have been admitted at a trial by Jury, it is for the Crown to show that their improper effect has been set right by the Court. Either the Jury, should be told at once to disregard the statements or else the charge should contain a similar warning to them expressly telling them not to consider the statement as involving a contradiction or otherwise damaging the evidence of the witness. Under sub-section (2) of s. 423, supra, and this sub-section it must be seen whether such improper admission of evidence has in effect led to a miscarriage of justice to entitle the High Court to set aside the verdict of the Jury. If a Judge is of opinion that it will be difficult for the Jury in spite of his express warning to disregard the evidence wrongly admitted, it is preferable that there should be a new trial before another Jury, 28 Bom. L.R. 281=27 Cr. L.J. 431=93 Ind. Cas. 681. A material misdirection or failure to lay down the law by which the Jury is to be guided is not covered by this section, 5 C.W.N. 876; 5 M.L.T. 124; 20 M. 44; 23 C. 22; 188 M.L.J. 250. Total absence of direction by the Judge as to the law cannot be cured by this section, 11 Cr.L.J. 340=5 Ind. Cas. 981; 5 M.L.T. 82=11 Cr. L.J. 432=7 Ind. Cas. 401; 11 Cr. L.J. 322=6 Ind. Cas. 14; 7 M.L.T. 191=11 Cr. L.J. 334=5 Ind. Cas. 935; 5 M.L.T. 345=(1911) 1 M.W.N. 190=12 Cr. L.J. 140=8 Ind. Cas. 789; 40 C. 367. A conviction obtained on a trial by Jury, would not be bad merely because the charge to the Jury was not happily expressed or that there was misdirection in the charge if otherwise there had been no failure of justice and the case will be covered by this section, 12 A.L.J. 149=14 Cr. L.J. 805=21 Ind. Cas. 686. See notes under Ss. 207 and 307, supra, at pp. 657 to 664 and 681 to 688.

Unless such error etc, has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.—These words do not qualify clause (d) only but also the other clauses (a) to (c), 5 Ben. 53 (P.C.). Failure to comply with a mandatory provision of law is not necessarily an illegality that vitiates the proceedings. The question is whether the failure has been prejudicial to the accused, 1929 M.W.N. 506 = 30 Gr. L.J. 623 = 116 Ind. Can. 366 following 53 C. 46 and 50 B. 680; see also 1929 M.W.N. 893. Before proceedings can be set aside it must be shown that by reason of the irregularity the true facts have not come out or that there is a danger that they will not come out, 15 C. 353; 10 A. 414. While no serious defect in the mode of conducting a trial can be justified or cured by the consent of the Counsel for the accused, the fact that a certain course of procedure was in fact consented to by the Counsel for an accused is an important element in considering the equally important question whether there has been any prejudice, 50 A. 437 at 462, following 5 Ran. 53 (P.C.). The onus is on the appellant to show that there has in fact been a failure of justice owing to the irregularity, 24 M. 523. The words "in fact" were introduced in the 1893 Code apparently in order to emphasise the duty of the Court to go into the merits before interfering in consequence of a misdirection or other error, but the duty existed just the same before, 26 M. 1. It is impossible to decide whether there has been a failure of justice in fact without looking to see what the facts are. In order to determine whether the verdict is erroneous and if so which of the powers conferred on the High Court by S. 423 (2) should be exercised, it is absolutely necessary to go into the facts, 26 M. 1. "In fact" is equivalent to "really" or "in reality." The expression "unless it has in fact occasioned a failure of justice" means unless it has unfairly affected the petitioner's defence on the merits, 31 B. 611 at 625; see also 11 B.H.C.R. 237. An error which in no way prejudices a convicted person, and is not fatal to the validity of a decision and is concerned with the proceedings rather than the mode of trial, may be condoned under this section 43 A. 124. In 5 Ran. 53 (P.C.) their Lordships of the Privy Council summed up after review of the several sections of the Code their view that the bare fact of an omission or irregularity has occurred unaccompanied by any probable suggestion of any failure of justice is not enough to warrant the quashing of a conviction; see also 3 Lah. 230 (P.C.).

Explanation.—Effect should be given if the objection is promptly raised and wrongly overruled by the lower Court. The explanation applies only when an objection is raised as to averment of an irregularity: an illegality affecting the jurisdiction of the Court can be raised in the appellate Court, 11 C.W.N. 1128, and an accused person cannot waive his rights in a criminal proceeding, or the benefit of legal provisions, 18 M.L.J. 330; 2 C. 23; 6 C. 96; 46 M. 117; 16 W.H. (Cr.) 69; 6 C.W.N. 202; 28 M.L.J. 329 = (1915) M.W.N. 229; 32 A. 633; 21 A.L.J. 89; 4 Lah. 376. See also 5 Ran. 53 (P.C.). No serious defect in the mode of conducting a criminal trial can be justified or cured by the consent of the Advocate for the accused but such consent is an element to be taken into account in considering the equally important question whether there has been any prejudice, 50 A. 437 at 462; see also 31 Bom. L.R. 925 at 928.

538. No attachment made under this Code shall be deemed unlawful, nor shall any person making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons conviction, writ of attachment or other proceedings relating thereto.

The word "distress" has been omitted and the word "attachment" has been substituted in its place. This section cures defects in the formal proceedings of Courts.

CHAPTER XLVI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

539. Affidavits and affirmations to be used before any High Court or Courts and persons before whom affidavits may be sworn.

any officer of such Court may be sworn and affirmed before such Court or the Clerk of the Crown, or any Commissioner or other person appointed by such Court for that purpose, or any Judge, or any Commissioner for taking affidavits in any Court of Record in British India, or any Commissioner to administer oaths in England or Ireland, or any Magistrate authorised to take affidavits or affirmations in Scotland.

In drawing up affidavits the practical advice of an eminent Judge should be borne in mind by practitioners. "Be most scrupulous in drawing up affidavits for your clients to swear to. I regret to say that the belief has prevailed that in many cases affidavits are drawn without careful instructions as to what the deponent may truthfully state, but rather to support some position beneficial to the cause the practitioner is appearing. You are in a measure the keeper of your client's conscience. Be most careful lest you bring upon yourself condemnation for the guilt of moral, if not legal, subornation of perjury." This becomes all the more important as affidavits are mostly drawn up in this country in English, a language not understood by the deponents in most cases and the affidavits have to be translated to them in the Vernacular.

This section deals with affidavits and affirmation to be used before the High Court or any officer of such Court. It requires that such affidavits should be sworn and affirmed before such Court or Clerk of the Crown or any Commissioner or other person appointed by such Court for that purpose or any Judge, etc. A Magistrate is a Judge within S. 19, I.P.C. read with S. 4 (2), supra, only when he is exercising jurisdiction in a case pending in which he is empowered to give a definitive judgment in the matter under dispute and not when he is only empowered to commit; where a Magistrate has not the seisin of the case and he could not pronounce any judgment in respect of that case, he is not a Judge within the meaning of the term in this section and a reference to S. 539A will show that a Magistrate may not come within the meaning of the term Judge, in this section. The Magistrate here is differentiated from the officers mentioned in this section and is not empowered to have an affidavit sworn before him, S. Pat. 110. An affidavit sworn before a Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta is not admissible for the purposes of moving the Patna High Court in revision, [1926] Pat. 73=27 Cr. L.J. 313 (2)=92 Ind. Cas. 697 (2). This section applies only to affidavits to be used in the High Court, for instance in support of applications for transfer under S. 526 (4), supra. The solitary provision in the Code for the use of an affidavit in any Court subordinate to the High Court is contained in S. 74, supra, as to proof of service of summons outside the jurisdiction of the Court issuing it. "The intention of the law is and it cannot be too often repeated, that an affidavit must contain nothing but bare facts known to the person who makes the affidavit, either personally or upon information from a source which he believes to be a correct source and one on which reliance can be placed. Further, as it is possible for human beings to make a mistake in reciting a fact, the law requires that the contents of affidavits should be carefully read over to the deponents in words understood by them and vouched by them to be correct"—per Knox, J., in 36 A. 13 at 16. A person seeking by an application in revision to get rid of a conviction standing against him, is, incapable of tendering his own affidavit in support of such application and cannot consequently be prosecuted for statements made in such an affidavit, 19 A. 200; 12 M. 451; 28 A. 331, but see 6 Lah. 34; 8 Lah. 46; 28 Cr. L.J. 168=99 Ind. Cas. 600, which takes a different view; see notes under the next section. The new section S. 539A now allows the accused to file his own affidavit in proof of conduct of public servant. In a later case in 29 Cr. L.J. 336 at 339=108 Ind. Cas. 124, the Allahabad High Court held that according to the practice of that Court an accused person can legally tender his own affidavit in support of an application for transfer under S. 526, supra, whether the affidavit is tendered and the application made in a subordinate or in the High Court and that the accused can be prosecuted for making false statements in such affidavit. The practice has now grown up in Madras of accepting affidavits of accused persons filed in support of transfer application although before the enactment of new S. 539A such affidavits were not accepted, see Weir 11. 691.

539A. (1) When any application is made to any Court in the course of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, and allegations are made therein respecting any public servant, the applicant may give evidence of the facts alleged in the application by affidavit, and the Court may, if it thinks fit, order that evidence relating to such facts be so given.

Affidavit in proof of conduct of public servant.

An affidavit to be used before any Court other than a High Court under this section may be sworn or affirmed in the manner prescribed in section 539, or before any Magistrate.

Affidavits under this section shall be confined to, and shall state separately, such facts as the deponent is able to prove from his own knowledge and such facts as he has reasonable grounds to believe to be true, and, in the latter case, the deponent shall clearly state the grounds of such belief.

(2) The Court may order any scandalous and irrelevant matter in an affidavit to be struck out or amended.

This section is newly added and provides for an affidavit in proof of the conduct of Public Servant and gives power to Court also to expunge scandalous or irrelevant matter in an affidavit, and also requires the personal attendance of the deponent of the affidavit for cross-examination before the Court. Sub-section (4) of S. 342, supra, says that no oath shall be administered to the accused which means only that an accused person cannot be examined on oath as a witness in the case in which he is an accused person see 3 Lah. 45. A person swearing to an affidavit under this section in support of an application for revision in the Court renders himself liable to a prosecution for any false statement contained in the affidavit. He cannot claim the privileges of an accused person and S. 439 supra, nowhere lays down that applications for revision shall be accompanied by affidavits and no affidavits are required under that section, 28 Cr. L.J. 168=99 Ind. Cas. 600. This section prescribes the manner in which an affidavit to be used before any Court other than a High Court can be sworn or affirmed. It may be sworn or affirmed in the manner prescribed by the preceding section or may be sworn before any Magistrate. Neither of these sections authorise the swearing of such an affidavit before the naizir of a subordinate Court and therefore the naizir had no authority to administer the oath and the deponent cannot be convicted of making any false statement on oath, 31 Bom. L.R. 144=30 Cr. L.J. 593=118 Ind. Cas. 248. The third para of sub-section (1) provides that affidavits shall state separately such facts as the deponent is able to prove from his own knowledge and such facts as he has reasonable grounds to believe to be true and in the latter case the deponent shall clearly state the grounds of such belief. Failure to state separately those facts will not absolve him from his liability to be convicted under S. 199 I.P.O., for making a false statement, 30 Cr. L.J. 645=116 Ind. Cas. 755 where 14 C. 633 is referred to.

539B. (1) Any Judge or Magistrate may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding, after due notice to the parties, visit and inspect any place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed, or any other place which it is in his opinion necessary to view for the purpose of properly appreciating the evidence given at such inquiry or trial, and shall without unnecessary delay record a memorandum of any relevant facts observed at such inspection.

(2) Such memorandum shall form part of the record of the case. If the Public Prosecutor, complainant or accused so desires, a copy of the memorandum shall be furnished to him free of cost :

Provided that, in the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, the Judge shall not act under this section unless such jury or assessors are also allowed a view under section 293.

Scope of the section.—Prior to 1923 there was no provision in the Code allowing a Magistrate to visit and inspect the scene of the commission of an offence, yet Magistrates did frequently make such visits and they were permitted to do so by a long series of decisions of the various High Courts laying down the procedure to be followed and the safeguards to be applied when making such visits. By the new amendment, the Legislature adopted the general effect of these decisions and incorporated it in the statutory law by enacting this section. The Magistrate should make his visit after due notice to the parties and should incorporate his observations in a memorandum to be placed on the record, 4 Ran. 106 at 109. It is not only not objectionable but in many cases highly desirable, that a Magistrate trying a criminal case should himself inspect the scene of occurrence, in order to understand fully the bearing of the evidence given in Court but if he does so he should be careful not to allow anyone on either side to say anything to him which might prejudice his mind one way or the other. The Magistrate should not go out of the way in making inquiries on the spot in order to satisfy himself how the facts stood without previous notice to the accused and in their absence. It is possible that the magistrate may be able to shake off the impression which that inquiry may have made in his mind, if it was unfavourable to the accused and confine himself during the trial to the evidence that may be recorded in Court but it is not likely that the accused would have the same confidence which he would have had, had no inquiry been made, 21 Cr. L.J. 166-54 Ind. Cas. 774. This section gives power to the Court to make local inspection for the purpose of properly appreciating the evidence given before it. This power rested previously on judicial decisions and on the implied power given in S. 556, infra, but there was no express provision. The object of the local inspection is to allow a Magistrate properly to appreciate the evidence given at the inquiry or trial and not for the Magistrate to become the principal witness in the case on a question of fact. It may be the Indian Evidence Act does not prohibit the use of facts observed by a Judge but it is clearly illegal for the Judge to become the principal witness in the case, to keep all knowledge of facts he has observed and noted to himself and keep it out of the knowledge of the accused. He ought to record a memo. of his local inspection immediately after his inspection and give the parties an opportunity of seeing what the facts are and give them an opportunity to rebut his opinion and failure to do these things clearly prejudices the accused, 10 Lah. 138 where 52 C. 138; 53 C. 46 and 37 C. 340, are referred to. A local inquiry by the Magistrate being permitted only for better appreciating the evidence in the case cannot take the place of evidence itself. Such local inspection should be held sparingly as the purpose is only to elucidate and better understand the evidence. The party against whom the result of the local inquiry is used is greatly prejudiced and is put to an irreparable disadvantage in not being able to remove the wrong impression from the mind of the Magistrate by cross-examining him, 47 A. 475, following 22 Cr. L.J. 424-61 Ind. Cas. 712. If a Magistrate receives by a local inspection impression in favour of one party or other, he should give an opportunity to the side against whom he forms an impression to explain it if possible, 54 M.L.J. 442-27 L.W. 654-1928 M.W.N. 69-29 Cr. L.J. 539-109 Ind. Cas. 363. Where a local inquiry was made not for the purpose of better understanding the evidence but for obtaining information which did not appear from the evidence of the witnesses, it was held that in a sense the Magistrate made himself a witness in the case and so went beyond the powers conferred on him by the Code and the trial was held bad, 29 Cr. L.J. 656=110 Ind. Cas. 112 followed in 30 Cr. L.J. 491=115 Ind. Cas. 556. Similarly where a Magistrate in making a local inspection for better appreciating the evidence himself measured up the plots and came to a certain definite conclusion it was held that he exceeded his jurisdiction as he created fresh evidence himself and introduced it into the case for the purpose of his decision even though he acted, bona fide, 30 Cr. L.J. 652=116 Ind. Cas. 767. It is the duty of the Court to make a memorandum of relevant facts observed at such inspection forthwith and make such memorandum form part of the record in the case and the parties are entitled to have a copy of the same on application. The amendment is in accordance with the decisions in, 37 C. 340; 15 C.W.N. xclx; 10 C.W.N. 181; 39 C. 476 and other cases. This is a mandatory provision, 52 C. 148. The rule which requires a memorandum to be made does not introduce any new principle, 53 C. 46 at 94. It is open to the Magistrate to use the evidence of his own eyes to test the truth of what the witnesses had deposed to, by making a local inspection and embodying the result of his inspection in the examination of witnesses called under S. 540, infra, 35 M.L.J. 279=18 L.W. 113. When in a local inspection a Magistrate merely interrogated a crowd of people without making any memorandum, held the absence of such a memorandum in a local inspection is an illegality vitiating the conviction and not mere irregularity curable under S. 537, 50 B. 680 following 52 C. 148 and dissenting 53 C. 46. See also 3 Ran. 139 followed in 27 Cr. L.J. 1231=98 Ind. Cas. 177; see also 31 Bom. L.R. 955. When notice was actually issued to the parties non-service will not by itself vitiate the matter, 28 Cr. L.J. 180=99 Ind. Cas. 852.

Sub-section (2).—The provisions of this sub-section are mandatory and a failure to comply with the express direction of law is an illegality and not an irregularity which can be cured and a note made by the trying Magistrate after inspection of the place should form part of the record of the case, 52 C. 148, but see 3 Ran. 139, followed in 27 Cr. L.J. 1231=98 Ind. Cas. 177, which took a different view and the decision in 52 C. 148 was distinguished in 53 C. 46, holding that the observations therein are too wide and that unless prejudice is shown the proceedings cannot be set aside as this section introduced no new principle, and there is no universal rule that disobedience of statutory provisions nullifies the proceedings.

540. Any Court may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, summon any person as a witness, or examine any person in attendance, though not summoned as a witness, or recall and re-examine any person already examined; and the Court shall summon and examine or recall and re-examine any such person if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case.

Scope of the section.—The first part of this section is an enabling provision whereby a Court in the exercise of its discretion is empowered at any time before it actually pronounces its judgment to take further evidence either for the prosecution or for the defence and for that purpose it may adjourn the hearing to procure the attendance of witnesses. Very often it happens that new light is thrown on the case by examining a defence witness and then it becomes desirable in the interests of the accused himself that fresh evidence should be called for. When such fresh evidence is likely to prove prejudicial to the accused it should proceed with the utmost circumspection and should not exercise its powers under this section merely because the prosecution desires to do so, 1 Ran. 303 at 311. The second part of the section is on the other hand imperative. If the new evidence appears to the Court essential to the just decision of the case and this must depend entirely on the particular circumstances of each case, the Court has no choice but is bound to take evidence, 1 Ran. 308 at 312. The provisions of this section are very wide. But wider the powers the greater the exercise of discretion required; and this section read along with S. 252, supra, was not intended that the Court should exercise its powers at the bidding of any person but that the powers are given to prevent any danger or mis-carriage of justice because some particular witness has not been called, 12 A.L.J. 15=14 Cr. L.J. 682=21 Ind. Cas. 1002, the Court is to exercise its judicial discretion and ought not to allow itself to be guided by any superior Court, 15 Cr. L.J. 375=23 Ind. Cas. 743. The power given to the Court to examine witnesses under this section is unrestricted, 2 C.W.N. 702 but it is not intended to empower the Court to fish for witnesses, 1892 P.R. (Cr. J.) 4. A Court is not bound to call a witness as a Court witness simply because the party wishing to examine him apprehends he will be hostile to him, 29 Cr. L.J. 499=107 Ind. Cas. 774. A Magistrate has no inherent and unlimited power to call witnesses at any time and for any purpose. Though he has a wide discretion under this section to call any witness at any time and for any purpose, still such discretion must be held to be exercised wrongly where he calls a witness as a Court witness at the instance and suggestion of the prosecution to enable the prosecution to cross-examine the witness with regard to a previous statement made by that witness, more especially after the prosecution had closed its case, 1929 M.W.N. 395. This section gives a Judge the fullest discretion to re-call a witness at any stage of a trial and make it imperative on him to do so if he considers further evidence is essential to the just decision of the case. To argue that he should not have carried out that duty when an essential document had been overlooked by the prosecution by having it admitted in evidence, as the result will be fatal to the accused, is to suggest what the words 'just decision' mean a decision in favour of the defence, 57 M.L.J. 681=1929 M.W.N. 901=30 L.W. 640 at 644. But the Court may examine witnesses under this section when those witnesses were summoned originally but not examined by the prosecution, 37 C.L.J. 173=24 Cr. L.J. 193=71 Ind. Cas. 657. A Judge in a criminal trial is not merely a disinterested auditor of the contest between the prosecution and the defence and it is part of his duty to elucidate a point which the prosecution or the defence may have left in obscurity either intentionally or unintentionally. It is the duty of the Judge to remove all such obscurity as far as possible. It is for him to come to a clear understanding, so far as is possible, of the actual events that occurred and he cannot shield himself behind the plea that any point was left obscure by the prosecution or the defence when he had an opportunity of illuminating that obscurity 18 Cr. L.J. 561=39 Ind. Cas. 801. See also the observation in 57 M.L.J. 681=1929 M.W.N. 901=30 L.W. 640, to the same effect as to his duty to bring on record an essential document overlooked by the prosecution.

This section empowers the Court to summon and examine a witness if the evidence appears to the Court essential to the right decision of the case. This section is not controlled by S. 342, supra, imposing the duty of questioning the accused generally after the examination of the prosecution witnesses and before the accused is called upon for his defence. Once the accused has been examined as required by S. 342, supra, it is nowhere laid down that the Court must examine the accused over again, if the Court examines a witness under this section, 25 Cr. L.J. 1418=89 Ind. Cas. 842. This section enables the Court or in certain circumstances imposes a duty on the Court to summon and examine any material witness not brought before the Court. This section is a very salutary provision calling pointed attention of the Court as to the existence of a most important duty cast on the Presiding Judge in arriving at a correct conclusion. It confers very wide powers upon a Court. But the wider the powers the greater the exercise of discretion required of a Magistrate, and if the Magistrate will, as he ought to read S. 252, supra, along with this section, he will find that by this section it is not intended that he should exercise this power at the bidding of any person 1929 M.W.N. 395; but the powers are given to prevent any miscarriage of justice just because some particular witness has not been called, 12 A.L.J. 15=14 Cr. L.J. 682=21 Ind. Cas. 1002; 37 C.L.J. 173; 27 C.W.N. 675=37 C.L.J. 415; 24 C. 167. See also 52 M.L.J. 118=25 L.W. 151=36 M.L.T. 39=28 Cr. L.J. 251=100 Ind. Cas. 123; 46 M.L.J. 326=19 L.W. 272=1924 M.W.N. 303=25 Cr. L.J. 354=77 Ind. Cas. 290, but this section will not enable a Court to examine the accused as a witness in an appeal which is only the continuation of the original case, 12 M. 451; Magistrates should always be chary of taking upon themselves the duties of deciding on behalf of the parties whether witnesses should be examined, 23 M.L.J. 134. The discretion given to the Magistrate has to be exercised with a great deal of caution 29 Cr. L.J. 740=110 Ind. Cas. 676. following 27 C.W.N. 675=37 C. L.J. 415=24 C.L.J. 957=75 Ind. Cas. 541.

At any stage of the inquiry.—This section gives power to the Court at any stage of the inquiry or trial to examine any witness it may find it to be necessary, to come to a proper conclusion in the matter under inquiry or trial, 8 M.L.T. 418; 57 M.L.J. 681=1929 M.W.N. 501=30 L.W. 640. Examination of certain persons as Court witnesses after the close of the prosecution and discharging the accused, relying on the evidence of the court witnesses is not illegal, Weir II, 714. The power can be exercised even after the close of the case for the prosecution, 46 M.L.J. 325=19 L.W. 272=1924 M.W.N. 303=23 Cr. L.J. 353=77 Ind. Cas. 290, but after the prosecution has closed and the accused had entered on his defence valid reasons are to be recorded for admitting evidence under this section, 10 A.L.J. 383=13 Cr. L.J. 772=17 Ind. Cas. 404, and the accused ought to be given an opportunity to rebut such evidence, 15 C.W.N. 414=12 Cr. L.J. 7=9 Ind. Cas. 46. The recording of evidence on behalf of the prosecution cannot be justified, after the close of the defence evidence; such an irregularity ought to be avoided, 22 Bom. L.R. 1224=22 Cr. L.J. 58=59 Ind. Cas. 202; see also [1927] 2 K.B. 587. This section will not empower a Judge to call and examine the witnesses summoned for the defence before the prosecution case is closed, 14 A. 242. Magistrates should exercise their discretion very cautiously and the power should not be exercised to the prejudice of the accused and when so exercised is liable to be set aside by the High Court, 52 M.L.J. 118=25 L.W. 151=28 Cr. L.J. 251=100 Ind. Cas. 123. Where a case is fully heard and judgment reserved to be pronounced on a certain date, it is improper to examine prosecution witnesses at that stage, 37 C.L.J. 173=24 Cr. L.J. 193=71 Ind. Cas. 657 followed in 29 Cr. L.J. 740=110 Ind. Cas. 676. A Magistrate is strictly within the rights of this section in taking fresh evidence even when a case is adjourned for judgment, 24 C. 167. For the case was still a pending case when fresh evidence was taken, but the practice of examining witnesses after the defence is closed to bolster up the prosecution, if such evidence was prejudicial to the accused is to be condemned, 15 C.W.N. 414 at 416=12 Cr. L.J. 7=9 Ind. Cas. 46; See also 22 Bom. L.R. 1224 at 1227=22 Cr. L.J. 58=59 Ind. Cas. 202.

Summon any person as a witness.—A witness whom the prosecution declines to examine and who is examined by the Court on its own initiative is a witness called by the Court within the meaning of this section 37 C.L.J. 173=24 Cr. L.J. 193=71 Ind. Cas. 657. Where the accused has already exhausted his right of summoning witnesses for the defence by filing his list in Court and if he requires further witnesses to be examined, the only course open to him is to move the Court to summon his additional witnesses as Court witnesses under this section, 36 A. 13.

Examine any person.—There is nothing in law or principle which prevents a person who was charged with an offence but discharged by the Magistrate being examined as a witness under this section, 7 W.R. (Cr) 44, but not an accused or an appellant. The words 'any person' cannot include an accused person who cannot be examined as a witness even at the appeal stage, 12 M. 451, see also 7 Lah. 148. This section merely provides that a Magistrate may summon any witness whose evidence appears to be necessary. It does not specify the manner in which he may acquire his knowledge of the need for the evidence of such a witness. There are in fact many ways in which a Magistrate may come by such knowledge, the most common being through the evidence of other witnesses in the case. There are certain ways in which the Magistrate may acquire such knowledge without himself going out into the high ways and byways and searching for further evidence, and the power to summon witnesses does not by any means imply a power to discover such witness by personal inquiry out of Court. One of the basic principles of British Judicial system is that a cause should be determined on evidence given on oath in Court and in the presence of the parties. If a Magistrate makes personal inquiries out of Court it is practically impossible for him to complete the trial of the case adhering to the above principle. He would necessarily be influenced by what he had seen and heard and in assessing the value of the evidence of the witnesses examined he would be guided by his own recollection and if their evidence should differ from his recollection he would be impelled to reject it not on the intrinsic merits of the evidence but on his own knowledge, 4 Ran. 106 at 108-109. For the just decision of the case, Courts generally examine medical witnesses when the accused sets up the plea of insanity or where there is no evidence on record as to the nature of the injuries which form the subject-matter of the offence under trial, 5 C.W.N. 98. Where a Magistrate examined certain witnesses under this section and relying on their evidence discredited the prosecution witnesses and discharged the accused, his procedure was held to be legal, Weir II, 714. When a Judge after making a local inspection, in the presence of the parties recalled some of the prosecution witnesses and examined them in such a way as to put on record the important points observed by him at the inspection, and the accused were also allowed to cross-examine the witnesses, it was held that the procedure adopted was legal 43 M.L.J. 279-18 L.W. 113. If the witness is called by the Court under the section and examined both the prosecutor and the accused have a right to cross-examine him freely, 47 A. 147; 5 C. 614; 24 C. 288; 29 C. 387; when a witness is called under this section and examined by the Court, his cross-examination by the parties cannot legally be restricted to the points on which he has been examined by the Court, 35 C. 243; 47 A. 147. Failure to allow the accused an opportunity to rebut the evidence so adduced and to hear further arguments on such further evidence cannot be cured by S. 537, supra, 4 Lah. 376; 26 Cr. L.J. 1035=87 Ind. Cas. 923.

Evidence essential for the just decision of the case.—A Judge in a criminal trial is entitled to call a witness not called by either the prosecution or the defence, without the consent of either side if in his opinion that course is necessary in the interests of justice but in order that injustice should not be done to an accused person, a Judge should not call a witness after the case for the defence is closed except in a case where a matter arises ex improviso which no human ingenuity can foresee on the part of the prisoner (1927), 2 K.B. 587; see also 22 Bom. L.R. 1224=22 Cr. L.J. 58=59 Ind. Cas. 202. When an essential document was overlooked by the prosecution it is the Judge's duty to have it admitted in evidence. To say that he should not have carried out that duty as the result was fatal to the accused is to suggest that the words 'just decision' mean a decision in favour of the accused and such a construction is unwarranted, 87 M.L.J. 681 at 683=30 L.W. 642 at 644.

540A. (1) At any stage of an inquiry or trial under this Code, where two or more accused are before the Court, if the Judge or Magistrate is satisfied, for reasons to be recorded, that any one or more of such accused is or are incapable of remaining before the Court, he may, if such accused is represented by a pleader, dispense with his attendance and proceed with such inquiry or trial in his absence, and may, at any subsequent stage of the proceedings, direct personal attendance of such accused.

Provision for inquiries and trial being held in the absence of accused in certain cases

(2) If the accused in any such case is not represented by a pleader, or if the Judge or Magistrate considers his personal attendance necessary, he may, if he thinks fit, and for reasons to be recorded by him, either adjourn such inquiry or trial, or order that the case of such accused be taken up or tried separately.

This section has been newly added and provides for inquiries and trials being held when one or more of the accused become incapable of remaining at the bar. Where accused is represented by a pleader under sub-section (1) his personal attendance being dispensed with there is no difficulty. In case where the accused is not represented or whose personal attendance is thought necessary, the Court may adjourn the trial of all the accused or order the trial of the particular accused to be tried separately.

Sub-section (2).—The amendment is intended to meet a practical difficulty. This sub-section which is new deals with the case of an accused person who is unrepresented and whose personal attendance is necessary. In such a case the Court is empowered either to adjourn the trial or order the accused to be tried separately.

[Proposed new section by way of amendment of the Code introduced in the Legislative Assembly on September 9th 1929 as a very emergent measure and popularly called "the Hunger strike Bill," and directed to be circulated ultimately runs as follows:—

"540 B. (1). At any stage of an inquiry or trial under this Code, if the Judge or the Magistrate is satisfied for reasons to be recorded, that any accused in consequence of a single act or a series of acts or a course of conduct pursued by him after his arrest has voluntarily rendered himself incapable of remaining before the Court, such Judge or Magistrate, may, whether such accused is represented by a pleader or not, dispense with his attendance and proceed with the inquiry or trial in his absence. (2) In any such inquiry or trial, where a plea is required in answer to a charge from an absent accused whose attendance has been dispensed with under sub-section (1), such accused shall be deemed not to 'plead guilty'; (3) notwithstanding anything contained in this Code no finding, sentence or order passed in such inquiry or trial shall be held to be illegal by any Court by reason of any commission or irregularity whatsoever, arising from the absence of any or all the accused whose attendance has been dispensed with under sub-section (1). (4) No order under sub-section (1) dispensing with the attendance of an accused shall affect his right to attend or to be represented by a pleader at any subsequent stage of the proceedings. (5) Where an inquiry or trial has begun before the commencement of this Act, S. 540B of the said Code, as hereby enacted, shall have effect, provided that where the accused's incapacity of remaining before the Court arises from a series of acts or course of conduct begun before the commencement of this Act, the said section shall have effect only where such series of acts or course of conduct is continued after the commencement of this Act."

The statement of objects and reasons for this Bill runs thus: "The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, contains no provision by which an inquiry or trial can continue in the absence of an accused person, if he is not represented by Counsel. The High Court of Judicature, Lahore, has recently held that there was no provision in the law by which Counsel could be appointed to represent an accused person without the latter's consent. It is therefore possible for an accused person to bring the administration of justice to a stand still by a voluntary act by which he renders himself incapable of attending Court. The provisions of the Bill are intended to prevent delay and the defeat of justice by empowering Judges or Magistrates to proceed with the inquiry or trial in the absence of the accused even if he is not represented by Counsel, if the Judge or Magistrate is satisfied that his incapacity to attend the Court was due to a voluntary act done or to a course of conduct pursued by him after arrest."]

541. (1) Unless when otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, the Local Government may direct in what place any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code shall be confined.

Power to appoint place of imprisonment.

Removal to criminal jail of accused or convicted persons who are in confinement in civil jail, and their return to the civil jail.

(2) If any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code is in confinement in a civil jail, the Court or Magistrate ordering the imprisonment or committal may direct that the person be removed to a criminal jail.

(3) When a person is removed to a criminal jail under sub-section (2),* he shall, on being released therefrom, be sent back to the civil jail, unless either—

* amended by Act VII of 1924.

(a) three years have elapsed since he was removed to the criminal jail, in which case he shall be deemed to have been discharged from the civil jail under section 342 of the Code of Civil Procedure; or

(b) the Court which ordered his imprisonment in the civil jail has certified to the officer in-charge of the criminal jail that he is entitled to be discharged under section 341 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

There is no provision of law empowering a Sessions Judge to decide the imprisonment passed on an accused person between different jails and such a power belongs to the Local Government, Ratanlal 827; the words 'prison' and 'jail' will not include a 'police lock-up' unless there is a notification by Local Government declaring a 'police lock-up' as a place of confinement, 15 Cr. L.J. 10=22 Ind. Cas. 154.

See Ss. 57 and 58 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. The term of imprisonment in execution of a decree of a Civil Court is limited to six months, and in some cases to six weeks.

542. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Prisoner's Testimony Act, 1869, any Presidency Magistrate desirous of examining as a witness or an accused person, in any case pending before him, any person confined in any jail, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, may issue an order to the officer in-charge of the said jail requiring him to bring such prisoner in proper custody, at a time to be therein named, to the Magistrate for examination.

Power of Presidency Magistrate to order prisoner in jail to be brought up for examination.

(2) The officer so in charge, on receipt of such order, shall act in accordance therewith, and shall provide for the safe custody of the prisoner during his absence from the jail for the purpose aforesaid.

The Prisoner's Testimony Act now in force is Act, III of 1900. See in this connection sections 34 to 43 of the Act, provisions for requiring the attendance of prisoners and obtaining their evidence. S. 39 of Act III of 1900 lays down the procedure to be adopted. The application for removal of the prisoner to give evidence is to be made to the High Court and the High Court is to give the necessary direction, if it thinks fit. So practically this section is repealed by enacting the above S. 39 in the Prisoners Act, S. 44 of that Act deals with commissions to examine prisoners, see also Ss. 45 and 46 of the said Act.

543. When the services of an interpreter are required by any Criminal Court for the interpretation of any evidence or statement, he shall be bound to state the true interpretation of such evidence or statement.

Interpreter to be bound to interpret truthfully.

A deposition taken without administering an oath to the interpreter will not make it inadmissible in evidence, the prosecution will have to prove that the interpretation was made accurately, 26 C. 808. See S. 361, supra, which provides for interpretation of evidence to an accused or his pleader. When an interpreter is employed, the language in which the statement of the accused is interpreted is the language in which it is to be recorded, notwithstanding the provisions of S. 361, supra, 5 C. 826; 21 C. 642.

544. Subject to any rules made by the Local Government, any Criminal Court may, if it thinks fit, order payment, on the part of Government, of the reasonable expenses of any complainant or witness attending for the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding before such Court under this Code.

The words "with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council" have now been omitted by the Devolution Act, XXXVII of 1920.

This section is subject to the rules framed by the Local Government, 25 Cr. L.J. 912= 81 Ind. Cas. 413 and provides that when the Local Government makes rules on the subject, a Criminal Court may, if it thinks fit order payment, on the part of Government, all reasonable expenses of any complainant or witness attending for the purpose of any inquiry, trial, or other proceedings before such Court under the Code. This clearly means that the general rule is that in a private prosecution, the complainant must pay the reasonable expenses of the witnesses, although it is open to make rules which would permit, in certain cases, the liability to be transferred to the Crown, 3 Luck. 363 at 363.

If it thinks fit.—These words were added in the Code of 1898. The discretion must be exercised according to sound judicial principles and reason, 9 Bom. L.R. 353=5 Cr. L.J. 329. It is not legal to call upon the accused to pay the expenses of a witness who was recalled for examination under the provisions of S. 350, supra, 15 Cr. L.J. 687=26 Ind. Cas. 135.

545. (1) Whenever under any law in force for the time being a Criminal Court imposes a fine or confirms in appeal, revision or otherwise a sentence of fine, or a sentence of which fine forms a part, the Court may, when passing judgment, order the whole or any part of the fine recovered to be applied—

- (a) in defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution ;
- (b) in the payment to any person of compensation for any loss or injury caused by the offence, when substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by such person in a Civil Court ;
- (c) when any person is convicted of any offence which includes theft, criminal misappropriation, criminal breach of trust, or cheating, or of having dishonestly received or retained, or of having voluntarily assisted in disposing of, stolen property knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen, in compensating any bona fide purchaser of such property for the loss of the same if such property is restored to the possession of the person entitled thereto.

(2) If the fine is imposed in a case which is subject to appeal, no such payment shall be made before the period allowed for presenting the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal be presented, before the decision of the appeal.

Amendment.—The italicised words in sub-sections (1) (b) and (c) are new. The rulings in 6 M. 286; 6 M.L.T. 231; 46 B. 893; Weir II, 715 and 717 are no longer law.

Scope of the section.—This section is applicable where there is a conviction of the accused and fine forms a part of the sentence. A Magistrate cannot without imposing a fine, order payment of compensation to the complainant by the accused, 22 B. 717; 3 O.L.R. 404; 23 Cr. L.J. 1116=81 Ind. Cas. 940. Where a Court orders that out of the fine, if recovered a certain amount be paid as compensation, it does not mean that the amount should be paid only if the full amount of fine were recovered and nothing was payable till the recovery of the full amount, 2 L.W. 22=6 Cr. L. Rev. 440=16 Cr. L.J. 58=26 Ind. Cas. 650. Where the accused is discharged, and no fine is imposed this section cannot apply, 22 B. 717. Nor can this section apply to a case under B. 107, supra, as no fine could be imposed in such a case. An order directing the accused to pay the costs of the complainant in such a case is illegal, 23 Cr. L.J. 476=77 Ind. Cas. 828. It deals only with the expenses properly incurred in the prosecution and for compensation for the injury caused by the offence when substantial compensation is recoverable in a Civil Court; compensation for loss caused to the complainant on account of his inability to attend to his work, his time being fully taken up in the prosecution of the accused cannot be granted, 22 B. 438. The injury must be the direct result of the offence and compensation can be ordered only out of the fine recovered and it is not competent to the Magistrate to award compensation in addition to the fine imposed on the accused, 5 Bom. L.R. 976; 24 M. 305. See also 5 Bom. L.R. 126. An order for compensation to the nearest heirs without specifying who those heirs may be is bad, 1913 P.R. (Cr. J.) 18=14 Cr. L.J. 522=20 Ind. Cas. 1002; see also 1898 P.R. (Cr.J.) 17 (F.B.) The fine should be calculated according to the nature of the offence and means of the accused and not according to the expenses which the complainant might have incurred. There is no provision of law which empowers a Court to order payment of money as indemnity in a case of theft, 26 Cr. L.J. 1395=50 Ind. Cas. 151.

Court confirms in appeal, revision or otherwise, a sentence of fine.—There must be an imposition of a sentence of fine by the first Court. An appellate Court or the High Court imposing a sentence of fine in lieu of a term of imprisonment is not competent to award compensation under this section; fine must form part of the sentence originally imposed on the accused when passing judgment or order for offences specified herein and cannot be made after judgment had been pronounced and fine credited to Government, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 53. The High Court when hearing a reference made by the District Magistrate under B. 438, supra, recommending a retrial of an accused convicted under the rules framed under the Motor Vehicles Act for an offence under the I.P.C., has power while holding that the accused was substantially punished for his act to award compensation to be given to the complainant out of the fine imposed on the accused when such order had not been passed by the trial Court, 28 Cr. L.J. 757=103 Ind. Cas. 837.

In defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution.—This section does not apply to such expenses as are incurred in bringing the person of the offender before the Magistrate, Ratanlal 603. Where N was convicted of the offence of accepting an illegal gratification as a public servant and sentenced to imprisonment and a fine and the Magistrate directed that out of the fine if paid Rs. 95, the amount of the bribe paid be given as compensation for the trouble and expenses of the prosecution. It was held that the order was illegal, Ratanlal 873. All legitimate expenses such as medical officer's fee can be awarded, 24 M. 305; 4 Bom. L.R. 877. Provisions of Civil Procedure Code as to costs cannot be imported ordinarily, 23 C.W.N. 661=23 Cr. L.J. 438=57 Ind. Cas. 730.

For injury caused by the offence.—Compensation paid for injury caused is different from what is paid to defray the expenses of the prosecution. Compensation can be awarded only to the person actually injured by the offence. It was held that it cannot be given to the heirs of persons who have been killed, 10 W.R. (Cr.) 39 or to the widow of the deceased when death is caused by rash and negligent act, 12 M. 352 followed in Ratanlal 763; 21 M. 74; 7 B.H.C.R. 73. But in 36 C. 302 a different view was taken and it was held that this section provided for compensation in case when it is recoverable under Act, XIII of 1855 by the persons therein indicated, viz., wife, husband, parent and child, if any, of the deceased. The new amendment in cl. (1) (b) that compensation may be paid to any person by whom it will be recoverable in a Civil Court adopts the view taken in, 36 C. 302 and the view of Benson, J., the referring Judge, in 21 M. 74 (F.B.). The decisions in 21 M. 74 (F.B.) and 6 Cr. L. Rev. 148 which followed it, are no longer law.

Sub-section (1) (b).—Compensation cannot be ordered to be awarded to a Municipal Council out of the fine recovered from an accused who was convicted under S. 183, I.P.C., for disobeying the Plague Rules framed by Local Government in having brought a patient suffering from plague into a town without informing the authorities about it, on account of the expenditure incurred in disinfecting the house where the patient was brought by the accused, assuming that the offence caused injury by polluting the house, and the Municipality could by civil suit have recovered from the accused the cost of disinfecting the house, Ratanlal 959. In a prosecution instituted without a complaint on the report of an official of illegally receiving money from certain persons and the accused is convicted and fined three times the amount of the illegal receipts, the order to pay the whole of such amount of fine to the person from whom money was illegally taken was held bad as the payment by way of compensation of an amount considerably in excess of the amount which could be awarded under this sub-section to a person who did not incur any expense in connection with the prosecution and did not suffer any loss beyond the loss of the sum they had paid to the accused, 10 Cr. L.J. 78—2 Ind. Cas. 552.

Sub-section (1) (c).—This sub-section is new and makes provision for the payment of compensation to the innocent purchaser of stolen property when the property is restored to the owner. The following decisions are therefore no longer law, 6 M. 286; Weir II. 715, 717; 6 M.L.T. 241—10 Cr. L.J. 290—3 Ind. Cas. 437; 46 B. 893; 3 Bom. L.R. 449. Neither this section nor S. 519, supra, applies to the case of an innocent mortgagee who has advanced money on stolen property, 46 B. 893.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section is specially enacted as there is no provision in the Code for a refund of the money paid as compensation under this section. The only remedy open to the person who paid the money and who is entitled to a refund of the same was by a civil suit. The Madras High Court in Weir II, 717 held that when the order for compensation was reversed in revision and the money having been paid over to the complainant before the result of the revision application, if the complainant refuses to refund the amount, the only remedy open to the person who paid the money was to institute a civil suit to recover the amount; in 19 A. 112, it was held that when the High Court in revision set aside a sentence of fine, compensation paid out of it to the complainant under this section may be recovered under S. 547, infra. Refund under such circumstances may be considered to be an incidental or consequential order coming under S. 423 (1) (d), supra. Where a person is dealt with under S. 562, infra, and no fine is imposed upon him, the Court has no power to direct him to pay compensation, 23 Cr. L.J. 1116 (1)—81 Ind. Cas. 840 (1).

Notice to complainant.—There is no express provision of law in case of an order under this section or S. 250, supra, with regard to notice upon the opposite party. When compensation is granted to a complainant under this section it would be the exercise of proper discretion by the appellate Court if notice is given to the complainant of the hearing of the appeal. It is a fundamental principle of law that no order should be passed to the detriment or prejudice of a party without giving him an opportunity of being heard and it is the settled practice of the Calcutta High Court that where compensation has been awarded to the complainant to serve notice upon him as well in issuing a Rule, 53 C. 969. The Madras High Court also follows this practice and gives notice to the complainant. Where in a case in which compensation to the complainant was ordered to be paid out of the fine realised from the accused and at the time of admission of the appeal no notice was issued to the complainant leave was granted to him to appear on his application to support the judgment of the lower Court under which he was awarded compensation. Cr. M.P. No. 655 of 1929 (M.H.C.).

546. At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under section 545.

Payments to be taken into account in subsequent suit.

Shall take into account.—This section enacts a direction to the Civil Court which has to assess damages in the civil suit. The expression means that the Civil Court may take into consideration the compensation awarded by the Magistrate and not that the compensation awarded shall be deducted from the damages to be awarded, 22 W.R. (Civ.) 336.

546A. (1) Whenever any complaint of a non-cognizable offence is made to a Court, the Court, if it convicts the accused, may, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him order him to pay to the complainant—

Order of payment of certain fees paid by complainant in non-cognizable cases.

(a) the fee (if any) paid on the petition of complaint, or for the examination of the complainant, and

(b) any fees paid by the complainant for serving processes on his witnesses or on the accused, and may further order that, in default of payment, the accused shall suffer simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding thirty days.

(2) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court, or by the High Court, when exercising its powers of revision.

Scope of the section.—This section is new and provides for the payment of certain fees, such as stamp-fee on petition of complaint, process-fee, etc., paid by the complainant in non-cognizable cases to be recovered from the convicted person in addition to the penalty imposed upon him by the Court. It merely provides for the refund of process-fees, in non-cognizable cases, when paid, but does not authorise their payment, 27 Cr. L.J. 419-93 Ind. Cas. 78. Costs cannot be awarded when the offence is not a non-cognizable one, 25 Cr. L.J. 1161 (1)-81 Ind. Cas. 985 (1).

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section empowers the High Court in revision to make the necessary order for payment to complainant when by an oversight the first Court failed to pass such order.

547. Any money (other than a fine) payable by virtue of any order made under this Code, and the method of recovery of which is not otherwise expressly provided for shall be recovered as if it were a fine.

Moneys ordered to be paid recoverable as fines.

Amendment.—The words "not otherwise expressly provided for" were added as the Code already contains various provisions for the recovery of, costs, S. 148 (3); compensation, S. 250 (2); maintenance, S. 435 (3), etc., as if they were fines.

Scope of the section.—This section provides that any money (other than a fine) payable by virtue of any order under this Code, the method of recovery of which is not specifically provided for, shall be recovered as if it were a fine. The section therefore confers authority to realise compensation paid to an accused person under S. 250, supra, when such order is set aside by the appellate Court or a Court of revision, 1904 P.L.R. (Cr.J.) 2 p. 5, following 1885 P.R. (Cr.J.) 12 and 19 A. 112.

There is no express provision in the Code for refund of any money once paid over to any person by a criminal Court. The word payable occurring in this section is construed as also including re-payable, 19 A. 112; 25 A. 315; 28 C. 258. This section is applicable only to money and not to goods, 23 Cr. L.J. 157=65 Ind. Cas. 621.

548. If any person affected by a judgment or order passed by a Criminal Court desires to have a copy of the Judge's charge to the jury or of any order or deposition or other part of the record, he shall, on applying for such copy, be furnished therewith :

Copies of proceedings.

Provided that he pays for the same, unless the Court, for some special reason, thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Any person affected—Every one making a complaint of an offence by which he has been injured is affected by the disposal of his complaint whether the case has been sent up by a police-officer or not. Such a person is entitled to ask for a copy of the Magistrate's order of a discharge, Ratanlal 305. Every prosecutor whose charge has been dismissed is a person affected, 8 C. 166. An Advocate against whom remarks have been made imputing to him misconduct is entitled to have a copy of the judgment containing such remarks, 6 Bom. L.R. 540. A prisoner is entitled to have copies of all documents which he thinks necessary for his defence and the Court is not entitled to refuse such copies, 4 M.H.C.R. (Appx.) 57; 14 W.R. (Cr.) 77.

Judge's charge to the jury.—See S. 371, supra, as to heads of charge to the Jury.

Other part of the record.—e.g. Statements under S. 161 supra, police charge sheet under S. 179, supra, reports under Ss. 157, 167, 168, and 174, supra.

Revision—The High Court is entitled to revise the order of a Magistrate refusing to grant copies, 8 C. 166.

549. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules, consistent with this Code and the Army Act and * the Air Force Act and any similar law for the time being in force, as to the cases in which persons subject to military or air force * law shall be tried by a Court to which this Code applies, or by Court-martial, and when any person is brought before a Magistrate and charged with an offence for which he is liable, under the Army Act, section 41 or under the Air Force Act, Section 41 * to be tried by a Court-martial, such Magistrate shall have regard to such rules, and shall in proper cases deliver him, together with a statement of the offence of which he is accused, to the commanding officer of the regiment, corps or detachment to which he belongs, or to the commanding officer of the nearest military station or * air force station, as the case may be, for the purpose of being tried by Court-martial.

Delivery to military authorities of persons liable to be tried by Court-martial to the complainant leave was granted to him to appear on his application to support the judgment of the lower Court under which he was awarded compensation. Cr. M.P. No. 655 of 1929 (M.H.O.).

546. At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under section 545.

Payments to be taken into account in subsequent suit.

Shall take into account.—This section enacts a direction to the Civil Court which has to assess damages in the civil suit. The expression means that the Civil Court may take into consideration the compensation awarded by the Magistrate and not that the compensation awarded shall be deducted from the damages to be awarded, 22 W.R. (Civ.) 336.

546A. (1) Whenever any complaint of a non-cognizable offence is made to a Court, the Court, if it convicts the accused, may, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him order him to pay to the complainant—

Order of payment of certain fees paid by complainant in non-cognizable cases.

(a) the fee (if any) paid on the petition of complaint, or for the examination of the complainant, and

(b) any fees paid by the complainant for serving processes on his witnesses or on the accused,

and may further order that, in default of payment, the accused shall suffer simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding thirty days.

(2) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court, or by the High Court, when exercising its powers of revision.

Scope of the section.—This section is new and provides for the payment of certain fees, such as stamp-fee on petition of complaint, process-fee, etc., paid by the complainant in non-cognizable cases to be recovered from the convicted person in addition to the penalty imposed upon him by the Court. It merely provides for the refund of process-fee, in non-cognizable cases, when paid, but does not authorise their payment, 27 Cr. L.J. 415=93 Ind. Cas. 79. Costs cannot be awarded when the offence is not a non-cognizable one, 25 Cr. L.J. 1161 (1)=51 Ind. Cas. 283 (1).

Sub-section (2)—This sub-section empowers the High Court in revision to make the necessary order for payment to complainant when by an oversight the first Court failed to pass such order.

547. Any money (other than a fine) payable by virtue of any order made under this Code, and the method of recovery of which is not otherwise expressly provided for shall be recovered as if it were a fine.

Moneys ordered to be paid recoverable as fines.

Amendment.—The words "not otherwise expressly provided for" were added as the Code already contains various provisions for the recovery, of, costs, S. 148 (3); compensation, S. 250 (2); maintenance, S. 453 (3), etc., as if they were fines.

Scope of the section.—This section provides that any money (other than a fine) payable by virtue of any order under this Code, the method of recovery of which is not specifically provided for, shall be recovered as if it were a fine. The section therefore confers authority to realise compensation paid to an accused person under S. 250, supra, when such order is set aside by the appellate Court or a Court of revision, 1904 P.L.R. (Cr.J.) 2 p. 5, following 1885 P.R. (Cr.J.) 12 and 19 A. 112.

There is no express provision in the Code for refund of any money once paid over to any person by a criminal Court. The word payable occurring in this section is construed as also including re-payable, 19 A. 112; 25 A. 315; 28 C. 258. This section is applicable only to money and not to goods, 23 Cr. L.J. 157—65 Ind. Cas. 621.

548. If any person affected by a judgment or order passed by a Criminal Court desires to have a copy of the Judge's charge to the jury or of any order or deposition or other part of the record, he shall, on applying for such copy, be furnished therewith:

Copies of proceedings.

Provided that he pays for the same, unless the Court, for some special reason, thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Any person affected—Every one making a complaint of an offence by which he has been injured is affected by the disposal of his complaint whether the case has been sent up by a police-officer or not. Such a person is entitled to ask for a copy of the Magistrate's order of a discharge, Ratanlal 305. Every prosecutor whose charge has been dismissed is a person affected, 8 C. 166. An Advocate against whom remarks have been made imputing to him misconduct is entitled to have a copy of the judgment containing such remarks, 6 Bom. L.R. 540. A prisoner is entitled to have copies of all documents which he thinks necessary for his defence and the Court is not entitled to refuse such copies, 4 M.H.C.R. (Appx.) 57; 14 W.R. (Cr.) 77.

Judge's charge to the jury.—See S. 371, supra, as to heads of charge to the Jury.

Other part of the record.—e.g. Statements under S. 161 supra, police charge sheet under S. 179, supra, reports under Ss. 157, 167, 168, and 174, supra.

Revision—The High Court is entitled to revise the order of a Magistrate refusing to grant copies, 8 C. 166.

549. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules, consistent with this Code and the Army Act and * the Air Force Act and any similar law for the time being in force, as to the cases in which persons subject to military or air force * law shall be tried by a Court to which this Code applies, or by Court-martial, and when any person is brought before a Magistrate and charged with an offence for which he is liable, under the Army Act, section 41 or under the Air Force Act, Section 41 * to be tried by a Court-martial, such Magistrate shall have regard to such rules, and shall in proper cases deliver him, together with a statement of the offence of which he is accused, to the commanding officer of the regiment, corps or detachment to which he belongs, or to the commanding officer of the nearest military station or * air force station, as the case may be, for the purpose of being tried by Court-martial.

* Added by Act X of 1927.

(2) Every Magistrate shall, on receiving a written application for that purpose by the commanding officer of any body of troops stationed or employed at any such place, use his utmost endeavours to apprehend and secure any person accused of such offence.

Apprehension of such persons.
Scope of the section.—This section is based on the old Bengal Regulation, XX of 1825, under which the military authorities would require a Magistrate to hand over any prisoner who may be apprehended and brought before him for an offence committed at any place more than 120 miles from the Presidency Town, but the proceedings before the Magistrate, when taken at the request of, and assented to by the military authorities are not absolutely void, and a commitment so made is not invalid, 22 W.R. (Cr.) 20; 5 C. 125.

Army Act.—See 44 and 45 Vict., C. 58.

Rule 129. Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. says that the provisions of the section should be complied with unless (1) the Magistrate is of opinion for reasons to be recorded that he should proceed without the person accused being removed or unless the Magistrate is moved by the military authorities (2) Before proceeding under rule (1) the Magistrate is to give notice to the Commanding Officer and to the accused and until the expiry of fifteen days from date of service of notice, he shall not acquit or convict the accused under Ss. 243, 245, 247 or 248, Cr. P.C., or hear him on his defence under S. 244 or frame a charge in writing under S. 254 or make an order committing him to the High Court or Court of Session under S. 213 or S. 214 or issue orders for his trial by Jury. The Magistrate should stay proceedings on notice by the Commanding Officer and deliver the accused to the military authorities and when the accused after delivery is not tried by the Court-martial, the Magistrate shall report the fact to the Local Government in Madras and Bombay and in other cases through the Local Government to the Governor-General in Council. Not. No. 817, dated 23rd May, 1902, Gazette of India, Pt. I, p. 383.

See the new Rules published in the Gazette of India dated 30th June 28 Notification, No. F. 465 of 1928 (Home Depart.).

550. Any police-officer may seize any property which may be alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or which may be found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence. Such police-officer, if subordinate to the officer in charge of a police-station, shall forthwith report the seizure to that officer.

Powers to police to seize property suspected to be stolen.
 This section expressly empowers police-officers to seize properties which they may suspect to have been stolen or which they find under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of an offence. S. 523, supra describes the procedure to be followed with reference to such property when seized. See also Ss. 51 and 54 (1), cl. (iv) supra, but without seizing, a police officer cannot issue an order to detain certain logs suspected to be stolen property lying in a truck at the Railway Station yard, to the Station Master, 15 Cr. L.J. 177=22 Ind. Cas. 753. This section gives very wide powers of seizure of property, say cattle, suspected to have been stolen, but it does not extend to the taking away other cattle, simply because they are mixed up with the suspected stolen cattle, See 11 Cr. L.J. 93=4 Ind. Cas. 980.

551. Police-officers superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise the same powers throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his station.

Powers of superior officers of police

Where a superior-Officer, vis., the District Superintendent of Police, reported at a Police Station that a police-officer and another constable had prepared false records, wrongfully confined certain persons and caused hurt to them to extort a confession, it was held that although he had power to investigate the case under S. 156, supra, by virtue of this section still it was rather startling that the complainant himself should have made investigation under S. 157, 25 M.L.T. 379; 45 M.L.J. 279=18 L.W. 113=1923 M.W.N. 860=25 Cr. L.J. 7=75 Ind. Cas. 695. Order for dispersing of an unlawful assembly by a Deputy Commissioner of Police is lawful, 7 B. 42.

Officer in charge of Police-Station.—For definition of the expression See S. 4 (p) supra.

552. Upon complaint made to a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate on oath of the abduction or unlawful detention of woman, or of a female child under the age of *sixteen years, for any unlawful purpose, he may make an order for the immediate restoration of such woman to her liberty, or of such female child to her husband, parent, guardian or other person having the lawful charge of such child and may compel compliance with such order, using such force as may be necessary.

Power to compel
restoration of abducted
females

Scope of the section.—This section applies to women and female children only who are alleged on oath to have been abducted or unlawfully detained for any unlawful purpose. The section is not intended for the protection of children only or children generally, but of women and female children only. This combination and exclusion of male children go to show not only that some definite purpose unlawful in itself was contemplated but that the purpose has some reference to the sex of the person against whom it was entertained. Therefore it should not be so construed as to make it include purposes which though not unlawful in themselves might only become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian, say for the purpose of being brought up in a religion which such parent or guardian disapproves, 16 C. 487; 4 Bom. L.R. 609; 9 C.W.N. 1030. This section confers on Magistrates specified herein, vis., a Presidency Magistrate or a District Magistrate and not on other Magistrates specific powers to pass certain orders of a very special nature and directs that these powers shall not be exercised except on a complaint made on oath, for the exercise of the power to administer oath being already possessed by the Magistrate is made compulsory as a condition precedent to the exercise of the special power 17 Cr. L.J. 491=36 Ind. Cas. 171. The purpose contemplated by this section must in itself be unlawful, 4 Bom. L.R. 609, e.g., detention for the purpose of forcing a woman or a girl under sixteen years, even with her consent, the girl's consent being immaterial for sexual intercourse, would certainly be unlawful. There must be an express finding by the Magistrate that the woman is unlawfully detained before passing an order under the section. If a woman resides with the relations who are aiding her in her endeavour to procure a divorce from her husband such a detention cannot be held to be an unlawful detention. Weir II, 724.

—Make an order for immediate restoration.—For making an order for restoration the Magistrate must find that she was unlawfully detained by some one and direct that person to restore her to liberty. When he is unable to find who the person is that is detaining the woman and what his purpose is, the only proper order to issue is to have the woman brought up before the Court and have her examined.

Female child under sixteen years.—By Act XVIII of 1924, S. 5 the word "sixteen" was substituted for the original word "fifteen." A girl of sixteen years has a right to choose her own residence and, living away from her mother with a missionary lady cannot be said to be an unlawful detention by the missionary lady, 16 B. 307.

Unlawful detention.—It is immaterial whether the girl did or did not consent. When she was kept against the will of the lawful guardian such keeping and refusal to give her up, amounted to an unlawful detention, 16 C. 487 at 501. But when a husband complained to a District Magistrate of his wife being unlawfully detained by his father-in-law and refusing to send her to his house without alleging that she has been so detained contrary to her own wish, it was held that the proper remedy for the husband lay in the Civil Court if he had any grievance, 15 Gr. L. J. 712=26 Ind. Cas. 160.

553. (1) Whenever any person causes a police-officer to arrest another person in a presidency-town, if it appears to the Magistrate by whom the case is heard that there was no sufficient ground for causing such arrest, the Magistrate may award such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, to be paid by the person so causing the arrest, to the person so arrested, for his loss of time and expenses in the matter, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

(2) In such cases, if more persons than one are arrested, the Magistrate may, in like manner, award to each of them such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as such Magistrate thinks fit.

(3) All compensation awarded under this section may be recovered as if it were a fine, and, if it cannot be so recovered, the person by whom it is payable shall be sentenced to simple imprisonment for such term not exceeding thirty days as the Magistrate directs, unless such sum is sooner paid.

See S. 250, supra, which deals with false and frivolous or vexatious complaints.

The Magistrate by whom the case is heard.—Obviously the Magistrate herein referred to is a Presidency Magistrate. The section is taken from Presidency Magistrates Act, IV of 1877.

554. (1) With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the High Court at Fort William, and, with the previous sanction of the Local Government any other High Court established by Royal Charter, may, from time to time, make rules for the inspection of the records of subordinate Courts.

Power of chartered High Courts to make rules for inspection of records of subordinate Courts.

Power of other High Courts to make rules for other purposes.

(2) Every High Court not established by Royal Charter may, from time to time, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government,—

(a) make rules for keeping all books, entries and accounts to be kept in all Criminal Courts subordinate to it, and for the preparation and transmission of any returns or statements to be prepared and submitted by such Courts;

(b) frame forms for every proceeding in the said Courts for which it thinks that a form should be provided;

(c) make rules for regulating its own practice and proceedings and the practice and proceedings of all Criminal Courts subordinate to it; and

(d) make rules for regulating the execution of warrants issued under this Code for the levy of fines:

Provided that the rules and forms made and framed under this section shall not be inconsistent with this Code or any other law in force for the time being.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the local official Gazette.

This section on the authority of which the forms in the schedules are framed expressly states that the forms given in the Schedule to the Code are liable to be varied according to the requirements of each particular case. It would certainly be extremely difficult to carry on police administration of the country if every warrant had to be directed by name to a police-officer and upon his transfer it were to become incapable of execution till the name of some other officer had been substituted in his place, [1918] Pat. 269=3 Pat. L.J. 493.

555. Subject to the power conferred by section 554, and by section 107 of the Government of India Act, the forms set forth in the fifth schedule, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes therein mentioned, and if used shall be sufficient.

Forms.

May be used.—This section provides that the forms in the schedule are not obligatory; they may be used with such variations as they may require, and if used with such variations shall be sufficient compliance with law, 22 C.W.N. 342 at 345. See also 34 C. 697; 26 M. 55; 7 A. 44 (F.B.) as to significance of the words "if used shall be sufficient." Where a search-warrant under S. 100 supra was drawn up in a printed form used under S. 93 with necessary alterations, it was held to be a valid warrant, 39 C. 403; 6 Cr. L.J. 127; see 45 C. 905 following 16 C.W.N. 336. This section deals with the form of warrant itself and nothing more and the words of the section are not intended to supersede the provisions of S. 93, supra, 51 C. 1. The Madras High Court in its Proceedings No. 1297, dated 23-7-1873, has observed that Sessions Judges should frame the charge in the first person and not in the third person, and if the charge sent up by a Committing Magistrate is defective, it should be corrected by the Sessions Court.

556. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except with the permission of the Court to which an appeal lies from his Court, try or commit for trial any case to or in which he is a party, or personally interested, and no Judge or Magistrate shall hear an appeal from any judgment or order passed or made by himself.

Case in which Judge or Magistrate is personally interested.

Explanation.—A Judge or Magistrate shall not be deemed a party, or personally interested, within the meaning of this section, to or in any case by reason only that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity, or by reason only that he has viewed the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the case is alleged to have occurred, and made an inquiry in connection with the case.

Illustration.

A, as Collector, upon consideration of information furnished to him, directs the prosecution of B for a breach of the Excise Laws. A is disqualified from trying this case as a Magistrate.

Scope and object of the section.—The object of this section is to enact the well known maxim that "no man can be his own judge or give judgment concerning his own rights." It is one of the oldest and plainest rules of justice and common sense that no man shall sit as Judge in a case in which he has a substantial interest. That is the law of this country as much as it is the law of England, 2 C. 23 at 27. This section is based on the maxim 'nemo debet esse iudex in propria causa'. As an abstract proposition a Judge or Magistrate is not disqualified from trying a case based on a private complaint and which has not been filed under his direction or sanction merely and solely on the ground that the validity of certain orders passed by him in his capacity, as an Executive or Revenue Officer is directly in issue in the case, 27 Cr. L.J. 1333=58 Ind. Cas. 405. The object is to clear everything which might engender suspicion and distrust and to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security, 20 C. 857. It is essential to preserve the administration of justice not merely from any taint of bias or impartiality but also as far as possible from any suspicion of such taint, 28 Bom. L.R. 1302=28 Cr. L.J. 53=99 Ind. Cas. 85. "The principle of this section rests not upon any suspicion as to the honesty of the Judge or his capacity to adjudicate but upon a thing higher than the technicalities of law, namely, upon the conception that human beings are after all human beings and with all honour due to the honesty and integrity of Judges, they are not to hear cases in which they are themselves concerned." Where a Judge is a sole judge of law and fact in a case tried before himself, he cannot give evidence before himself or import matters in his judgment not stated on oath before the Court in the presence of the accused. If he does so he makes himself a witness in the case and renders himself incompetent to try the case, 20 Cr. L.J. 45=48 Ind. Cas. 685 where 19 M. 263. is referred. A Judge cannot try a case in which he is the complainant. The presiding officer of a Court before whom an offence against public justice was committed has to make a complaint of Court under S. 476, supra, if he wishes to take action. Such a complaint comes within the definition given in S. 4 (1)(h) supra, but the complainant need not be examined on oath before cognizance is taken (See S. 200 (aa) supra) and the Judge who makes such a complaint of Court cannot try the case himself, 8 Lah. 496; See also 32 C.W.N. VI. When a sessions Judge made a complaint of Court against a person under S. 191, I.P.O., and the Magistrate who took cognizance discharged the accused, the Sessions Judge who made the complaint of Court is not competent to hear a revision against the order of discharge, he having been a party to the complaint, 28 Bom. L.R. 1302=28 Cr. L.J. 53=99 Ind. Cas. 85. It is highly undesirable, that a Magistrate should act judicially in a case in which he has himself extra-judicially investigated and has formed conclusions of fact adverse to the party against whom he subsequently initiates criminal proceeding, 10 C.L.J. 484=11 Cr. L.J. 2=4 Ind. Cas. 437 where 5 A.L.J. 337, is referred to; 1903 A.W.N. 95. See also 13 Cr. L.J. 236=14 Ind. Cas. 428, what the section contemplates is that if the Magistrate or Judge is merely connected with a case by reason of his discharging some other public function or is connected with it in some public capacity outside his magisterial or judicial functions and orders or directs a prosecution or is concerned with it in some public capacity, he is not on that ground alone to be deemed personally interested in the case. And if in addition to a connection of that sort he is in some capacity outside his magisterial or judicial functions and orders or directs the prosecution of a person for an offence then he is to be deemed personally interested in the case and he cannot try it. The distinction is between having some public or official connection with the case and ordering or directing a prosecution in some extra-judicial or extra-magisterial capacity, 1899 A.W.N. 74. A disqualifying

Interest must be one attaching to a Magistrate or Judge as an individual and not one which he derives solely from his official position, 1893 A.W.N. 79. Interest creating a real ground for transfer must be distinguished from the disqualifying interest contemplated by this section. The latter comes within the purview of S. 526, supra, and may not come within the scope of this section. Consent of parties to a cause cannot remove the disqualification imposed by this section, 23 Cr. L.J. 446=67 Ind. Cas. 622; 4 Lah. 376; 32 A.635; 31 Bom. L.R. 925 nor the absence of bona fides of the party raising the objection affects the question 31 Bom. L.R. 925. Whether a given case falls within the provisions of this section is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances of each case and it is not safe to draw any analogy from the decisions in other cases, 14 Cr. L.J. 385=20 Ind. Cas. 209, following 24 M. 238;

Try any case.—These words are wide enough to include any stage of a judicial proceeding in which the guilt or innocence of the accused is finally adjudicated upon. Consequently the provisions of this section apply to proceedings taken under S. 437, supra, which will have the effect of setting aside an order of discharge. This construction does not force to the words of the section and is in accord with the intention of the Legislature which was to enact the rule that no man could be judge in his own cause, 13 Cr. L.J. 30=13 Ind. Cas. 222 where 27 A. 25 is distinguished. The words "try any case" are comprehensive enough to include the hearing of an appeal, 23 Cr. L.J. 446=67 Ind. Cas. 622; 14 Cr. L.J. 385=20 Ind. Cas. 209. The fact that the Magistrate had issued a search-warrant prior to the institution of the case or the fact that the accused may possibly object to the propriety of the issuing of search-warrant will not disqualify the Magistrate from trying the case, 24 A.L.J. 568=27 Cr. L.J. 783=93 Ind. Cas. 319, but a Magistrate who as a member of a District Board, took part in a resolution that the police should inquire into the conduct of certain officials of the Board and prosecute them after due inquiry is incompetent to try the case instituted on such resolution, 29 Cr. L.J. 371=108 Ind. Cas. 271. A Sub-divisional Magistrate who did not take cognizance of a complaint or hold a local investigation, but acting as the officer in charge of the division directed the issue of summons holding that the investigating Magistrate had not given satisfactory reasons for recommending a dismissal of the complaint without, however, expressing any clear opinion hostile to the accused is not disqualified under this section to hear an appeal from a conviction especially where no objection whatever was raised to the Magistrate hearing the appeal. Nor can a Judge try an offence nor hear an appeal from a conviction where he directs a prosecution, as by doing so he had merely directed further inquiry into the matter, 23 Cr. L.J. 1481=89 Ind. Cas. 1049; the expression "try a case" is wide enough to include any stage of judicial proceeding in which the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused is finally adjudicated and includes a proceeding under S. 436, supra, for further inquiry into a discharge, See 32 A. 635.

Commit for trial.—Unless the Magistrate obtains permission from the appellate Court, he is disqualified from committing the case for trial, if he had taken more than a formal part in the police investigation of the case under inquiry, 2 L.B.R. 209.

Except with the permission of the Court to which appeals lie.—Properly speaking the permission should be given before the proceedings are begun, 31 Bom. L.R. 925 at 531; 53 B. 716. There is nothing in this section to suggest that the interest which might disqualify a Judge or Magistrate from trying or committing for trial would prevent an appellate Court granting the permission contemplated by this section. The fact that both the Magistrate and the Judge are members of a club and the accused was a servant of that club will not preclude the Judge as the appellate authority from granting the necessary permission, 20 A. 181. The expression "permission of the Court refers to the words "try or commit for trial" and cannot be extended to include the hearing of an appeal. A Judge who directed a prosecution should not hear an appeal from the conviction even with regard to the severity of the sentence passed, 14 C.W.N. LXIII; 17 C.W.N. XII; 1893 P.R. (Cr. J.) 39. The examination of a trying Magistrate as a witness will not disqualify him from trying the case, 2 Luck. 533. It was held in 23 C.46 at 47, that the words "try any case" are words comprehensive enough to include even an appeal. The prohibition in the case of an appellate Court hearing an appeal from its own judgment is absolute. No such permission can ever be granted. The word "trial" may not apply to proceedings under Ss. 437 and 438, supra. "I have grave doubt whether the word 'try' used in S. 556 can in any case be applied to proceedings taken under S. 435 or any other section of the Code in which he is not empowered to pass any orders, but merely to report the case for the orders of this Court. It seems to me doing violence to the word 'try' that it should cover any such proceedings"—Per Knox, J., in 27 A. 23 at 27. Consent of the accused cannot confer jurisdiction upon a Magistrate who is disqualified from trying the case, 7 A.L.J. 739. Criminal Proceedings substantially bad cannot be cured by any amount of waiver or consent on the part of the accused person, 2 C. 23; 46 M. 117 at 120; 18 M.L.J. 330; 6 C.W.N. 202; 21 A.L.J. 89; 2 Pat. 93; 1 L.R.P.C. 520; 23 M.L.J. 329=1915 M.W.N. 229; 4 Lah. 376; 29 Cr. L.J. 521=109 Ind. Cas. 345; 50 A. 457 at 462.

Personally Interested—This section is based on the maxim 'nemo debet esse judex in propria causa,' 8 Lah. 497. The words 'party or personally interested' have been the subject of several English decisions which well established that a direct personal pecuniary interest, however small, in the result of a case, disqualified a Judge from trying a case but where such interest is not pecuniary, the disqualifying interest should have substantially the same effect so as to create a reasonable suspicion of bias, but a mere possibility of bias is not enough. The same consideration should apply in interpreting this expression occurring in this section. Where the only interest in the result of a case tried by a Magistrate is that he is concerned in it in his public capacity, it may fairly be presumed that his interest is not so substantial as to warrant the inference that he is likely to have a real bias in the matter, 27 Cr. L.J. 1333=98 Ind. Cas. 405; 53 B. 716 at 723-74 'interest' which disqualifies a Justice may be two fold: pecuniary interest and interest other than pecuniary interest such as personal feeling or bias. The rule as to pecuniary interest is stated thus: 'It is a leading principle of English law that no one is allowed to be a Judge in his own case, that means that the least pecuniary interest in the subject-matter of the litigation is sufficient to disqualify any person from acting as a Judge.' 'Law is no respecter of persons' and Lord Chancellor Cottenham's judgment in a case was reversed by the House of Lords solely on the ground that the Lord Chancellor owned some shares in the defendant company which fact the Lord Chancellor had apparently forgotten when he heard the appeal, see 3 H.L. Ca. 759. The prohibition herein contained is based on the principle that no man is allowed to be a Judge in his own cause and rests on the decisions in 20 Q.B.D. 58 at 60; [1894] 1 Q.B. 750; 43 Ch. D. 366; 2 Q.B.D. 558, see also 31 Bom. L.R. 925; 53 B. 716. The word "interest" in this section does not merely imply intellectual interest, but something of the nature of an expectation of an advantage to be gained or for a loss or of some disadvantage to be avoided by the person who is said to be interested in the case, 8 Bom. L.R. 947=5 Cr. L.J. 2; 15 Cr. L.J. 649=25 Ind. Cas. 977. The words "personally interested" cannot mean that a public officer, whose duty it is to see that the law is obeyed, is merely by reason of that duty, a person personally interested in the prosecution. They cannot refer to any very remote interest in the matter and must refer to some particular and immediate personal interest in the case and its result. 15 A. 193 (F.B.); 22 A. 340; 27 A. 33; see also 20 C. 857; 23 C. 328; 7 C.W.N. 708, 24 M. 238; 1 Lah. 33. The words do not exclude pecuniary interest as distinguished from personal interest, 20 B. 502. Where the accused was a servant of the Magistrate who tried him and was charged with rash and negligent driving of a carriage driven by the Magistrate's wife it was held that the Magistrate was personally interested, and the conviction was set aside, 14 B. 572; 9 B. 172. Where the trying Magistrate is himself the complainant, he having arrested the accused who was found smoking in a railway train and who refused contemptuously to do so when asked by the Magistrate, cannot try the accused for an offence under the Railway Act, as he is disqualified Ratanlal 339, but where the trying Magistrate is the master of the complainant there is no disqualification but it is expedient that the complaint should be tried by some other Magistrate, 9 B. 172. A Magistrate who is a share-holder in a company is disqualified from trying an employee of the company charged with criminal breach of trust as a servant of the company

20 B. 502 ; 8 Bom. L.R. 947 ; 31 Bom. L.R. 925; 53 B. 716. It is highly desirable that the President of a Municipal Council who is also a Magistrate should not try Municipal cases and a conviction had is illegal on account of his personal disqualification, 18 Cr. L.J. 1017=42 Ind. Cas. 761. It has been held over and over again that if a prosecution has been directed in pursuance of orders passed by a local body in a meeting presided over or attended by a Magistrate in his capacity as an office-bearer or member thereof such Magistrate is "legally interested" in the matter and is disqualified from trying the matter in his judicial capacity, 10 Lah. 718, following 18 B. 442 ; 10 C. 1030; 18 Cr. L.J. 1017=42 Ind. Cas. 761 and 32 A. 635. But the objection, that because the trying Judge was, once while at the bar held briefs for a certain company, and therefore could not decide a case of the company impartially, was overruled, holding that a man is quite capable of disassociating himself from such influence while acting in a judicial position, 4 C.W.N. cxxliii.

Explanation.—The explanation was added to meet the objections raised in, 23 C. 328 ; 37 C. 340 ; 19 M. 253 and follows the view expressed in, 10 C. 194 and 19 A. 302 ; see also the decision in 15 A. 192 (F.B.), where it was held that Magistrate being in charge of the excise and opium administration of the District was held not to be personally interested merely because of his duty as a Government officer to see that the law relating to sale of opium is enforced and maintained. "A gentleman who without remuneration is merely discharging a public and honorary office and who has no personal interest in the proceedings of the municipality may well be supposed to be free from the bias which the jealousy of the law presumes in other persons immediately interested. Such immediate and disqualifying interest does, we think, exist in the case of a gentleman whose time and services are in consideration of a salary given to carry on the work of a Municipal Corporation. The jealousy of law must presume that such a person, however upright and honourable his character, is disqualified from taking part in judicial proceedings in which the municipality is ipso facto the prosecutor"—per Field, J., in 10 C. 194 at 193. As a general rule it is undesirable that a Magistrate, who, by local investigation while on tour, having himself discovered the existence of a crime, and collected or ascertained evidence in support of it, thereafter directs, recommends or invites the institution of judicial proceedings should try the supposed criminal, 13 Cr. L.J. 236 ; 1 Lah. 25; 23 Cr. L.J. 446 ; 24 Cr. L.J. 128. But it was held in 5 Bom. L.R. 542, that a Magistrate who held a departmental inquiry and sent the records to the Collector with his opinion that the evidence justified a prosecution was not disqualified. Where there is a disqualification under this section the judicial officer before whom the case is, is not a Court of competent jurisdiction and S. 537, infra would not apply. A case so tried must be regarded as one tried by a Court without jurisdiction, 23 C. 328. The explanation covers only those cases in which the Magistrate, though a member, has not taken part in directing or sanctioning the prosecution, 10 Lah. 718 where 1 Ran. 517 is distinguished on the ground that the prosecution had not been directed by the Magistrate but if he has done so he would have been disqualified. The explanation does not apply to any case in which a Magistrate may have been personally concerned as a Municipal Commissioner in the matter which forms the subject of a trial before him. It was rather intended to prevent an objection being raised that from the mere fact that the Magistrate happened to be a Municipal Commissioner, he was necessarily disqualified from holding a trial in which some Municipal matter was involved. A Magistrate who merely authorises a prosecution as President of a Town Committee is not disqualified under this section from trying the case. But it is extremely undesirable that a Magistrate who has given formal sanction for a prosecution in his official capacity should try the case himself when other Magistrates are available, 1 Ran. 517. The question whether a given case falls within the provisions of this section is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances of each particular case. The word used in the illustration is 'directs' which means institutes, or gives orders for the institution of the prosecution. An authorisation is not a direction which will disqualify a Magistrate under this section, 23 M. 233 at 240. But where a Deputy Tahsildar who is also a Magistrate on receipt of a report from a Revenue Inspector as to an encroachment directed the village headman to file a complaint against the person alleged to have encroached on public land and himself received the complaint, he is disqualified under this section from trying the case, (M.H.C.), Cr.R.C. No. 237 of 1929, following 24 M. 233. It is a very different matter when the Magistrate is practically one of the prosecutors and the Judge 10 C. 1030 at 1031 or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity. A Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry under S. 202, supra is not disqualified from trying the case himself, 4 C.W.N. 604; 24 C. 167. A Magistrate is not debarred from trying the case under the opium Act by reason only of his being in charge of the opium and exercise administration of the District, 15 A. 192 (F.B.) or where he merely lays certain information before the police to make an inquiry on the basis of that information and the prosecution is initiated in the ordinary course by the investigating officer, 11 A.L.J. 832=15 Cr. L.J. 17=22 Ind. Cas. 161. But where a District Magistrate took an active part in the investigation of a case, he was held to be disqualified, 24 M. 233; 20 C. 837; 6 C.W.N. 864. In Weir, II, 723; a Municipal Commissioner reported to the Council an offence against conservancy provision which came to his notice, the Council of which he was a member directed the prosecution and the Commissioner also sat on the same Bench of Magistrates who convicted him, it was held that the proceedings were not illegal. Again a Municipal Commissioner who brought to the notice of the Executive Officer of the Committee of an infringement of a bye-law by the accused and on the strength of which the health officer instituted a prosecution of the accused before a Bench of Honorary Magistrates of which the said Municipal Commissioner was a member, and the accused was tried and convicted, it was held, that the conviction was not bad on the ground that the Municipal Commissioner was personally interested in the prosecution or was a part to the prosecution in the sense that because it to be instituted, 21 Cr. L.J. 135=71 Ind. Cas. 359.

Viewed the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed.—Local inspection is not a necessary disqualification. See also 21 Cr. L.J. 135=71 Ind. Cas. 359.—See 16 C.W.N. 423; 12 C.W.N. 743; 9 C. 333; 37 C. 349; 39 C. 475; Weir II, 723 and a conviction had, will not be set aside if the local inspection is used to confirm the evidence on record. 25 Cr. L.J. 703=81 Ind. Cas. 193. But a Magistrate exceeds his jurisdiction if in making a local inspection he himself measures the plots and comes to a definite conclusion on such measurement inasmuch as he creates fresh evidence himself and introduces it into the case for the purposes of his decision, 30 Cr. L.J. 652=116 Ind. Cas. 767. S. 539B which has been newly added regulates local inspection, see 52 C. 148 and 53 C. 45 in this connection.

Or making an inquiry into the case.—Where a District Magistrate took an active part in the investigation of a case he was held not to be competent to have it tried by himself, 24 M. 233; 6 C.W.N. 864; 1 Lah. 31. But a Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry under S. 202, supra is not disqualified from trying the case himself. A District Magistrate who directed the accused to be prosecuted before a Magistrate subordinate to him will be disqualified from hearing an appeal preferred to him against the conviction. But a Magistrate who is the head of the police in the District is not debarred by this section from trying a person accused under the Police Act for any breach of any order, 21 A. 343. Where a Magistrate merely laid information before the police, and directed the police to make an inquiry, and the police after investigation instituted proceedings, held that the Magistrate was not disqualified from trying the case, 1933 A.W.N. 93; 32 A. 633, where 27 A. 25, is distinguished. A Sessions Judge is not prohibited in law from hearing an appeal from a conviction by a Magistrate in which he as an Insolvency Judge allowed the prosecution to proceed. 21 A.L.J. 90=24 Cr. L.J. 144=71 Ind. Cas. 368.

Illustration.—The illustration cannot be read as merely meaning that the officer concerned may not try as a Magistrate a complaint instituted by him as Collector; its evident intention is to debar him when he himself originates the prosecution, 1 Sind L.R. 99. In the illustration the word used is 'directs' which means institutes or gives orders for institution of the prosecution. An authorisation is not a direction which will disqualify a Magistrate, 24 M. 233 at 240. The illustration makes it clear that the interest need not be pecuniary. 18 Cr. L.J. 355=29 Ind. Cas. 203 but it may be official. This is opposed to the decision in 15 A. 192 (F.B.) and is in accordance with the decision in 33 A. 635.

557. No pleader who practises in the Court of any Magistrate in a presidency-town or district shall sit as a Magistrate in such Court, or in any Court within the jurisdiction of such Court.

Practising pleader not to sit as Magistrate in certain Courts.

Pleader.—For definition, see S. 4 (1) (r), supra. The section does not deal with appointments. All it says is that no Pleader who practises in the Court of any Magistrate shall sit as Magistrate in such Court or as a Presidency Magistrate. A Pleader when appointed to act as a Magistrate ceases to practise in that Court, and this section cannot apply to him. The appointment of a Pleader as a Magistrate is not forbidden by any section of the Code, 23 B. 450. This section only provides that pleaders shall not sit as Presidency Magistrates while in actual practice in that Court. A pleader appointed as a Magistrate in any Court cannot under this section be prohibited from practising in that Court. But he cannot sit as a Magistrate in the Court if he continues to practise therein, 23 Cr. L.J. 311=76 Ind. Cas. 1031.

558. The Local Government may determine what, for the purposes of this Code, shall be deemed to be the language of each Court within the territories administered by such Government, other than the High Courts established by Royal Charter.

Power to decide
language of Courts.

Provision for powers of Judges and Magistrates being exercised by their successors in office.

559. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Code, the powers and duties of a Judge or Magistrate may be exercised or performed by his successor in office.

(2) When there is any doubt as to who is the successor in office of any Magistrate, the Chief Presidency Magistrate in a presidency-town, and the District Magistrate outside such towns, shall determine by order in writing the Magistrate who shall, for the purposes of this Code or of any proceedings or order thereunder, be deemed to be the successor in office of such Magistrate.

(3) When there is any doubt as to who is the successor in office of any Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge, the Sessions Judge shall determine by order in writing the Judge who shall, for the purposes of this Code or of any proceedings or order thereunder, be deemed to be the successor in office of such Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge.

This section is new and enables powers of Judges and Magistrates to be exercised by their successors and when a doubt arises as to who is the successor, the District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate in the case of Magistrates and the Sessions Judge in the case of Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges are to decide the question. So the proper person to file a complaint of Court where there is a change with personnel of the Court is the successor in office of the officer before whom an offence specified in S. 195 (1) supra, has been committed, 23 Cr. L.J. 643=103 Ind. Cas. 99.

Officers concerned in sales not to purchase or bid for property.

560. A public servant having any duty to perform in connection with the sale of any property under this Code shall not purchase or bid for the property.

Compare S. 169, I.P.C., which prohibits a public servant from purchasing or bidding for property which he is legally bound not to purchase.

Special provisions with respect to offence of rape by a husband.

561. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Code, no Magistrate except a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate shall—

(a) take cognizance of the offence of rape where the sexual intercourse was by a man with his wife, or

(b) commit the man for trial for the offence.

(2) And, notwithstanding anything in this Code, if a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate deems it necessary to direct an investigation by a police-officer, with respect to such an offence as is referred to in sub-section (1), no police-officer of a rank below that of police-inspector shall be employed either to make or to take part in the investigation.

When the offence of rape has been taken cognizance of by a District Magistrate as required by law, the fact that the investigation into the offence was made by an officer below the rank of Police Inspector was held not to be such a material irregularity as would vitiate the subsequent proceedings, 1893 A.W.N. 9.

561A. Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent power of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

Saving of inherent power of High Court.

Scope of the section—This section corresponds to S. 151, C.P.C., but the power is to be exercised only by the High Court and not by the lower Courts. In 1923 the Legislature has introduced a section in the Code the necessity of which really follows as a corollary from the proposition that the Code is not exhaustive. "The old rule for jurisdiction is, that nothing shall be intended to be out of the jurisdiction of the superior Court but that which specially appears to be so; nothing is intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court but that which is expressly alleged, 28 Cr. L.J. 913 at 924-103 Ind. Cas 433. It is S. 561A which saves the inherent power of the High Court, which after all is the custodian of the rights of the subjects. Under this provision nothing in the Code of Criminal Procedure shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent power of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. This power was always supposed to exist and it was never denied that the arms of the High Court were not long enough to reach any kind of wrong but still in the absence of any express provision of law recognising the existence this power, the exercise of it could not be relied upon as an effective remedy for all cases of failure of justice. The Legislature very properly has put in this section in 1923, and it may be called the saving section of the Code, a counter to the ousting section 537, supra 30 C.W.N. cl. This section is new and it recognises the inherent powers of the High Court. It confers no new power on the High Court. All that this new section does is to declare that such inherent powers as the High Court may possess have not been taken away or abridged by the provisions of the Code and it does not confer any new powers. It merely says that such of the inherent powers as the Court may possess shall not be deemed to be limited or affected by anything contained in the Code, 10 Lah. 1. The limits of the jurisdiction are very wide as the language employed in enacting S. 439, supra, and this section shows, but though the jurisdiction exists and is very wide in its scope, it is a rule of practice that it will only be exercised only in very exceptional cases, 3 Luck. 287 at 291. The Court cannot by invoking its inherent powers extend the powers given to it by statute, 49 M.L.J. 533, following 48 M. 262 (F.B.); 45 M. 913 (F.B.). This new section has been enacted to authorise the High Court to make any order as may be necessary to secure the ends of justice or to prevent the abuse of the process of the Court or to give effect to any order under the Code and this power has been conferred on the High Courts in India notwithstanding the limitation contained in S. 369, supra. Where owing to carelessness of Counsel in not appearing in Court at the time of the original hearing a client's case went unrepresented and an ex parte order was passed, the High Court has jurisdiction under this section to entertain a fresh application to rehear the matter to secure the ends of justice, 3 Luck. 680; 10 Lah. 1 following 34 C. 960 and 1 Q.B.D. 677. Criminal Courts no less than Civil Courts exist for the administration of justice and Courts of both descriptions have inherent power to mould the procedure subject to the statutory provisions applicable to the matter in hand to enable them to discharge their functions as Courts of justice, 15 C.L.J. 51. Jurisdiction to take cognizance of offences must be expressly conferred on the High Court in order to enable it to punish offenders and the inherent powers of the High Court cannot be invoked for that purpose. So the High Court has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of an offence under S. 120 of the Government of India Act, oppression by one holding office of any British subject in the exercise of his authority. 30 Cr. L. J. 460—115 Ind. Cas. 428.

To prevent abuse of process of Court.—The language of the section is wide and comprehensive. There can be no doubt that criminal proceedings before a subordinate Court constitute a process of the Court and if the High Court comes to the conclusion that the process is being abused, this new section vests in the High Court jurisdiction to quash those proceedings so as to prevent an abuse of the process of the Court, 3 Luck. 287; 39 C.L.J. 236—25 Cr. L.J. 1258=82 Ind. Cas. 266; 1 Luck 133; 50 B. 741.

Or otherwise to secure ends of justice.—The words 'or otherwise to secure the ends of justice' can only mean that such other inherent power as the Court possesses is likewise preserved. The High Court is not given, nor did it ever possess, an unrestricted and undefined power to make any order which it might please to consider, was in the interest of justice. Its inherent powers are much controlled by principle and precedent as are its express powers by statute, 10 Lah. 1 at 6. The terms of the section are from their nature very wide; "Inherent power", "to prevent abuse of process," "to secure ends of justice" are terms incapable of definition or enumeration and capable at the most of test, according to well-established principles of criminal jurisprudence. The results of such tests might in certain cases be doubtful or indecisive. What then are the "ends of justice?" To the particular result in any particular case, justice is indifferent. The end of justice is no more conviction than acquittal. It is justice by the ascertainment of truth as to the facts on a balance of evidence on each side. If so, do the ends of justice require, or do they not that the accused person from the moment of his arrest, should have reasonable access to his legal advisers; or does it suffice that this access should commence under the Prisons Act IX of 1894, from the time exclusive police custody has ceased. If the end of justice is justice and the spirit of justice is fairness, then each side should have equal opportunity to prepare its own case and to lay its evidence fully, freely and fairly before the Court. This necessarily involves preparation, which is more effective from the point of view of justice, if it is made with the aid of skilled legal advice. Ss. 497 and 498, supra, give ample authority to release the prisoner on bail from exclusive police custody. If access to legal adviser is refused, under this section the High Court has ample powers to see that such access is not prevented, where the ends of justice so require, 50 B. 741 at 749, 750. Unlike S. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code which saves the inherent powers of all Courts, this section recognizes the inherent powers of the High Court alone and it is not as wide as S. 151, C.P.C., which empowers the Court to make any order as may be necessary for the ends of justice. See 32 C.L.J. 270 (Sp. B) where Hookerjee, J., has discussed at great length the inherent power of the Court and comes to the conclusion that there was no doubt whatever that the doctrine of inherent power as enunciated in 44 C. 816 and 15 C.L.J. 517 is well established in principle and cannot be successfully questioned. It is clearly just that under this section, the High Court has power to order restitution of property when the lower Court has made over property under S. 517, supra to a person who is not entitled to its possession and the High Court should remedy the error by restoring it to the person lawfully entitled to the same, 5 Ran. 553 where 21 Cr. L.J. 561 = 57 Ind. Cas. 81 is followed and 6 Cr. L.J. 126 is dissented from. See also 50 A. 414 following 3 L.W. 498 = 1916 M.W.N. 89 = 17 Cr. L.J. 190 = 33 Ind. Cas. 830 and 23 C.W.N. 143 = 28 C.L.J. 83 = 19 Cr. L.J. 931 = 47 Ind. Cas. 803. The High Court has under this section inherent power to stay execution of its own order when the ends of justice require it. In cases where an appeal against its decision has been admitted by their Lordships of the Privy Council and there is a fear that the sentence would expire before the appeal is heard and disposed of it would be within its power to release the accused on bail. Such inherent power must be deemed to exist as in this section it is expressly provided that nothing in the Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent power of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to secure the ends of justice, 49 A. 257. The High Court is similarly empowered to require a criminal Court trying an accused person on a complaint of Court under S. 476, supra, to stay pronouncing its judgment when an appeal from the decree in the civil suit out of which the criminal proceedings were instituted was pending in the High Court and the question of the genuineness of a will was the issue to be decided in the High Court and was also the subject of the charge in the criminal Court, 28 Cr. L.J. 778 = 104 Ind. Cas. 106. Where the High Court enhanced the sentence passed on an accused person without notice to the accused and hearing his objections, the order is null and void and without jurisdiction and in such a case the High Court has inherent power to proceed with the case afresh after due notice to the accused, 47 M. 428. See also 47 C.L.J. 353 = 28 Cr. L.J. 831 = 104 Ind. Cas. 447 ; 27 Cr. L.J. 1114 = 97 Ind. Cas. 426. The High Court has also inherent power to call for records of inferior Criminal Courts and pass the necessary incidental orders such as interim stay of proceedings before the lower Court pending final orders by it, 1927 M.W.N. 716. The High Court can also interfere where a charge had been framed by the Magistrate against an accused person where none should have been framed on the evidence on record, 23 A.L.J. 21 = 26 Cr. L.J. 743 = 85 Ind. Cas. 281. But as observed in 43 M. 913, the Court cannot by invoking its inherent powers extend the powers given to it by statute, see 48 M. 262 (F.B.) 49 M.L.J. 593 = 22 L.W. 723 = 1925 M.W.N. 772 = 27 Cr. L.J. 126 = 91 Ind. Cas. 702. For example the High Court has no power under the section to order restoration of property attached under S. 83 supra, when no application was made under S. 81 supra, within the two years as prescribed by that section ; such an order by the High Court will be in direct conflict with the express provision contained in S. 89 supra. The proper remedy is to make an application to Government, 26 Bom. L.R. 719 = 25 Cr. L.J. 1293 = 82 Ind. Cas. 353. This section recognises the inherent power of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to prevent abuse of the process of any Court, or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. But the power to expunge a portion of a judgment delivered by a competent Court is intended for cases of exceptional circumstances and should be exercised very sparingly. It is true there have been a few instances in which remarks calculated to expose a witness or an accused person to a criminal prosecution have been deleted. It is not desirable that a subordinate Magistrate should apply to the High Court to expunge remarks made by the lower appellate Court with regard to the conduct of the judicial proceedings had before the subordinate Magistrate. A Subordinate Magistrate should not be too sensitive and any attempt on his part to criticise a judgment of the lower appellate Court must be deprecated. The High Court burdened as it is with a large volume of judicial work cannot afford to waste time on applications made by subordinate Magistrates against their official superiors and there is no precedent for entertaining such an application, 27 Cr. L.J. 310=23 Ind. Cas. 973; 27 Cr. L.J. 1113=97 Ind. Cas. 426. The High Court's inherent power to expunge passages from judgments delivered by itself or by subordinate Court has been put beyond controversy now, 9 Lah. 269 following 5 Lah. 476 at 479; 6 Lah. 166; 30 Cr. L.J. 578=118 Ind. Cas. 747; 29 Cr. L.J. 620=109 Ind. Cas. 812; but this jurisdiction is of an extraordinary nature and must be exercised with caution, 9 Lah. 269. It is of the utmost importance to the administration of justice that Courts should be allowed to perform their functions freely and fearlessly and without interference by the High Court but it is equally desirable that the right of the lower Courts to make disparaging remarks on persons who appear or are named in the course of the trial is a right which should be exercised with moderation especially when the person disparaged had no opportunity of explaining or defending himself, 9 Lah. 269, followed in 29 Cr. L.J. 1102=112 Ind. Cas. 686; 30 Cr. L.J. 970=118 Ind. Cas. 747; 49 A. 254. There is no reason why the inherent power under this section should not comprise a power to order deletion of passages in judgments which are either irrelevant or inadmissible and which adversely affects the character of the party or a witness or of Counsel before it. The High Court as the Supreme Court of Revision must be deemed to have the power to see that Courts below do not unjustly and without any lawful excuse take away the character of persons before it. Such jurisdiction can be exercised only when there is no foundation whatever for the remark objected to and not where it is a matter of inference from evidence, 49 A. 247. In 29 Cr. L.J. 313=107 Ind. Cas. 912 the Court suo motu expunged objectionable remark in the lower Court's judgment. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 336 at 340=103 Ind. Cas. 124. The High Court has power under this section to order the expunging of passages in the order of a Sessions Judge granting bail, if such passages are likely to prejudice the Magistrate in the impartial trial of the case, 25 Cr. L.J. 1363=82 Ind. Cas. 759; 44 A. 401 and 67 Ind. Cas. 195. Even though the High Court has power to expunge remarks in judgments of the lower Courts' the passages should be deleted only if they are irrelevant and do not form integral part of the judgment in which they appear, 30 Cr. L.J. 970 at 971=118 Ind. Cas. 747. See notes under S. 439 at p. 824.

First Offenders.

- 562. (1) When any person not under twenty-one years of age is convicted of an offence punishable with imprisonment for not more than seven years, or when any person under twenty-one years of age or any woman is convicted of an offence not punishable with death or transportation for life, and no previous conviction is proved against the offender, if it appears to the Court before which he is convicted, regard being had to the age, character or antecedents of the offender, and to the circumstances in which the offence was committed, that it is expedient that the offender should be released on probation of good conduct, the Court may, instead of sentencing him at once to any punishment, direct that he be released on his entering into a bond, with or without sureties, to appear and receive sentence when called upon during such period (not exceeding three years) as the Court may direct, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour :

Power of Court to release certain convicted offenders, on probation of good conduct instead of sentencing to punishment.

Provided that, where any first offender is convicted by a Magistrate of the third class, or a Magistrate of the second class not specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, and the Magistrate is of opinion that the powers conferred by this section should be exercised, he shall record his opinion to that effect, and submit the proceedings to a Magistrate of the first class or Sub-Divisional Magistrate, forwarding the accused to, or taking bail for his appearance before, such Magistrate, who shall dispose of the case in manner provided by section 380.

(1A) In any case in which a person is convicted of theft, theft in a building, dishonest misappropriation, cheating or any offence under the Indian Penal Code punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment and no previous conviction is proved against him, the Court before which he is so convicted may, if it thinks fit, having regard to the age, character, antecedents or physical or mental condition of the offender and to the trivial nature of the offence or any extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed, instead of sentencing him to any punishment, release him after due admonition.

(2) An order under this section may be made by any Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its power of revision.

(3) When an order has been made under this section in respect of any offender, the High Court may, on appeal when there is a right of appeal to such Court, or when exercising its powers of revision, set aside such order, and in lieu thereof pass sentence on such offender according to law :

Provided that the High Court shall not under this sub-section inflict a greater punishment than might have been inflicted by the Court by which the offender was convicted.

(4) The provisions of sections 122, 126A and 406A shall, so far as may be, apply in the case of sureties offered in pursuance of the provisions of this section.

History of the section.—Under the English Common Law a convicted person instead of being sentenced and sent to prison may be released on probation of good conduct and the judgment and sentence of the Court is deferred until a future date. The accused is required to enter into his recognisance with or without sureties and to come up for judgment when called upon and meanwhile to be of good behaviour. The old Supreme Courts inherited this Common Law jurisdiction and the Charter Act of the High Courts confirmed all their inherent powers. This section was introduced in the Code of 1828. 'This section is a tardy recognition of a principle well established in England and it is one of the wisest features of the Code of 1828, but being a provision hitherto entirely unknown to Indian law may not be properly understood by the lower ranks of the Magistracy. S M.L.J. 157 (Jour).'

Amendment.—In sub-section (1) three years has been altered to seven years and 1 Lah. 512 is no longer law. See also 3 Pat. L.J. 257; the words "any person under twenty-one years of age or any woman is convicted of an offence not punishable with death or transportation for life" have been added now S. 380 (theft in a building), S. 381 (theft by clerk or servant), S. 423 (cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property) and S. 411

(receiving stolen property) come within this section. It is also expressly enacted that an Appellate Court or the High Court may make an order under this section. The High Court when hearing an appeal in respect of any offender or when no appeal lies, in revision, is now empowered to set aside an order made under this section and in lieu thereof pass sentence on him according to law. Sub-section (1A) has been newly added by Act XXXVII of 1923. In sub-section (4) Ss. 125A, 406A have been added along with S. 122, supra.

Scope and object of the section.—The idea of the Legislature in framing this section was that sometimes offenders (and in special, youthful offenders) without being persons of depraved character, may on occasion, succumb to sudden temptation, for example, a poor boy without a pie in his pocket sees suddenly displayed before him some property which is worth his stealing. He having never previously committed any crime whatever, succumbs to temptation and steals the property and he is caught. The Legislature very humanely and very properly allows the Magistrate in such a case as that to give to the youthful offender another chance and to deal with him under this section, 1916 P.R. (Cr. J.) 19=17 Cr. L.J. 310=33 Ind. Cas. 436. This benevolent provision affords a guilty person an opportunity of reforming himself instead of turning into a hardened criminal by associating himself with convicts in Jail. The principle of the section is that instead of imposing a punishment authorised by law, the Court requires the convicted person to enter into recognizance with or without sureties to come up for judgment when called upon and in the meanwhile to keep the peace and be of good behaviour. The scope of the section has been greatly enlarged now. The principle embodied in the section applies not only to persons who are convicted of an offence punishable under the I.P.C., but also to those who are found guilty of an offence punishable under a special or local law but its provisions should not ordinarily apply to a person convicted under the Excise Act, 7 Lah 32; 27 Cr. L.J. 478=93 Ind. Cas. 702. This section refers to a far wider range of offences than are included in S 75, I.P.C., and distinctly contemplates the use of previous convictions (not necessarily convictions for the same offence of which the person has just been convicted) to affect the question of sentence. It is legal to prove a previous conviction in order to show that a convicted person cannot avoid being sentenced, 56 M.L.J. 593=1929 M.W.N. 393=29 L.W. 194=30 Cr. L.J. 471=115 Ind. Cas. 483. This section does not apply to the case of an offender who is insane and when such a person is convicted under S. 304A, I.P.C., he cannot be released on probation of good conduct under this section but the proper procedure is to report the case to the High Court under S. 311, supra, 11 M.L.T. 404=13 Cr. L.J. 248=14 Ind. Cas. 600. This section is not intended for the benefit of juvenile offenders only for which in fact the Reformatory Schools Act makes ample provision. Before applying this section to any particular case the Court must consider whether the case is a fit one for applying the provisions of this section or not and must guard against danger to the public and danger to the accused himself by applying the section. Where the offender has shown a criminal propensity rather than mere thoughtlessness and a general character of craft and deceit, the provisions of the section should not be applied 23 Cr. L.J. 1224=82 Ind. Cas. 152. Where in a case of cheating the accused is literate well able to appreciate his action and its consequences and the crime appears to have been carefully planned, the use of the provisions of this section is not appropriate, 27 Cr. L.J. 835=93 Ind. Cas. 756. It is not desirable to apply the provisions of this section to an accused person found guilty of deliberate perjury to screen an offender from punishment. Perjury is far too ripe for any such leniency, 29 Cr. L.J. 219=107 Ind. Cas. 107. Where the offence is a hideous and reprehensible one the mere youth of the offender is no ground to act under this section and release him on his executing a bond for good behaviour, 23 Cr. L.J. 1033=112 Ind. Cas. 680. Powers are conferred upon the Magistrates not for the purpose of showing favour to any particular class of persons, the sole intention of the section being that the convict should be given a chance of reformation which he would lose by being incarcerated in prison. The exercise of this discretion does need a considerable sense of responsibility in the Magistrate. Should he make a bad use of this discretion, far from reforming an offender, he will be a cause of corruption to many; punishment is not awarded to a criminal, only for vindictive purposes. It is awarded so that the fate of the convict punished, may be a deterrent to others. If the Magistrate, by misuse of this section, causes to spring up in the minds of young people, an impression that they could with impunity commit serious offences, because they can get off with no punishment, then it is obvious that this misuse of beneficial power is a means on the contrary, of increasing crime. It may well be that many a young man who would have lived a virtuous life, had he been certain that his first offence, if serious, would meet with due punishment, may be led by the expectation that he will, even if detected, escape with no punishment, into a criminal course of life. He has already the chance, that his first efforts may be undetected. It is therefore at least necessary in dealing with the first offender to see that the crime he has committed does not indicate that he is rather a fortunate habitual than a real first offender. Magistrates should be very careful to consider the wording of the section and should not allow themselves to be misled into the use of the section by misplaced leniency and sympathy, 27 Cr. L.J. 309=92 Ind. Cas. 693. In order to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to act under this section, there must co-exist two conditions precedent (1) there must not be any previous conviction, i.e., the accused must be a first offender (2) the offence for which he is convicted must be one of these offences specified in the section, 28 Cr. L.J. 235=100 Ind. Cas. 127. If these conditions are fulfilled the Court has jurisdiction to act under this section in the exercise of its discretion but in exercising its discretion the Court must have regard to the points specified in the section, viz., the youth, character and antecedents of the offender, to the trivial character of the offence and to any extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed. The intention of the Legislature is not to make it essential that the offender must be young, that the offence must be trivial and there must be extenuating circumstances but merely to indicate the lines on which the Court's discretion should be exercised, 2 L.B.R. 65 (F.B.)=1 Cr. L.J. 538. See also 6 C.W.N. ccliv. In 15 C.W.N. cii, the Kulna Gang Case the Special Tribunal acted under this section and released the accused who pleaded guilty. The first essential for the application of this section is that the offender is to be a first offender and if he is one, the extenuating considerations which entitle him to indulgence are his age, character and antecedents, 2 Bom. L.R. 817. See also 30 C.W.N. 373=43 C.L.J. 79=27 Cr. L.J. 409=93 Ind. Cas. 73, where the accused, a widow of 45 years old, and a mere puppet in the hands of the other accused in the case who was convicted for an offence under S. 82 of the Registration Act was held entitled to the benefit of this section and was released on her entering into a bond with one surety for rupees one hundred. The section is headed "first offenders" and is intended primarily for first offenders but the words of the section "and no previous conviction is proved against him" seem to include the idea an inquisition into the past of the accused. Where as a matter of fact an accused person had a conviction 20 years ago which was not proved at the trial, the order passed under this section cannot be said to be unwarranted, 26 Cr. L.J. 1278=88 Ind. Cas. 1034; if the person is not under 21 years, the conviction is to be for an offence punishable with imprisonment for not more than seven years and if the person is under 21 years or a woman the conviction is to be for an offence not punishable with death or transportation for life. On a proper construction of this section a first offender, provided the other provisions of the section apply, is entitled to the benefit of the section even when without such provision the Magistrate would be obliged to pass a sentence of imprisonment. Any other construction would entirely nullify in a great number of cases the provisions of this section, 27 Bom. L.R. 111=26 Cr. L.J. 694=86 Ind. Cas. 70. An order under this section directing release upon probation of good conduct cannot be said to be a punishment coming within S. 53, I.P.C., which specifies different kinds of punishments known to law. What is done in such a case is that the sentence of punishment is postponed and something which is not a punishment is substituted for it, i.e., the convicted person is required to enter into a recognizance with or without sureties and in the meanwhile to keep the peace and be of good behaviour, 24 Cr. L.J. 738=74 Ind. Cas. 66. Before passing an order under this section the Magistrate must satisfy himself that the accused is in a position to furnish security having regard to the provisions of S. 564, infra; S. 123, supra, applies to Ss. 106 and 118 and not to this section, 2 Ran. 380. The sending of first youthful offenders whose antecedents are not shown to be bad, to ordinary jails has the effects of making them hardened criminals after they are discharged from such jails. Their association with all classes of offenders has a very unhealthy influence on them. The scope of the section has recently been widened. The provisions of this section and those of the Reformatory Schools Act should be resorted to by Magistrates when sentencing first youthful offenders, 27 Cr. L.J. 934=96 Ind. Cas. 390. This section does not apply to an offence under S. 457 (2) I.P.O. 28 Cr. L.J. 759=103 Ind. Cas. 839. When an Act gives special power that power must be limited to the purpose for which it is confined, (12 M. 297 at 300) and it is a well known established principle that jurisdiction must be exercised strictly in accordance with the provisions of the statute which create it, (7 C. 157 at 160). Moreover Courts in this country have repeatedly laid down that it is an evasion of the law to treat an aggravated offence as an ordinary one and thus introduce a different jurisdiction or a lower scale of punishment. It may well be that the list of offences in this section might have been longer with advantage to the best interests of the society but the Courts must stop where the Legislature has stopped, 7 Cr. L.J. 319 at 320. This section cannot apply to a case falling under S. 411, I.P.O., even when the accused was 19 years old and the offence was his first offence, 1923 Pat. 237 ; 25 Cr. L.J. 419=83 Ind. Cas. 35. This section will not apply when an accused person has not only been convicted, but also been sentenced by the Court 17 A.L.J. 426=20 Cr. L.J. 332=50 Ind. Cas. 1030. The provisions of this section should not be applied to an accused who was convicted of conspiracy to possess firearms and ammunition though the accused was a law student belonging to a respectable family and a first offender, 31 C.W.N. 239=23 Cr. L.J. 241 (2)=100 Ind. Cas. 113 (2). This section applies only to offences under the I.P.O. and not to other offences under special or local laws, 52 B. 252 not does it apply to an offence under the Indian Stamp Act, 25 A.L.J. 401=23 Cr. L.J. 166=99 Ind. Cas. 593 or to an offence under S. 407 I.P.O. breach of trust by a public servant punishable with transportation for life, 28 Cr. L.J. 257=100 Ind. Cas. 225. Before passing an order under this section the Magistrate should satisfy himself that the accused is in a position to furnish the required security. Where however an order under this section has been passed but the accused fails to furnish the security, the proper course is to pass a sentence on him according to law, 2 Ran. 360. A person released on probation of good conduct cannot be ordered to pay compensation to the complainant and such an order is obviously illegal 29 Cr. L.J. 38=106 Ind. Cas. 454.

Offence punishable with imprisonment.—The Legislature in using these words must be taken to contemplate an offence primarily punishable with imprisonment. Had it been intended, that an offence punishable with fine only should also be within the scope of this sub-section, they would have added some such words as "or of an offence punishable with fine only," which is an expression constantly used (see for instance S. 67, I.P.C.). Further the use of the word "released" in this sub-section points to the object of the section being to prevent an offenders' committal to jail, in the circumstances mentioned in the sub-section, and that it was not intended to cover cases where the offender is merely ordered to pay a fine. Therefore in the absence of words which clearly show that an offence punishable with fine only, even though there is imprisonment in default of payment of fine, comes within this sub-section, such an order is illegal, 28 Bom. L.R. 1031=27 Cr. L.J. 1158=97 Ind. Cas. 752.

Not punishable with death or transportation for life.—When a person is convicted of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life he cannot be dealt with under this section. Even in a case where one of the alternative punishments for the offence, say, under S. 307 I.P.C., is transportation for life it is obvious that this section is inapplicable and the accused must be sentenced to rigorous imprisonment, 30 Cr. L.J. 789=117 Ind. Cas. 239.

No previous conviction is proved against the offender.—This section contemplates the use of previous convictions (not necessarily convictions for the same offence of which the person has just been convicted) to affect the question of sentence. It is legal to prove a previous conviction in order to show that the convicted person cannot avoid being sentenced, 58 M.L.J. 595 at 587=1929 M.W.N. 393=29 L.W. 191=30 Cr. L.J. 471=115 Ind. Cas. 483. S. 511 infra as to the mode of proving previous convictions.

Court before which he is convicted.—The intention of the Legislature in using these words is not to limit the power of making orders under this section to the Court of first instance. The proviso to the section appears to be inconsistent with the view that this was the intention of the Legislature. The appellate Court therefore when disposing of an appeal has jurisdiction to pass an order under this section. 29 H. 567 following; 24 A. 326. A formal conviction must be recorded by the Court before invoking the provisions of this section. See 1 Bom. L.R. 557; when an accused person is not only convicted but also sentenced this section becomes inapplicable. 17 A.L.J. 425=20 Cr. L.J. 352=50 Ind. Cas. 1200.

Instead of sentencing him.—In view of the wording of this section, it is illegal to impose a fine on the accused when an order under this section is passed releasing him on probation of good conduct on his entering into a bond with or without sureties, 5 Lab. 722.

To appear and receive sentence when called upon.—It is not necessary or proper to fix a date under this section on which the accused should come up for receiving sentence. He is merely required to appear and receive sentence when called upon. S. 563, infra, explains how and when he is eventually to be brought up before the Court for receiving sentence. It is only when an accused person who has been ordered to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for a specified period, does not observe the conditions of his recognizance within the period, that the provisions of S. 563, infra, will have to be followed calling upon the accused to appear before the Court for receiving sentence, 2 Bom. L.R. 702.

Release on his entering into a bond with or without sureties.—The third proviso to S. 112, supra, which enacts that a minor's bond for keeping the peace or good behaviour shall be executed only by his sureties, is not applicable to bonds taken under this section enacted for the benefit of youthful offenders. To introduce proviso (7) of S. 112, supra, into this section is to give a forced and unnatural construction to the words of the section. It must be presumed that the omission was intentional. Under this section a minor may himself execute a bond, as the language used is "on his entering into a bond with or without sureties, 6 Cr. L.J. 125=1 L.B.R. 12; 2 L.B.R. 185.

When called upon.—An accused person cannot be put merely on personal recognizance by the Magistrate. All that a Magistrate is authorised to do under this section is to require the accused to appear before him and receive the sentence when called upon to do so on the happening of the event contemplated by the next section, viz., when the offender fails to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance and, in the meanwhile to keep the peace and be of good behaviour. 2 Bom. L.R. 112. A Magistrate cannot direct the accused to appear on a day certain to receive sentence when taking a bond from him under this section. All that he can do is to release him on probation of good conduct for a fixed period and direct his appearance to receive sentence when called upon, 2 Bom. L.R. 702.

Proviso to Sub-section (11).—This proviso governs sub-section (1A) also 30 Cr. L.J. 270 (11=113 Ind. Cas. 311 where 27 Bom. L.R. 1115=25 Cr. L.J. 1431=63 Ind. Cas. 1123 is followed and 47 A. 353 is not followed. The procedure to be followed in cases submitted to superior Magistrates by Magistrates not empowered to act under this section is laid down in S. 380, supra; see notes under S. 380 at pages 697-698. The superior Magistrate is empowered to pass such sentence or make such order as he might have passed or made if the case had originally been heard by him and he is also empowered to direct further inquiry or to direct additional evidence being taken or he may himself make such further inquiry or take such additional evidence if he thinks fit. The words "make such order as he might have made if the case had originally been heard by him" clearly suggest that the Magistrate is entitled to accept an accused who having been convicted by a Magistrate not empowered to take action under this section submit the case for order to a superior Magistrate. 15 Cr. L.J. 233=25 Ind. Cas. 653. See the similar provision in S. 340, supra, where it was held that a Magistrate cannot return the records to the inferior Magistrate, but must himself pass such judgment, order or sentence as he thinks fit according to law. See notes at pp. 653-654. The superior Magistrate may also have power when sentencing an accused to demand security to keep the peace under S. 306, supra. But there are no decided cases on this point. It is incompetent for a second class Magistrate to pass an order under this section himself. He should submit the case to a Magistrate of the first class or a Sub-Divisional Magistrate for order with his report that he is of opinion that the case is a fit case for the exercise of powers under this section, 5 Lah. 36, but this decision was dissented from in 8 Lah. 33, where it was pointed out that all second class Magistrates in the Punjab are specially empowered by Gout. Not., No. 431 of 1910. The terms of the sub-section are wide and the Court is to take into account the character and antecedents of the accused 25 Cr. L.J. 1278=88 Ind. Cas. 1054; 28 Cr. L.J. 235=100 Ind. Cas. 127.

Sub-section (1A).—This was newly added by Act XXXVII of 1923 in accordance with the recommendations of the Indian Jails Committee and permits a first offender to be released after due admonition, a provision which did not exist before. This sub-section only applies to certain limited class of cases such as theft, etc., under the Indian Penal Code. Consequently it does not apply to offences under as totally different act such as the Motor Vehicles Act. The words of the sub-section are plain and effect must be given to them. Whether the sub-section should not be extended so as to cover less serious offences than those mentioned in the sub-section is a matter for the Legislature. If a Magistrate wishes to pass a nominal sentence there are other means of doing so than the one adopted, viz., release after due admonition. The High Court in the exercise of revisional powers set aside the order passed under this sub-section and sentenced each of the taxi-drivers found guilty under the Motor Vehicles Act to a fine of rupees five, 23 Bom. L.R. 297=27 Cr. L.J. 528=93 Ind. Cas. 992. The provisions of this section do not apply to offences under the Stamp Act and no order can be passed warning the accused not to do so in the future, 25 A.L.J. 401=2 Cr. L.J. 166=99 Ind. Cas. 593, nor does it apply to cases under the City Municipal Act but is confined to offences under the I.P.C., and the Magistrate when convicting the accused has no power to warn and discharge him analogous to admonition under this section but must pass sentence according to law, 52 B. 230 where 28 Bom. L.R. 297 is referred to. The case will not fall under sub-section (1) as the offence is punishable with fine only and not imprisonment. Admonition is a judicial reprimand, a censure of the Judge and a warning that in case of repetition he will be punished severely in accordance with law. It is unfortunate that when this sub-section was added to the section by the new amendment the Legislature did not place it before the proviso. Ordinarily speaking when a proviso governs the whole of the provision of the section it ought to come in the end. The proviso says that where any first offender is convicted by any Magistrate of the third or second class not specially empowered by the Local Government, the Magistrate shall record his opinion that the power conferred by this section should be exercised and submit his proceedings to a superior Magistrate forwarding the accused or taking bail for his appearance before such Magistrate who shall dispose of the case as provided by S. 380, supra. Before this sub-section was enacted there was no power to release the offender after due admonition. That power undoubtedly is one under this section and although the proviso comes now in the middle of the section that fact does not affect the competency of third class Magistrates to exercise the powers granted under this sub-section. A third class Magistrate when he finds an accused guilty and discharges the accused after giving admonition under this sub-section, on account of his tender age acts without jurisdiction and must submit the proceedings to the superior Magistrate and the High Court is competent to review a third class Magistrate's order discharging the accused on admonition, 27 Bom. L.R. 1019=26 Cr. L.J. 1461=89 Ind. Cas. 1029, but see 47 A. 353, where it is held that the power under sub-section (1A) is exercisable by a second class Magistrate. Where a case could not by any stretch of language of this sub-section be brought within the four corners thereof, the High Court in revision set aside the order and imposed on the accused a substantive term of rigorous imprisonment for one year, 53 C. 417.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section is new and is in accordance with the decisions in 24 A. 306 followed in 29 M. 567. The effect of the order of the High Court when releasing an offender on probation of good conduct is to set aside the sentence passed on the accused and when the accused fails to furnish the security as directed by the Court, the Code is silent as to what the consequence is. The proper view to take in such a case is to consider the accused to be convicted by the Magistrate but not sentenced to punishment and produced before the Court for suitable punishment, 21 L.W. 49=25 Cr. L.J. 633=86 Ind. Cas. 59.

Sub-section (3).—The rulings in 20 Cr. L.J. 99=48 Ind. Cas. 979; 37 A. 31 and which hold that the High Court cannot substitute a sentence of imprisonment or whipping in revision are no longer law by reason of this new sub-section which empowers the High Court when exercising its powers as an Appellate or Revisional Court to set aside an order made under this section and in lieu thereof pass sentence of imprisonment on such offender according to law, 24 A.L.J. 228=27 Cr. L.J. 303=92 Ind. Cas. 591. But unlike its powers under S. 439, supra, the High Court cannot inflict a greater punishment than might have been inflicted by the original Court.

Appeal and revision.—An appeal lies against an order under this section in a summary trial notwithstanding the provisions of S. 414, supra. The order passed is not sentence within S. 414, 46 A. 828, see also 4 Cr. L. Rev. 480; 37 A. 31 at 33; 52 G. 483 followed in 28 Bom L.R. 671 27 Cr. L.J. 873=96 Ind. Cas. 121, but the order is not a punishment as punishment is only postponed, 24 Cr. L.J. 738=74 Ind. Cas. 66. There is authority for holding that even where a judgment of conviction has not been actually given, there is a conviction. Archbold, Cr. Pl. Ev. & Pr. pp. 250 and 223. The High Court is not bound to interfere in revision even where the order passed is illegal, 27 Cr. L.J. 624=94 Ind. Cas. 368 where 11 Cr. L.J. 389=6 Ind. Cas. 639 and 4 Cr. L.J. 75 is followed. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 822=111 Ind. Cas. 326, following 4 Cr. L.J. 75. Where the Magistrate in the exercise of his discretion and taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case releases an offender under this section the High Court will be slow to interfere. 28 Cr. L.J. 255=99 Ind. Cas. 127. Although the circumstances of a case were such that a term of imprisonment might well have been awarded by the trying Magistrate, still where the Magistrate in the exercise of his discretion has given the benefit to the accused under this section, the High Court in revision will not lightly interfere with the order especially after the lapse of a long time, 29 Cr. L.J. 291=107 Ind. Cas. 775. The High Court can interfere with an order and set it aside even in a case where the accused had not moved it, 13 Cr. L.J. 476=15 Ind. Cas. 316. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 259=107 Ind. Cas. 529, where the High Court interfered with the order admonishing certain boys when in revision preferred by others who had been sentenced to fine found that no offence had been committed and then acquitted them. In 55 G. 417 the High Court set aside the order of the trial Court and sentenced the accused to one year's rigorous imprisonment.

563. (1) If the Court which convicted the offender, or a Court which could have dealt with the offender in respect of his original offence, is satisfied that the offender has failed to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance, it may issue a warrant for his apprehension.

Provision in case of offender failing to observe conditions of his recognizances.

(2) An offender, when apprehended on any such warrant, shall be brought forthwith before the Court issuing the warrant, and such Court may either remand him in custody until the case is heard, or admit him to bail with a sufficient surety conditioned on his appearing for sentence. Such Court may, after hearing the case, pass sentence.

Power to issue a warrant of arrest for the apprehension of a first offender under this section is not given to Magistrates generally but is confined to the Court which convicted the offender or to the Court which could have dealt with the offender in respect of his original offences. See Probation of Offenders Act 1907 (7 Edw. 7 Ch. 17, S. 6) which provides for cases where the offender fails to observe the conditions of release.

564. (1) The Court, before directing the release of an offender under section 562, sub-section* (1) shall be satisfied that the offender or his surety (if any) has a fixed place of abode or regular occupation in the place for which the Court acts, or in which the offender is likely to live during the period named for the observance of the conditions.

(2) Nothing in this section or in sections 562 and 563 shall affect the provisions of section 31 of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897.

An order under sub-section (1) passed by a Sub-divisional Magistrate under the provisions of S. 390, supra, would be clearly appealable under S. 407, supra, S. 408, supra, gives a right of appeal to a person convicted on a trial by an Assistant Sessions Judge, a District Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class and from a sentence passed under S. 349, supra, by a Magistrate of the first class or an order (which is not a sentence), passed by a Magistrate of the first class under S. 390, supra. Such an order may exclude an order under this sub-section. Section 408, supra, is controlled by two sub-sections (b) and (c), sub-section (a) having now been deleted. These two sub-sections contained in the proviso do not curtail the right of appeal given by the section itself, but makes exceptions as to the venue of appeal which ordinarily lies to the Court of Session in cases specifically mentioned in provisos (b) and (c). The rights conferred by Ss. 407 and 408 are only restricted by Ss. 412, 413 and 414 and subject to the provisions of S. 415 which is a proviso to Ss. 413 and 414. This interpretation may lead to certain anomalies but a contrary view leads to absurdities of not less serious nature. A person against whom an order under S. 562 (1) has been passed will have one appeal in the first instance and possibly a second one when an order is passed sentencing him under S. 563 (2). The general tendency of the Amending Act of 1923 has been to enlarge rather than to curtail the right of appeal in favour of the accused person. Several orders not appealable before have been made so now. An appeal lies on behalf of convicted persons against whom an order under this section was made, 52 C. 463 where 37 A. 31; 18 Cr. L.J. 401=38 Ind. Cas. 561; 1 Cr. L.J. 543 and 1028 are referred to.

Section 31 of the Reformatory Schools Act, refers to the power of Court to deal with youthful offenders including girls by discharging them after due admonition or deliver them to their parent or guardian or near relative taking a bond to be responsible for the good behaviour of the offenders.

565. (1) When any person having been convicted—

(a) by a Court in British India of an offence punishable under section 215, section 489A, section 489B, section 489C, or section 489D of the Indian Penal Code, or of any offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of that Code, with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, or

(b) by a Court or Tribunal in the territories of any Prince or State in India acting under the general or special authority of the Governor General in Council, or of any Local Government, of any offence which would, if committed in British India, have been punishable under any of the aforesaid Sections or Chapters of the Indian Penal Code with like imprisonment for a like term, is again convicted of any offence punishable under any of those Sections or Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards by a High Court, Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or of first class, such

Court or Magistrate may, if it or he thinks fit, at the time of passing sentence of transportation or imprisonment on such person, also order that his residence and any change of or absence from such residence after release be notified as hereinafter provided for a term not exceeding five years from the date of the expiration of such sentence.

(2) If such conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, such order shall become void.

(3) The Local Government may make rules to carry out the provisions of this section relating to the notification of residence or change or absence from residence by released convicts.

(4) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

(5) Any person against whom an order has been made under this section and who refuses or neglects to comply with any rule so made shall be deemed within the meaning of section 176 of the Indian Penal Code to have omitted to give a notice required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence.

(6) Any person charged with a breach of any such rule may be tried by a Magistrate of competent jurisdiction in the district in which the place last notified by him as his place of residence is situated.

Amendment.—This section has been re drafted. In sub-section (1), S. 215 and Ss. 489A to 489D have been added. Sub-section (4) empowers the appellate Court and the High Court in revision to pass orders under this section. By the addition in sub-section (5) failure to notify will be deemed to be omission to give information for the prevention of the commission of an offence. Sub-section (6) provides the place for trial for breach of rules.

Object of the section.—This section imposes a duty on a habitual offender when released from jail to give notice of his residence to the police in order that they may know his movements with certainty. This section must be construed strictly and it must be taken that the Court's power is limited to cases specifically described therein and does not specifically extend to cases where the Court instead of passing sentence of transportation or imprisonment passes a sentence of whipping, 35 B. 137. The object is that the person may be kept under police surveillance with a view to preventing him from committing further offences, 31 M. 548 at 550. This section presupposes the previous convictions of the accused, 8 M.L.T. 352—(1910) M.W.N. 567=11 Cr. L.J. 636=8 Ind. Cas. 300, but not to a conviction for attempt. The law apparently assumes that a person convicted twice is likely to commit further crimes. The notice to the police is therefore introduced as a deterrent and in the majority of cases it undoubtedly acts as such. The residence of such men are frequently visited by the police and if he happens to have been away from home at the time of the occurrence of the crime in the locality they stand a fair chance of being suspected of being concerned in the crime. The conviction need not be for an offence of the same kind as before, because the expression "of the same kind" has been omitted. The sentence must be one of transportation or imprisonment and cannot be one of whipping, 35 B. 137. An order under this section to notify address after release from jail though a punishment in the general sense is not such a punishment as is meant by the words of S. 221 (7) supra, the provisions of which section do not apply to an order under the section which can legally be passed without previous convictions having been specifically set out in the charge, 14 Cr. L.J. 390=20 Ind. Cas. 214.

Sub-section (1).—The order must be passed at the time of passing the sentence. The previous conviction must be by a Court in British India or by a Court in the territories of any Prince or State in India acting under the authority of Government which if committed in British India would be punishable under the Penal Code.

Sub-section (3).—For rules relating to notifications of residence by released convicts, see for Madras G.O. No. 940, dated 15-6-1904, Fort St. George Gazette, 1904, Part I, P. 576. See also Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. Rule 130 (1). The convict is to state before his release to the Jailor the place, naming the town or village and street at which he intends to reside after release and within 24 hours after his arrival at his residence to notify at the nearest police station that he has taken up his residence accordingly. (2) Intention to change residence should be notified at the nearest police station not less than 2 days before making the change, giving the name of the village or town and street in which he intends to reside and notify within 24 hours his arrival at the changed residence. (3) The convict shall notify his intention to absent himself from his residence between sunset and sunrise stating the time and purpose of his absence and his exact address where he can be found then. (4) Notice as required above is to be given in person unless prevented by illness or other sufficient cause in which case notice may be sent by letter duly signed by him or by an authorised agent and whenever such notice is given the convict shall be furnished with a certificate of having given notice by the officer to whom the notice is given (5) Before release, a copy of the rules in English and in the Vernacular shall be given to the convict and substance thereof fully explained to him in his own language. He shall also be informed that he is bound to observe the rules and any neglect or failure will render himself liable to be punished under S. 176, I.P.C.

Sub-section (4).—This sub-section is new. The appellate Court or a Court of revision is now empowered to pass an order under this section.

Sub-section (5).—It was held in 31 M. 543 that non-compliance was punishable under first part of S. 176, I.P.C. See also 2 Cr.L.J. 745 but by the new amendment, cases under this sub-section fall under the second part of S. 176 I.P.C., viz., omission to give notice required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence which is a more serious offence. It was held before, that information required to be given under sub-section (4) of this section cannot be said to be required for the purpose of preventing the commission of any particular offence, though it may be required for the purpose of preventing the commission of offences generally and allowed to be dealt with under the first part of S. 176, I.P.C., 31 M 543 where 15 C. 385 is referred to, but this is no longer law. A person is bound under this section merely to notify his residence or change of residence after his release. As long as he retains his residence in the same place, his temporary absence from his home for a day or two does not require notification. Whether he retains his residence or not must always be a question of fact. But provided a man leaves his family and household effects in the house in which he was residing he would ordinarily be considered to retain his residence. From an absence for a single night it cannot be said that he changed his residence and made himself liable to be dealt with under S. 176, I.P.C., 43 M. 783 at 790.
